Butter—Arrivals of butter are showing greater quantities and quality is remarked as good. The closing down of cheese factories has not yet reflected fully on butter making. It is expected that at an early date creameries will be in full working with somewhat easier quotations. We quote:

Cheese—The domestic cheese market has shown considerable strength since our last report, advancing some two or three points. There is apparently no definite reason for this, as there has not been any very great movement in demand, either as regards domestic or export trade. It would appear to be more of the character of a market spurt at the closing of the factories as the board reports also show a firmer and advancing tendency. We quote:

Provisions— The market continues steady with fair business in all lines.

Hams are reported easier as supplies are heavy.

Poultry—The mild weather that has prevailed during the past ten days has had an effect of curtailing shipments of all kinds of poultry.

Turkeys are scarce, but this is attributed to the fact that American buyers in different parts of the country are picking up supplies for the United States Thanksgiving Day, which falls towards the end of this month. Turkeys are quoted at 14c., extra fine 14 1-2c. Geese have a fair demand at 9c. to 10c.

Ducks are in short supply and selling from 12 1-2c. to 13 1-2c.

Chickens are plentiful at 10c. to 12c. and fowls from 9c. to 10c.

Butter—The market has shown an improvement this week. This is due more to local demand than foreign inquiry. Export orders are light. The belief that stocks of all kinds of butter are light on this market is strengthening the prices here. Rally fancy makes are unobtainable at less than 23 1-2c. Good to fine creamery is firm at 22 1-2c. to 23c., and choice at 23 1-4c. Dealers generally are of the opinion that stocks held here are only equal to the local demand and are using this as an argument for maintaining firm prices.

Eggs—A good trade is reported locally for eggs. The export demand is also unusually good. The English demand is heavy and shippers are kept hustling to get them out before close of navigation. Straight gathered No. 1 are quoted at 21c.; No. 2, 19c. to 20c.; and select fresh, 24c. to 25c.; some pickled eggs are selling locally, Montreal lined at 20c. to 21c. and Western, 19c. to 20c.

Cheese—The market is firm. Quebecs are selling at 11 3-4c. to 11 7-8c. and Townships 11 7-8c. to 12c. and 12c. to 12 1-8c. for Ontarios. The high price of 12c. was paid on the Brockville board this week and this appears to be an indication of the general feeling on the various boards. The local demand is steady. Export business is on the quiet side.

WINNIPEG.

Creamery Butter— As predicted last week, there has been a sharp advance in the price of creamery butter. Since last issue went to press the price has advanced 2c. per lb. The reason is to be found in the small supplies on hand and the brisk dmand. Selling prices to the trade are now quoted as follows:

Finest fresh creamery, in 56-lb. boxes	0 26
" " in 28-lb. boxes	0 26
" " in 14-lb. boxes	0 26

VANCOUVER, B.C.

Produce—The interesting little Canadian hen, such of her as lives and thrives in B.C. is on strike still, and the result is that in spite of the balmiest kind of weather, like Indian Summer carried over into November, the price of real, strictly fresh eggs, guaranteed is up to 60c. and more takers than sellers. So few are offering that 75c. could easily be obtained. Case stock of various grades from good to indifferent are on the market, and good quality brings as high as 30c.

Butter—Is in fair supply locally, with sufficient from the Northwest to meet all demands, at unchanged prices.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Provisions—Barrel pork is rather higher. There is a good sale at this season. Domestic mess, which is preferred, has been very scarce, but is somewhat more freely offered. American has one advantage, it can be used for ship stores in bond and so is well below domestic. Considerable American beef is also sold in this way.

American pure lard is a larger stock here than for years, Canadian is, however, preferred. It is very scarce. Refined lard continues low.

Fresh butter still somewhat dull.

Mutton is low. With the coming of the winter port steamers there will be a better sale.

IMPORTANT LEGAL DECISION.

A DECISION was recently given by Judge Klein, which will be of interest to shippers who sell at a price "freight prepaid."

A Torooto wholesale paint and oil firm sold a barrel of linseed oil to their customer in the west, and it was shipped in good order, but arrived at destination leaking. The consignee refused to accept or pay for the oil, insisting that the shippers should deliver him the full number of gallons invoiced. The firm who sold the goods contended that they delivered the barrel to the railway company full and in good order, and that if there was leakage it was the fault of rough handling by the carriers, and that the claim for shortage was a matter for the purchaser and the railway company to settle between themselves. The barrel of oil was, in the meantime, lying in the railway freight shed at destination and the contents leaking out. Finally the case was tried in court, and the judge decided that the consignee should pay the full amount of invoice and all costs incurred in the action.

BEE-KEEPERS MEET.

The Middlesex Beekeepers' Association held their annual meeting recently in London, for the election of officers for the coming year and the discussion of matters interesting to the beekeepers.

Mr. R. H. Smith, of St. Thomas, is the president of the association, and Mr. E. T. Barnard secretary.

Some idea of the extent of the bee industry in that part of Ontario may be gathered from the fact that in a radius of about ten or twelve miles between London and Port Stanley, 4 tons, or about 95,000 pounds, of honey was secured by the beekeepers this year. One dealer alone in Brantford obtained 59,000 pounds from his apiary.

The great market for the honey is in the Northwest. Much of it is sold to local dealers, and to Toronto firms, but the Northwest claims the greater part of it, by reason largely of the high price that is paid for it there.

Some Manitoba honey was exhibited in London, Ont., recently, but it does not come up to the Ontario standard.

The total number of boxes of cheese taken from the farmers during the year was 2,631,767, at a price to the farmer of 10 cents a pound, or a total value of $21,077,600.

SALE OF GOWANS, KENT & CO., THE WELL KNOWN CROCKERY HOUSE.

A STRONG combination of Montreal capitalists has been formed for the purpose of securing better control of the wholesale trade in crockery and glassware, and the old-fashioned and well-known firm of Gowans, Kent & Co., of Front street east, has passed out of existence, so far as its present partners are concerned. There will be little change, however, affecting the general public, as the business will be conducted in the same place under the style of Gowans, Kent & Co., Limited, a joint stock company having been incorporated at Ottawa with a capital stock of half a million dollars for the purpose of taking over the establishment. The names of the incorporators are given as James G. Kent, John G. Kent, R. W. McClain and S. C. Smoke, of Toronto, and Douglas Armour, of Montreal. The three persons first mentioned, however, were members of the old firm, and their interests have been entirely purchased by the new concern, none of them retaining the slightest financial interest. The last-mentioned gentlemen are well-known barristers, and are simply representing their clients at Ottawa and Montreal, pending the completion of the negotiations. The other member of the firm, Mr. Wm. K. Peterkin, is at present in Europe, but his consent was obtained to the disposal of his share at the price agreed upon by his associates. The price paid for the stock and good will of the old company is understood to be upwards of half a million dollars, although no positive information could be secured as to the exact amount. It is also understood that the Montreal capitalists concerned are closely allied with the A. T. Wiley Company, of that city. The main object of the combination is to secure more points for distribution, by which an immense saving in freight rates can be effected, as well as a readjustment of the territory covered by travelers which will prevent overlapping. The Winnipeg house of Gowans, Kent & Co. is included in the deal, and it will be the headquarters of the new company for the west.

The Original Building—Gowans, Kent & Co., Toronto.

The Present Premises—Gowans, Kent & Co., Toronto.

One of the conditions of the sale is said to be an agreement by the members of the present partnership that they will not engage in any similar business for a period of four years from the date of the transfer. This will further restrict the number of firms engaged in the wholesale crockery business, which of late years has become confined to only a few concerns. Some few years ago there were fifteen or sixteen firms in the trade, but they have been drawing out gradually, until now there are but few left, about one in each of the largest cities of the Dominion. The last to withdraw was that of McMahon, Broadfield & Co., which did not resume business after the big fire of two years ago.

We give herewith a picture of the original premises in Toronto of Gowans, Kent & Co., and also a picture of the present premises at Toronto.

NEW INCORPORATION.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that under the Companies Act, 1902, letters patent have been issued bearing date of 31st day of October, 1905, incorporating James Gowans Kent, merchant, John Gowans Kent, merchant, Robert Watson McClain, merchant, and Samuel Clements Smoke, barrister-at-law, all of the City of Toronto, in the County of York, and Province of Ontario, and Douglas Armour, advocate, of the City of Montreal, in the Province of Quebec,

To acquire and take over as a going concern the business now being carried on at and from the Cities of Toronto and Winnipeg by James Gowans Kent and others in partnership as wholesale crockery and china merchants, glass cutters and decorators of china, glass and earthenware under the firm name and style of Gowans, Kent & Company, and all the property, assets, rights, credits and effects thereof, including the good will of the said business, and to undertake the liabilities of the said Gowans, Kent & Company in respect thereof, and to carry on and extend the said business ;

The operations of the company to be carried on throughout the Dominion of Canada and elsewhere by the name of Gowans, Kent & Co., Limited, with a total capital stock of five hundred thousand dollars, divided into five thousand shares of one hundred dollars, and the chief place of business of the said company to be at the City of Toronto, in the Province of Ontario.

Dated at the office of the Secretary of State of Canada this 2nd day of November, 1905.

AN IMPORTANT CORRECTION.

IN the Special Fall and Xmas Goods number of the Canadian Grocer, a reference was made in the article entitled "The Bumper Crop and the Western Trade" to the Winnipeg Free Press' report of the season's wheat crop, and in it the yield was put at 90,000,000 bushels, whereas it is found that the Free Press estimate is in reality 80 to 85,000,000 bushels. In setting this error right we take the opportunity of quoting the report of the Free Press, as it will no doubt be of renewed interest to our readers.

Free Press Estimates Crop of 1905.

From time to time the question has been asked, "What is the Fress Press estimate of the wheat crop of 1905?"

On this the 28th day of September the Free Press announces its belief that the wheat crop of 1905 will be between 80,000,000 and 85,000,000 bushels, or on an average of 20 to 21 bushels per acre on an acreage of 4,000,000.

This may appear small in view of the constant reports of 25 and 30 bushel averages, but over against these high figures must be set 12 and 15 bushel averages which are known to exist, but which are not sent in for publication.

Looked at dispassionately, even 80,000,000 bushels is an enormous increase over last year in proportion to the acreage, and is moreover a higher average than has been produced in any year over so extended a territory.

The acreage estimate of the Manitoba and Territorial Governments is a little over three and three quarter millions, but the Fress Press considers this too low by at least 234,408 acres, although even that figure is an increase of 382,342 over the previous year. The Free Press estimate of 4,000,000 acres gives an increase of 616,150 over 1904 for wheat alone, or considerably more than half a million acres, an almost unprecedented record.

The yield of 20 or 21 bushels per acre, which now seems fairly assured, is greater by two bushels per acre than the average yield of Manitoba for twenty and the Territories for ten years.

In making estimates of average yields, it must be borne in mind that much of the land in Manitoba has been in crop from twelve to fifteen years and a goodly portion of it for twenty years. Southwestern Manitoba and Eastern Assiniboia got more rain than was good for them in June, and averages from these sections are not so high as the farmers looked for in August last when the Free Press crop correspondents were out.

Estimates, no matter how carefully made, are guesses, and because the Free Press guessed nearly right last year, it does not follow that it is right now, but if wrong, on the side of being below the yield, no one will be more delighted than the Free Press. The trouble about making estimates that are wildly in excess of the actual returns, at the end of the crop year, is the tendency to depress prices, at the time when the wheat is leaving the farmers' hands and in that way lessening his legitimate profit for his year's hard work.

Up to the present time there has been marketed at country elevators, 8,240,000 bushels, being 5,740,000 in C.P.R. elevators and 2,500,000 in C.N.R. elevators. Of this amount 4,420 cars, or 4,641,000 bushels, have been inspected as against 1,672 cars or 1,755,000 bushels last year. Of the wheat inspected 75 per cent. has been of contract grades, that is, No. 1 hard, No. 1 northern, and No. 2 northern, a showing that is calculated to make almost any wheat raising country green with envy.

Mr. J. W. Windsor, of Montreal, returned last Friday from Vancouver, via Portland, Ore., St. Paul and Chicago. He reports a splendid business both in the United States and Canada in all lines in which he is interested.

Quality Inside is Necessary to Repeat Sales Made by Appearance Outside

The appearance of an untried article to the customer's eye usually decides whether it is wanted or not. The neatness and wholesomeness of Crest Pickles (our new brand) make sales because they look good and again and again because they are good. Small cucumbers, plenty of cauliflower and onions, pickled in the best malt pickling vinegar, they have the taste and appearance of the best English goods. Packed in the usual size bottle — retails at 10 cents.

NO BAD DEBT.

A FRIEND of mine was recently returning by train from Buffalo. In the smoking room of the car were a number of commercial travelers who were engaged in discussing losses from bad accounts. During the conversation some were boasting how little their firm had lost through goods sold by them.

"You fellows may boast as you like," said my friend, whose identity was unknown to them, "but I am with a house in Toronto which does a business of $10,000,000 a year, and we never have a bad debt; never lose a cent."

The travelers looked at him with scorn, and one remarked: "What house are you with?"

"With the Customs House of Toronto," said he, "and we are always paid in advance."

"Well, by Jove, you have got us. Come and have something at my expense," said the traveler who had doubted the Customs House man's veracity. W. L. E.

PLENTY OF TIME.

A long-haired man walking along the street met a little boy, who asked him the time.

"Ten minutes to 9" replied the man.

"Well," said the boy, "at 9 o'clock get your hair cut," and he took to his heels and ran, the aggrieved one after him.

Turning the corner the man ran into a policeman, nearly knocking him over.

"What's up?" said the policeman.

The man very much out of breath said:

"You see that young urchin running along there? He asked me the time and I told him, 'Ten minutes to 9,' and he said 'At 9 o'clock get your hair cut.'"

"Well," said the policeman, "what are you running for? You've got eight minutes yet."

The Manager Advertising
Department THE CANADIAN GROCER:

Dear Sir,—

In sending you our advertisement to-day we do it with a feeling that every issue of your valuable paper brings us fresh results, and we are free to admit that yours as an advertising medium ranks amongst the foremost. Our trade has made wonderful strides, and many of the good customers recently added have borne evidence to the fact "that they saw your advertisement in THE CANADIAN GROCER." We hope, both for yourselves, and for the good that you are doing us, that this good work will continue and feel that the customers gotten through your journal will continue to have no cause to regret having felt disposed to commence business with us. Wishing you continued prosperity, we are

Why is it that a man who advertises the heaviest always has the biggest business? Ever notice it? And then there are some merchants who persist in saying that advertising doesn't pay.

To think that advertising indulged in for part of the year will leave a reminder in the minds of the public for the balance of the year is a besetting business sin.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto.

Dear Sirs:—

Our advertisement on page 74 of the special number of THE GROCER was of an assortment specially made up by us for that number, and we must say that we are more than pleased at the result of same. We have never had such a response before. We anticipated demand, but nothing like the demand which orders we are now receiving shows. If the direct result is so evident, we are convinced that the indirect will be widespread to our advantage.

Yours truly,

FAILURE OF SARDINE CATCH.

THE foreign sardine fisheries seem to be in a particularly bad way this season. We have several times drawn the attention of our readers to the disappointing reports from the French coasts, where the distress among the fishermen is approaching that of serious disaster, much akin to that experienced several years ago, when they had to be supported by public contributions.

From reliable sources we now learn that the Norwegian catch of sardines has proved totally inadequate to meet the demand this season, and that there is therefore going to be a considerable shortage.

The consumption of the dainty, toothsome sardine has made such strides of late years that to have the supply materially reduced will be disappointing. That prices will considerably advance is generally accepted.

ADVANTAGE OF THE COUNTER CHECK BOOK.

FROM time to time we have been brought face to face with the proposition as to what is really the simplest and best method for the grocer to adopt with regard to his counter books, especially where the grocer's trade is in a large measure a credit one.

From our observations from time to time, gathered from those who have given this matter practical testing, there seems to be no doubt but that the ordinary counter check book system, which has of late years made considerable headway in Canada, is the best for all purposes. These books are made in several patterns but the one which appears to be in favor with the grocers is a side opening book and is composed of a simple duplicating page which when used with the ordinary carbon sheet fulfils all that is necessary for accurate and economical book-keeping.

It is so arranged that the one sheet is usually torn off and handed to the customer or placed in the parcel with the goods, thus serving the purpose of a bill to the customer, and the attached leaf remains in the book as a permanent day-book record.

The book itself when filled can be numbered and dated and put on file for permanent reference. All that is necessary, therefore, for the book-keeper to do is to transfer the total of these entries to the customer's place in the ledger. It can easily be done during the spare moments throughout the day.

The immense amount of time saved by the use of these duplicating counter check books is obvious to any business man. The toil and worry which so many retail grocers give themselves at the close of each day in entering up the details of the customers' purchases from the usual counter scribbling book is entirely removed, beside which a degree of care is imbued into each assistant when he is compelled to make his final entry at once, which has a very salutary effect upon the clerk himself and is the forerunner of creating continual care in all his duties.

THE BANE OF TRADE.

IF you were to ask a number of the most progressive merchants in the country their opinion of the evils existing in trade, it is almost a certainty that nine out of ten would reply that the worst feature of the entire business is the credit system. More particularly is this the case in districts where the dealers are compelled to depend to a large extent on the farmers' trade. And perhaps the grocery stores are more peculiarly affected by this condition than those of any other trade, owing to their important dealings with the farming community.

How then is this evil to be dealt with? Is it possible for a country merchant to eradicate the credit abuse altogether? These are questions fraught with the greatest interests of the retail trade, and they must be approached very thoughtfully and very cautiously.

In the first place, the writer is of the opinion that it would be impossible for the dealer in a country town to altogether abolish the giving of credit, but by the exercise of prudence and tact — two qualities which are essential to the successful business man—he can at least adjust some of the difficulties that have been puzzling him. Moreover, in order to secure the best results, he will need all the determination he can muster, and he must not expect to see an immediate improvement in his affairs. Indeed, in some cases it may take two or even three years to accomplish his purpose. That will depend upon the man as well as his surroundings.

Perhaps you would like to turn to strictly cash selling. If so, you must be prepared to practically rebuild your business. Your constituency will probably be an almost entirely new one. You must appeal to a very different class of customers. Are you prepared to do this, to make such radical changes in your methods?

Again, you may decide to follow, regardless of consequences, some definite policy on credits, hereafter, and if you prove to be as good as your word, it is more than probable that you will lose some of your customers, and your business will need considerable re-shaping before you get back the trade you have lost.

There is, nevertheless, a feasible plan, and one which has been found successful in many cases. You must decide that you will collect your money earlier in the fall than you have been doing, and follow that plan persistently. When the crops have been harvested and the wheat exchanged for coin of the realm don't let your other store friends get in ahead of you, but wake up and act at once. Furthermore, when your country customers come to you for credit next spring be firm and courageous enough to tell them, with all possible tact, that you are expecting settlements on such and such a day in the fall. Then they will not be surprised when you call upon them to square their accounts, before they have had time to get rid of their year's earnings.

If you will but follow the policy thus portrayed with patience for a few years, you will be surprised at the additional respect you will command among your customers, and the additional respect they will feel for themselves. And you will perhaps notice, first of all, that you are being more respected by the wholesale trade. The jobbers have a not unnatural affection for the man who always takes his discounts, and this will be manifested in occasional "snaps" they will give you on odd lines, which will help you to draw trade.

Is this a pleasant picture? Would you like to enjoy the privileges of a cash buyer? Then show that you have determination and persistence, and that you can be tactful in your dealings with customers. Try our plan and see if it will not help you to put down the bane of trade.

THE LABELLING OF BREAD.

A GREAT deal of excitement is going on at the present moment in Montreal and other eastern cities with regard to the system in vogue of labeling bread with paper labels. It is asserted that the mucilage used is unwholesome and injurious to the health.

It is a great pity that those who are the instigators of such a report should not acquaint themselves more with the details of the baking business. Were they to do so they would soon discover that it is not necessary at all that any mucilage should be used.

In continental cities it has been the custom for many years to use these paper labels on all loaves baked in pans and no complaint has ever arisen. The fact is that many of these labels are printed on both sides with whatever matter it is desirable to have on them. The small square label is then simply thrown into the pan and naturally adheres to the dough while baking.

There is, however, a measure of care always necessary in regard to these labels, that they shall be printed in simple colors, so as to avoid any possibility of unwholesomeness which might occur were they printed in the more popular glaring colors.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY DISPUTE.

A DISPUTE has arisen between Newfoundland and the United States over the fishing rights on the coast of the Ancient Colony. The Gloucester fishermen have been permitted for some years to fish in the bays and within the three mile limit of the west coast. They are now to be excluded from the bays and from within the limit, and those whose interests are disadvantageously affected are enraged, and Washington has been invited to interfere to restore the lost privilege.

The United States fishermen appear to want everything for nothing, and desire the use of the Newfoundland fisheries without paying for them. The United States has rejected the treaty admitting Newfoundland fish on favorable terms, the colony is therefore perfectly right in its attitude. The only mistake it may have made was in conceding the privilege before the final decision with regard to the treaty was given.

CANADIAN RAILWAYS TO BE ELECTRIC.

AS regards the future of electricity in Canada in connection with railroads a die has been cast in its favor by the recommendation of Mr. Cecil B. Smith, chairman of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission, to equip the first section of the Temiskaming Railway, 100 miles, from North Bay to New Liskeard electrically. Mr. Smith has just returned from Europe, where he made a deep study of the question and only after due consideration was this recommendation made. This is the first instance of electricity being adopted for trunk lines in Canada. It is but a beginning. What the future holds out is almost beyond conjecture, but it is an assured fact that the next generation will see hundreds and even thousands of miles of Canada's trunk lines operated by electricity.

WESTERN SUGAR PRICES.

AS noted last week in our Winnipeg telegraphic despatches, an important change has gone into effect in the method of stating the prices of sugar in Manitoba. Up to the present time the prices for Manitoba points have been quoted in a long and imposing schedule giving different prices for sugar delivered at different points. In future all prices are to be quoted on the Winnipeg f.o.b. basis. Manitoba merchants will now buy their sugar at the Winnipeg prices and pay the freight charges to their own stations. It is true that sugar will be distributed from Brandon as formerly, but the Brandon price will be the Winnipeg price plus the freight.

It is stated by a leading wholesale man in Winnipeg that the change is much more than a mere matter of a change in the method of quoting the price. "It means higher prices in many parts of Manitoba," he remarked to The Grocer. "In some places it will mean an increase of 20c. per cwt. and in others the increase will be more than that."

LATEST WESTERN SUGAR PRICES.

As we go to press we are advised by wire of a further drop on all sugars of 10c. per hundred lbs. on Winnipeg basis.

AN UNNECESSARY WASTE.

NOT long ago a well known Canadian company requested Canadian Grocer to use the word limited after its name whenever it appeared in any issue of the paper. The request was complied with at the time, but in looking up the number of times where the word is used in the ordinary course of events it is found that there is a tremendous waste in using the word where it appears to be altogether unnecessary. In the department of industrial gossip in a recent issue the word limited appears thirty times in an ordinary page of reading matter, fully five lines being occupied in merely complying with a form. This is not the only waste, however, as there is the expense of making the dies, setting the type, etc. By leaving out the word the editor will have less labor to perform and will be able to insert a larger amount of news matter in the page than by complying with the ordinary form of using the word wherever the name of the firm appears. According to the law under which companies are registered, companies are compelled to use the word limited after their name in all official documents, in all advertisements and on all printed matter bearing the company's name. Where the word "company" is abbreviated the word "limited" must be spelled out, but where the word "company" is spelled out, "limited" can be abbreviated.

As it is necessary for an individual to know when he is doing business with a concern composed of a number of individuals whose liability is limited to the amount of their investment in the company's stock, it would seem to be a wise precaution to enforce the regulation calling for the use of the word wherever the company's name appears officially. In the U. S., however, where a larger number of companies are incorporated than in Canada, "limited" is not used to nearly so great an extent as in this country. There does not seem, therefore, the necessity for using the word in the ordinary course of newspaper writings, and Canadian Grocer will substitute commonsense for form in its reading columns in future, considering that this policy might well be adopted by other papers.

The art of saying nice things gracefully never goes out of fashion, never ceases to please, and is within the reach of the most humble.

THE NEW TRADING STAMP ACT

WE are in receipt of correspondence upon the subject of the new trading stamp Act, which came into force on the 1st of the present month. One retail merchant is much concerned as to the legality of continuing his premium system and writes us as follows :

Editor Canadian Grocer :

Dear Sir :—Will you kindly inform me if my premium scheme is illegal or not? I am uncertain as to using coupons or in fact premiums given as I do, and do not want to violate law. I bought my premiums wholesale, have them in stock, no third party interested, got out my own tickets and advertising matter, etc. I enclose samples to show more fully. Hoping I am not trespassing on your kindness too far, and thanking you in advance,

Yours truly,

We give herewith the full text of the Act as just passed by the Legislature. It would appear to be of the most drastic character, and seems to strike at the very foundation of everything approaching coupons, premiums or stamps :

An Act in amendment of the Criminal Code, 1892.

His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows :

1. The Criminal Code, 1892, is amended by inserting the following sections immediately after section 526 :

"(a) The expression 'trading stamps' includes, besides trading stamps commonly so called, any form of cash receipt, receipt, coupon, premium ticket or other device, designed or intended to be given to the purchaser of goods by the vendor thereof or his employe or agent, and to represent a discount on the price of such goods or a premium to the purchaser thereof, which is redeemable either

"(i) by any person other than the vendor, or the person from whom he purchased the goods, or the manufacturer of the goods, or

"(ii) by the vendor, or the person from whom he purchased the goods, or the manufacturer of the goods, or in cash or goods not his property, or not his exclusive property, or

"(iii) by the vendor elsewhere than in the premises where such goods are purchased, or which does not show upon its face the place of its delivery and the merchantable value thereof, or is not redeemable at any time ; but an offer, printed or marked by the manufacturer upon any wrapper, box, or receptacle in which the goods are sold, of a premium or reward for the return of such wrapper, box, or receptacle is not a trading stamp within the meaning of this section ;

"(b) The expression 'goods' means anything which is merchandise or the subject of trade or manufacture ;

"(c) The expression 'every one,' 'vendor,' 'purchaser,' 'merchant,' 'agent' or 'person' includes any partnership or company or body corporate.

"2. Every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to one year's imprisonment, and to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, who, by himself or his employe or agent, directly or indirectly, issues, gives, sells or otherwise disposes of, or offers to issue, give, sell or otherwise dispose of trading stamps to a merchant or dealer in goods for use in his business.

"3. Every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to six months' imprisonment, and to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars, who, being a merchant or dealer in goods, by himself or his employe or agent, directly or indirectly, gives or in any way disposes of, or offers to give or in any way dispose of trading stamps to a purchaser from him of any such goods.

"4. Every one is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding twenty dollars, who, being a purchaser of goods from a merchant or dealer in goods, directly or indirectly receives or takes trading stamps from the vendor of such goods or his employe or agent."

Any executive officer of a corporation or company guilty of an offence under subsection 2 or subsection 3 of the next preceding section who in any way aids or abets in or counsels or procures the commission of such offence, is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to the punishment stated in the said subsections respectively.

This Act shall not apply to any trading stamp issued by a manufacturer or vendor before the first day of November, one thousand nine hundred and five.

ADVERTISING IN THE COLONIES.

AT the October dinner of the Sphinx Club, in London, England, the subject, "Why Should we Advertise in the British Colonies?" was discussed. In referring to the matter the Engineering Times publishes the following :

"Mr. J. H. Turner, agent-general for British Columbia, said that there was no doubt that good advertising would tend to the advancement of British merchants in the colonies. British Columbia was increasing in population, had an excellent position on the Pacific, and must become an important part of Canada.

"Mr. J. W. Taverner, agent-general for Victoria, pointed out that the colonies were anxious to trade with the Mother Country. Germans and Americans, however, were very successful in getting hold of a large part of that trade. There was still a large field for British manufacturers, and it was the duty of people in Great Britain to do all they could to do business with their brethren across the seas.

"Mr. J. Howard, agent-general for Nova Scotia, said British manufacturers must advertise in order to counteract America's natural advantage of geographical position.

"Mr. J. E. Jenkins, agent-general for South Australia, thought advertisements must be of a nature to 'fetch the people.' The Americans were the best advertisers in the world. Australia wanted trade with Great Britain, but it was the best bargain which was most taking, and British manufacturers should see to it that their goods were the best bargain. Australians did an enormous trade with a small population.

"We have in our columns repeatedly called attention to the importance of advertising in the colonies."

One of the distinguishing traits between the British manufacturer and his American competitor lies in the eagerness with which the latter seeks publicity and the indifference of the former as a rule. To this very fact can be attributed a large measure of the success the American manufacturer has had in competing with the outside world. He realized before any other the all importance of having his name and goods well known by the class of people to whom he catered.

It is not from mere undirected publicity that results are obtained. There is a law in advertising as well as in any department of business. A writer in American Industries, speaking of publicity that pays, says : "It is characterized by the same traits that 'pay' in other walks, by earnestness, by sincerity, by persistence, by integrity, by aptness, by adaptation, and by seizing your topic in such a way as primarily to make it interesting."

When the British manufacturer realizes the big field there is for him in the colonies, a large part of which can be secured only by advertising in a proper medium, and makes a more thorough study of the science of advertising, then will he secure a trade that he is not now getting, but which belongs to him by the fact that tariff regulations were made to have it so.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Ontario Markets.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Nov. 9, 1905.

TRADE has been somewhat slower during the week under review, although the general feeling is that of satisfaction. Some good orders have come in from outside points, as many buyers are anxious to get in full supplies in good time.

Canned goods are in active demand, and general satisfaction is expressed that canners are supplying well up to margins.

Sugar has shown a further declining tendency and we have to report a drop on Monday last of ten cents per 100 pounds, with weakness still the ruling feature.

Syrups and molasses are not attracting great attention, although a better demand is evident for maple and other syrups.

Coffee still continues to show attraction and demand is steadily getting more interesting.

Tea has been uninteresting during the week under review. Prices, however, are ruling firm, with strong reports from foreign points.

Foreign dried fruits are occupying a good deal of attention. Arrivals are not coming to hand quite up to expectations, but this is attributed to hurried shipments from primal points and later arrivals are expected to improve.

Rice and tapioca are in active demand and are showing a healthy and strong market.

Spice is uninteresting.

Honey is moving well and showing good quality, with prices still firm to almost advancing point.

Beans are increasing in demand, good in quality and stiffening in price.

Fish, both fresh and cured, is showing active business with strengthening prices. Some fresh arrivals are added to our list this issue.

The grain market is showing great activity. Arrivals are coming in fairly well, and prices are evening down, as will be seen by our detail report.

Flour is showing good business, both domestic and export, with prices ruling firm.

Breakfast cereals are moving well, with no change to report in prices.

The hide market is revealing a more healthy state, with foreign markets advancing and domestic prices steadying to an even basis.

Canned Goods—There is no new feature in these lines. Trade continues fairly brisk, all lines coming in for a degree of attention. Prices remain unchanged. We quote :

Sugar—The local market in sugar has been only moderately active. A deal of uneasiness is manifest, and buyers are not inclined to venture far on ruling basis of values. The most important feature since our last report is a further drop in prices of 10 cents per 100 pounds reported on Monday afternoon, thus still further weakening an already weak position. Now that the season for active demand is over, and stocks are being accumulated at the various factories, there is little prospect of things changing their aspect, and it is undoubtedly a moment of great caution in buying. Foreign markets are likewise weak and uncertain, and every evidence points to a still further weakening. European markets can scarcely be said to have recovered from the heavy commercial failures of the speculative markets, and report says that it is not yet known the extent to which the banks of France are affected.

Syrups and Molasses.—In molasses local trade has been quiet, and little interest has been manifest. The primal markets report firmness and that full prices are being paid. New York market reports fair business being done, and prices ruling firm. In syrups trade has shown better activity, maple syrups being in good demand and prices ruling firm. We quote :

Coffee—Trade has been showing improved activity for some time past. There appears little doubt but that coffee is making good headway in public favor. Several prominent wholesalers report trade as progressive, and buyers showing more discrimination in selections. Advices from primal points are somewhat conflicting, mention being made af very unfavorable weather, and long continued drought causing anxiety. The New York market, however, at recent date opened lower, closing firm on reduced quotations. We quote :

Tea—Local markets have been rather flat since our last issue, and there is not much inclination on buyers' part to launch out. Prices are ruling firm for all good teas. The London market reports continued activity, and prices ruling a degree higher. Good common teas were fetching more, and good quality teas were actively competed for, final sales ruling higher. This refers to both Ceylons and Indians. Offerings were reported as slow at coming to hand, but quite sufficient was available to supply all bidders. Altogether the market is considered healthy and firm.

Foreign Dried Fruits—New fruits are coming in slowly, on account of previous orders, but in some instances are not showing up to expectations. It is, however, thought that this is on account of hurried shipments, and later arrivals will improve. Reports from primal markets mainly denote strengthening prices. Currants are quoted at an advance on early prices of some twelve cents per cwt. Sultanas have firmed up equal to fifty cents per cwt., and walnuts are showing a very much stronger position. It is expected that a much higher parity will rule in dried fruits as the season advances and the true state of the market at primal points is realized.

Grain—The market in grain has been very active. Arrivals from outside points have been coming in in fair quantities, and have been easily placed. Prices are generally somewhat easier and quotations are revised accordingly. Arrivals from Northwest points are slow at coming to hand, and it is difficult to rely upon any date for delipery, a fact which is causing a good deal of discontent. We quote :

Hides, Tallow, Skins and Wool— The hide market is showing more settled conditions, and good trade is being done at present prices. Arrivals are coming in plentifully but on account of no stocks being on hand, are found only sufficient for immediate requirements. A feature of importance is the strong quotations on the Chicago market. Prices have advanced during past two weeks rapidly, and are several points higher, and ruling firm at that. Some dealers have made contracts in advance as far ahead as February next, at present advanced prices, evidently believing these prices will rule. There is no apparent reason for this, the only explanation being the prosperous condition of things generally, and the consequent incentive to retail trade, which brings active demand, regardless of cost. The Florida orange crop promises well this year, although it will be well below the great crop that used to be harvested in earlier seasons. Estimates of the yield for 1905 average about 1,250,000 boxes, and much of the fruit has been sold on the trees on a basis of one dollar per box.

THE CANADIAN GROCER
10 FRONT ST. E., TORONTO

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Nov. 9th, 1905.

A GENERALLY satisfactory trade is reported by grocer jobbers in all lines. A good share of this is due to the fact that close of navigation orders and orders for the Northwest are being rushed out. Collections are reported fairly satisfactory. Renewals are few. Travelers report a good feeling among country merchants who state that the farming community report a generally prosperous season and harvest.

Sugars dropped 10c. on Monday and this steady decline has placed the buying by both jobbing and retail trade on a hand to mouth basis. Some heavy lots of Western Ontario sugars have been placed in this market this week, what effect this may have on local refiners will shortly develop.

Teas continue firm and a satisfactory business reported, all grades sharing in the generally better inquiry.

Canned goods are unchanged and no interesting feature to note.

Molasses is steady and corn syrups in fair demand.

Fish dealers report a better trade and with the first fall of snow and the colder weather in sight a good trade is looked for.

The foreign fruit market generally is strong. The current market has been strengthened by 3d. to 6d. Valencias are steady and Malaga raisins getting more attention on account of the high price of California loose. California prunes are also firmer.

There is no change to report in the coffee situation.

The butter market has shown a decided improvement this week and some heavy business prevailed.

Cheese also advanced both outside and in this market. Provisions are steady and a fair business.

Canned Goods—Trade during the week is reported steady. Deliveries are coming in from the canners and the trade is well satisfied with the percentages that are coming forward. It is reported that some little cutting has been done by some of the jobbers in the way of extra discounts, but no very serious effect so far seems to have resulted.

Strawberries and raspberries are in good demand as the short pack has induced dealers to buy early.

In canned salmon the regular trade was somewhat restricted by the selling of inferior second-run fish. The quality of this is naturally not as good as the choice first pack and buyers will no doubt realize this later on. It would seem to be the proper thing that packers after filling their jobbing orders with first quality fish should take measures to restrict the placing of the poorer second run on the market as it always interferes with the disposal of the earlier bought fish.

Finnan haddies are both scarce and dear, and packers are asking even more than shippers to-day.

Sugar—Refiners dropped sugar 10c. per hundred on Monday, making basis of granulated $4.30. The reports from the foreign beet market, and the New York market, do not indicate any strength, in fact interested parties who have followed the market statistically are of the opinion that a 4c. sugar is not improbable. Scotch granulated is being quoted at $4.10 in 200 lb. bags, and $4.15 in 100 lb. bags. Some heavy sales of Western Ontario beet sugars are reported at prices, it is claimed, not far removed from Scotch granulated price. The continued decline during the past few months has had the effect of placing sugar buying on a hand to mouth basis, both for the jobbing and the retail trade. We quote:

Syrups and Molasses—Molasses is moving along quietly at unchanged prices, namely 35c. per gallon in puncheons with the usual difference for barrels and half barrels. Coffee—Local coffee market shows no change, with the exception that it is on the quiet side. Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre in their weekly report under date of 7th report as follows:

Brazil Coffees—Dullness continues to be the keynote in the New York option market. Yesterday's exchange closed firmer on small transactions at about ten points less for the week. The slump has apparently been checked. Information is to the effect that at least a large part of December sales will be covered by actual delivery and that switches for the month will be less in evidence from this forward. An element of uneasiness is thus removed.

The crop news received recently from Brazil has not been favorable.

New York is weary of carrying more than her share of Brazil's crop. Holders are committed to reduce, if not prohibit, importations until this surplus is in more manageable compass. It thus arises that C. & F. offers are above parity of offers for delivery ex store New York. However, the very influence that stops importation to U. S. has its very evident effect in favor of Canadian buyers at C. & F. terms.

Our readers may have noticed a typographical error in our last week's coffee report in which it was stated that the world's visible supply was 100,750,000 bags less than a year ago, this should have read 1,750,000.

Tea—Business in teas during the week is reported fairly good, the market being firm and prices steady. No heavy trading, however, is reported. There seems to be a scarcity of Japan dust and siftings and one large importer reports having made several offers for round lots to representatives of Japanese houses, but all of them have been either turned down or prices too high. Japan teas generally are firm. Ceylon greens and blacks maintain the firmness reported last week. The advance of 1-2d. to 1d. is maintained. China greens, particularly Ping Sueys, are inquired for, but no heavy business is reported. Jobbers report that country buyers are sending in their orders for teas more freely, indicating that the strong market on teas generally is having its effect on outside trade. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits — The general tone of the market is strong and in some instances marked advances have taken place since our last report.

In currants an active demand combined with a low rate of exchange has strengthened the market considerably, and the low prices at present ruling have had the effect of turning buyers' attention to the Spanish fruit and considerable purchases have been made at very reasonable figures. A firmer market, however, is reported for loose muscatels, while table raisins still remain at the original low figures. Sultanas remain at same figures as our last, the advance having been fully maintained and higher prices are confidently expected.

Walnuts, although no change in the price at place of growth, the rate of freight will make them cost somewhat higher than earlier shipments. Prices remain high and for the moment have kept the demand, but as stocks and import orders are both smaller than usual an improvement is shortly looked for.

Filberts. The same remarks may apply to these as to walnuts, except that a slight advance has taken place in Sicily.

Tarragona Almonds also show advance prices at shipping port, which, together with the excess freight now ruling, has placed them in a very strong position.

Prunes. Californias show strength, and we learn that prices which were accepted two or three weeks ago at the coast have been turned down, holders asking from 1-8 to 1-4c more.

Spices—The spice market shows no material change with the exception of stronger feeling in cloves. The shrinkage in receipts at Zanzibar since August 1st, the opening of the season, is nearly 30,000 bales less than the same period last year. The entire new crop this season is expected to be low, somewhat under 60,000 bales. Peppers are in good demand, and the New York market particularly active in these lines. Cassias and gingers are in good demand at steady prices. We quote:

Honey—Business is on the quiet side. A slightly better demand for white comb honey exists. Buckwheat, which is in better supply, is having somewhat better sale. There is no change to report however on prices of any grade. We quote:

Maple Products—Maple syrup trade as well as maple sugar is in better condition, and dealers and blenders report good demand from all over the country. Some of this demand is no doubt due to filling up orders for Coastwise and river trade, and Lower Province business.

Beans—The bean market is firm and strong, and higher prices are looked for by commission men and dealers. Conflicting reports as to the crop are circulating, and it would seem that the inability to get any quantity bears out the reported shortage. Several cars were sold this week for yellow eyed at $1.60. The ruling prices for smaller lots are from $1.65 to $1.75. We quote:

Lower grades	1 50	1 55

Fish—The demand for all kinds of fish is brisk, in fact the Fall trade is very heavy, especially on salted and prepared fish. In smoked fish there is a brisk demand for haddie and kippered herring, but bloaters have been scarce. New smoked herring now arriving and meeting with steady sale. In fresh fish haddock is scarce this week, and both lake trout and white fish are now out of season, the close season extending till December 1st. There is an unusual heavy demand for green cod and new salt herrings in barrels and half barrels.

Evaporated Apples—A continued firmness in evaporated apples is reported by dealers. One of the largest handlers reports having had an offer of 8 1-4c. turned down. Holders in the West looking for from 8 1-2c. to 8 3-4c. and not any too anxious to sell. A leading jobber reports, however, that he was able to secure a car-load at 8c., and it would seem that 8 1-4c. to 8 1-2c. is about ruling price.

Flour—Prices rule steady under a fair demand for all grades. Local demand is good, and some little better feeling is shown in export trade. Considerable shipments have gone forward by the last boats for lower ports, as navigation will shortly close, and buyers are getting in supplies. We quote:

Rolled Oats—The tone of the market is firmer again and the advance of 30c. noted last week has stimulated buying among the jobbers and flour and feed dealers. Higher prices are looked for, and this feeling has toned up the market materially. We quote:

Hay—Hay is in good demand, particularly No. 1, which is not in as plentiful supply as No. 2. Local trade is reported good. Export trade is also satisfactory, and as freight space has been somewhat better, shipments are being rushed out. Prices unchanged. We quote:

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 7, 1905.

Provisions.

THE grocery markets are very firm, and some advances have been made in prices, perhaps the most notable being in American barrel pork, which, during the week, was sent up 50c. a barrel here. American clear back is now quoted here at $19.50, duty paid, and four dollars less in bond.

American plate beef is quoted at $14. There is considerable scarcity of hams and bacon, and also fresh pork, on the Halifax market this Fall. The receipts of pork are away below the average. Dealers here who were handling from 25 to 50 carcasses of pork at the same time last year have so far not had a single shipment.

The condition of the Prince Edward Island market, which is a very large producer, is very firm. Halifax buys largely in the Island, but this year shipments of pork from that place are coming in very slowly.

American lard is also firmer, although there has been no recent advance in this market. Dealers say that there has been no Canadian lard on this market for two months, the price being prohibitive. The American article can come in and undersell the Canadian lard even with paying the two cents duty. Canadian lard is now quoted at from ½ to ¼ of a cent above American.

Sugar and Molasses.

The sugar market continues very weak, and dealers here do not care to make any predictions regarding it. The ruling prices here are as follows:

XXX Granulated	$4.50
Austrian Granulated	4.40
Bright yellow	4.30
No. 1 yellow	4.10

There is no change in the molasses situation to report. Business is fairly quiet, though a good demand is looked for as the weather hardens, but no advance in price is anticipated. According to advices from Barbadoes, there is very little on hand there for shipment.

Dairy Produce.

The markets continue active and very firm. The receipts of Nova Scotia butter are not improving any, and the price holds firm. During the week a large quantity of Ontario and Quebec block butter was imported by dealers here. The butter is of fair quality and retails at 24 to 25c. per pound. In fact, the butter situation here this season is causing the dealers much concern. Eggs are firm at last quotations. There has been no improvement in the receipts, and none is looked for. Cheese remains the same.

Fruit.

The situation in the apple market here has not undergone any change. Good fruit is very slow coming in, the producer still holding off for higher prices. He knows the firm tone in the London market, and the shortage of the apple crop elsewhere, so, consequently, he is quite independent, and in consequence he is able to control the price. Good No. 1 fruit is quoted here at $4 per barrel. The quality of the fruit is good. Some hundreds of barrels which were left on the trees in the Valley, and badly nipped by an unexpected frost, are being packed and shipped to the vinegar factories in the Provinces. Except among the well-to-do people, the consumption of apples here this season is very small. The fruit inspectors here are not quite as active as they might be, and some jobbers are making strong complaint on the evasion of the Fruit Marks Act.

Flour and Feed.

Rolled oats have been advanced here about thirty cents per barrel, and are now quoted at $5.60 to $5.70. There is quite a scarcity of cornmeal reported from some quarters. Jobbing prices of flour here are:

75 per cents.	$4.75—$4.85
80 per cents.	4.60— 4.65
90 per cents.	4.30— 4.40
Straights	4.20— 4.30
Manitobas	5.65— 5.75

Vegetables.

Receipts of potatoes are very heavy. Delivered from vessels at the wharves they are quoted at 30c. per bushel. The commission houses ask ten cents more. New Brunswick potatoes are quoted at $1.50 per bag. Turnips, 75c. barrel. Beets, parsnips and carrots are selling at $1.50 per bag.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

"Vleena" figs in 1-lb. baskets are one of the best sellers of the season. The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, report very large sales of this line.

Buyers of canned fruit should communicate with H. P. Eckardt & Co., who are sellers at attractive prices.

"CANNED."

The difficulty of obtaining and transporting fresh foods in Alaska has resulted in an excessive use of canned goods, and the natives have come to consider Americans and canned goods as altogether inseparable.

Recently someone sent a present of a phonograph. The natives were intensely interested, and gathered round to hear the first selection, which happened to be the Lord's Prayer. When it was concluded there was a moment of impressive silence, and then one of the Indian chiefs, with a flash of inspiration, exclaimed, "Ah! Him canned missionary!"

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 6, 1905.

THE trade are finding great difficulty in getting western goods forward, particularly in heavy lines. It is said the trouble is lack of cars, and it is feared the situation will not improve. The Winter export business is now opening and as export stuff must be rushed forward for the steamers, local freight is apt to be side-tracked; add to this the difficulty from snow which will appear later and the outlook is not a bright one. Flour is particularly affected and in this line the trouble is the more serious as stocks are light, the trade having held off from buying, not having confidence in the market.

Those who are fortunate in getting goods forward turn them over quickly. There is nothing of particular interest. The large quantity of American pure lard being imported is a feature. It is many years since such large quantities were brought here. It is a satisfaction to note that Canadian stock has the preference, at a slight advance in many cases, but it is almost impossible to get it. Except perhaps in sugar, values generally are higher.

Oil—Burning oil is still very low. Sales have been very large; this is of course the active season. Lubricating oils are dull. In this line this is the quiet time, prices slow, no change. Paint oils, though not active, are very firm. Turpentine keeps extreme in price. Linseed cannot yet be called high. Cod oil is held at full figures. Stock is small. That coming to hand has been largely exported.

Salt—In Liverpool coarse salt prices are firmly held. This is a rather quiet time. With the arrival of the regular Winter port boats stock can be easily obtained. Fine salt is also quiet.

Canned Goods—The extreme low prices are a thing of the past. The fight seems off; it is gravely doubted if the result warranted the cost. Retailers took advantage of the situation and bought largely. There is one thing which may help matters; the low price at which goods can be retailed should very much increase the consumption, particularly in peas.

Tomatoes are much firmer. The association are not making full deliveries and prices in the States are high.

There is quite a full stock of gallon apples, Maritime Province pack.

Fruits are quiet.

Salmon rather dull.

Domestic sardines are a fair pack.

Haddies and kippers firmly held.

Dried Fruit—In raisins, new goods continue to arrive. Valencias are low and good. In loose Muscatels, Malagas supply the market, being so much cheaper than Californias. In seeded, stocks will be light. Very few Malagas were bought as shippers could not supply the demand, and California stock is extreme in price. Apricots while low show quite an advance. Peaches sell at quite full figures. Prunes are quite high, stocks are light. In currants, large lots of New York cleaned have been received. Imported goods come to hand slowly. New York seeded raisins, quite freely offered. Evaporated apples are higher. Figs are reasonable this season. In onions for good stock higher prices are asked.

Sugar—This continues to be the dull line. While sales are fair, prices continue to drop off. The market is still considered weak. There has practically been no let-up in the decline since the very first of the year.

Molasses—While prices are unchanged and at least in Porto Rico no higher prices are expected, the situation seems quite satisfactory. There is fair, steady demand. Barbadoes is in somewhat light supply.

Fish—In fresh fish, variety as usual at this season is small, chiefly cod and haddock. Dry fish is high, particularly cod; the supply is light. Pollock while high is as usual well below cod. It is, however, not popular. Pickled herring is high. While little fancy stock, general quality is good. Boneless fish has had a large sale, prices ruling rather higher. Pure boneless cod is particularly fine. Smoked herring tends higher, supply not large.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour, Ontarios are higher. Manitobas unchanged. While the latter are relatively high there is a large demand. There is extreme difficulty to get stock. Oats and oatmeal are higher. Feed has a fair sale. Cornmeal shows little change. In beans quite full stocks are held, bought at lower prices. Stock of Yellow Eyes much larger than usual, because of the prices. Values are now higher. Barley is dull.

B. C. Markets.

Nov. 1, 1905.

THAT prices could be maintained at fixed standard in Dawson, where conditions do not materially change during the long Winter season, was thought possible by the business men of the northern city, when they formed a combination some weeks ago. It would seem as if they had a good prospect of success, as the supplies are all in for the Winter, and transient population is practically all out, by this time. With such a steady situation the merchants have, nevertheless, been unable to keep to a schedule of prices. Recent despatches announce that prices have been cut and merchants are advertising big reductions, each trying to best the other. People are putting in Winter stocks on the strength of the cut in prices.

Shipments of Canadian flour to the Orient are on the increase. The Empress of Japan, which sailed this week, took out 3,000 sacks of Lake of the Woods flour, and 25 tons of B.C. flour, from the Moffett Mills at Enderby, in the Okanagan.

Keeping pace with the growth of customs receipts in Canada, the port of Vancouver reports for October: Total revenue, $120,560.59; export values, domestic, $991,087; foreign, $3,654.

Interest continues to play round the prospective terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Rumor has off and on determined that it is to be on Kaien Island, not far from Port Simpson, pointing out that the charter calls for a terminus 500 miles north of Vancouver, and that the Kaien location was reserved from public location until the railway people were able to secure it. On the other hand, it is stated that the decision of the G.T.P. people was partly the outcome of purchasing the charter of the Pacific, Northern & Omiaeca Railway, which is to run northwest till it can be used to carry material from the coast for the construction of the rest of the mountain section, as the Skeena river is not practicable as a line of transport. It is asserted that the G.T.P. will cross from Edmonton through the Yellowhead Pass and, coming down the Fraser River, will strike direct to Vancouver across the Lillooet country, Pemberton Meadows, and by way of Howe Sound. To carry out this latter portion of the project, the V. W. & Y., which holds a charter over the Howe Sound and Pemberton Meadows section, will be pushed along to completion, and will be the southern outlet of the new transcontinental line.

In groceries, the market is quiet, demand light, prices unchanged of recent dates.

A MUTUAL RELATIVE.

A late story of Irish wit is located in New Orleans. An Irishman boarded a train in which every seat except one was occupied by two people. This seat had as occupants a young sport and a large, shaggy dog. The Irishman stood by the seat expecting that room would be made for him. The young man did not take the hint, but regarded the other, who was poorly dressed, with ill-disguised scorn. At last the Irishman remarked: "That's a foine-looking dog ye have with ye. What breed is it?"

"It's a cross between a skunk and an Irishman," was the sneering answer.

"Shure, then, it's a relative of both of us," was the instant retort.

BEE-STINGING EXTRAORDINARY.

Bee-keeping is not without its dangers. At present in Delaware a lawsuit is pending to recover the value of a team of horses that were stung to death a short time ago. A farmer was driving through a field of grain, when the horses ran into a swarm of bees, which attacked the horses and stung them so badly that they died. The driver escaped only with great difficulty, and with many reminders of his experience.

CANADIAN FISHERIES.

Canada's fishery industry produced in 1904 $23,000,000.

Canada exported in 1904 over $16,000,000 worth of fishery products.

Cod comes first in value, salmon next.

Canada has 100,000 men employed in the fishing industry.

Nova Scotia comes first in fishing industry, British Columbia second, New Brunswick third.

13,905 seals were caught in 1904 by Canadian sealers.

BEE-KEEPING.

This year the bee industry has been exceptionally prosperous, and the keepers feel justly gratified over the season's result.

WINDOW AND INTERIOR DISPLAYS

TO MAKE THE STORE ATTRACTIVE

TO make the store attractive should be the supreme aim of every storekeeper. Watch every point of importance and have it right up-to-date.

Have you ever thought how your window display would be much enhanced by the judicious use of attractive lights?

Have you ever tried color lights for your evening window display? The soft, rich tone added from a deep red or green light makes many striking and very beautiful effects, and can be easily made.

There are a number of simple methods by which you can color your own lights to any shade desired.

One of these is the alum solution. Make a strong solution of alum water, and after carefully cleaning your globe, dip it in the solution. Have a rack to dry them on, and dry slowly and evenly. This gives you the plain white, frosted globe.

By adding cochineal, you have a red solution; tumeric makes a yellow; indigo a blue; a mixture of tumeric and indigo a royal purple.

It may be necessary to dip the globes several times that they may have an even coating.

Another good way, simple and inexpensive, is to color a bottle of mucilage and carefully coat the globes with same.

If the colored lights have not been extensively used in your town, try them at once, and you will be quickly convinced that they are most effective in attracting the crowds that throng the streets in the evening.

ATTRACTIVE WINDOWS PAY.

THE decoration of the store window is looked upon by a great many grocers from the standpoint of what it costs, the time of the clerk, etc., and not from the beneficial results, such as the increase in business, that may arise.

They have as yet to be convinced, shown in dollars and cents, that a well arranged window display is a paying investment, that it is one of the best paying advertisements any grocer can use to attract and maintain trade. This has been proven time and again by grocers all over the country, and to those who can't see anything in having well kept and attractive windows we would say, give the method a trial and, like many others, you will be convinced it is a good business policy.

The proof is seen from the fact that the brightest store in the block is always the attraction. Those in a hurry will stop and look at a well-lighted and well-dressed window, and in many instances the stopping means a sale.

WON'T BRING BUSINESS.

To the average grocer a window display simply means the packing of a number of cans or packages and then sticking a price on them. It is rarely ever that such a display brings any business. Of course, it is preferable to no display at all. But it is not a display that will bring new faces into a store or influence the sales of regular customers.

One thing at least every grocer can do, but to judge from recent observations few do, and that is to keep the windows clean and well lighted.

A TYPICAL COUNTRY STORE.

WE are enabled to produce this week a picture of an up-to-date general store at Brandon, Manitoba. This store has been recently purchased by W. Rourke & Co., from Mr. C. R. Bannings, the late proprietor.

One of Manitoba's Up-to-date Stores. W. Rourke & Co., Brandon.

Brandon has been making great progress of late years, and in keeping with the enterprising spirit, the new proprietors have set themselves to work to put everything on progressive lines. They have had the store remodelled and put in a fresh stock of groceries and provisions. It is a roomy store and measures 120 x 40 ft. It contains every modern facility for carrying on an up-to-date grocery business, has hardwood floors, electric lights, oak counters, cash registers, and computing scales.

Mr. Rourke is well known in the east, having been in the retail grocery business in Montreal for 18 years, and should enjoy a good trade in the west, if experience and ability count for anything.

The Grocer wishes them every success.

CANADIAN APPLE TRADE.

P. B. MacNamara, commercial agent at Manchester, writes:

Liverpool reports that the total arrivals of Canadian apples this season to Oct. 7, numbered 95,528 barrels, as against 127,650 barrels last season. The prices now being obtained for Canadian apples are vastly in advance of last year, yet, if the comparative failure of the English crop and the decrease in foreign arrivals are considered, it might have been expected that a higher range of prices would prevail. I attended the apple salesroom this week, and saw the contents of many barrels dumped into baskets for inspection by the buyers, and am pleased to be able to state that the packing and grading were right, and that the condition of the fruit was excellent. Fairly high prices were obtained, and as much as 25 shillings per barrel, or $6.07, was realized for 20 barrels of XXX Baxters.

FRENCH SUGAR FAILURES.

The Paris Journal states that the French sugar crisis involved known losses of 30,000,000 francs, equivalent to about $6,000,000. The unknown losses have added to the conditions an uncertainty, which makes the situation still more uncomfortable. Three large Parisian banks are said to have been heavy losers and to have tried to conceal their losses in order to save their credit. It is claimed that the banks are creditors to the extent of 100,000,000 francs, or $20,000,000.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 9th, 1905.)

LITTLE that is new offers itself for comment this week in the wholesale grocery market. Conditions are eminently satisfactory as collections show a marked improvement and the trade are buying liberally. Already there is considerable inquiry for groceries intended for the Christmas trade and it is already evident that the demand is to be for the fancy lines.

Sugar is still declining. As noted last week in our telegraphic despatches there has been another decline reducing the price to a base of $5.05 per cwt. for Montreal granulated in barrels. An important change has also been made in the method of stating the price of sugar for Manitoba points. Up to the present time different prices have been quoted for different points in the Province, but in future the base price will be the Winnipeg price. Merchants will buy at the Winnipeg price and pay their own freight. While the change is essentially one of method in reckoning it is said by the wholesale trade that it will have the effect of making higher prices in many parts of the Province.

New evaporated apples are arriving on the local market in quantities and are being sold at the high prices quoted some time ago in these columns. New dried apples are also opening high.

Owing to the high price of California muscatel raisins as compared with Valencias there are none selling in Winnipeg at the present time. At this time of year the Valencias are fully as popular as the muscatels when prices are on an equality and with the big difference now existing the demand has been entirely diverted to the Valencias. Unless the California prices are reduced there will be very small sales this season. The only California raisins selling in quantities on the local market at the present time are the seedless varieties for which there is always a steady demand.

New Digby chicks are on the market and they are quoted at 14c. per box.

Canned Goods—There is nothing new in the canned goods situation. Prices continue steady and they are quoted as follows:

Sugar—As noted above another decline last week reduced the price of sugar to a basis of $5.05 per cwt. for Montreal granulated in barrels. At the same time an important change has been made in the method of calculating the price of sugar in Manitoba. The Winnipeg price is now made the base price for the Province, and country merchants may now calculate the price of their sugar at the Winnipeg price plus freight charges to their station. That is, in future sugar will be on the same basis as any other goods bought in Winnipeg. It is true that Brandon will still be a distributing point for the refineries, but the price in Brandon will be the Winnipeg price plus the freight to Brandon. The general effect will probably be to raise the price of sugar throughout the Province. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Owing to the abnormally high price of California muscatel raisins as compared with Valencias very few, if any, are selling on the local market. HINTS TO BUYERS.

The Customs returns of last week show that there were 21,699 pounds of "Salada" Ceylon tea exported from Toronto to the United States; this is the tea that received the highest award and gold medal at St. Louis Exposition last year.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, agents for Huntley & Palmers, Limited, the English biscuit manufacturers, have a large shipment of these goods coming in this month. This is the kind of article that your customers want for Christmas.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co, Limited, are landing ten or eleven carloads of Maconochie Bros.' peel, pickles, sauces, preserved fish, marmalade, etc., and have further shipments coming in shortly. These goods are coming to the front rapidly and only need introduction to you to make you as enthusiastic about them as are the agents.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' OFFICERS.

The quarterly meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society was held in Montreal last Saturday, with the president, Mr. Alex. A. Murphy, in the chair.

A most satisfactory report was read, showing an increase in the membership, and also an increase in the reserve fund.

The nomination of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, resulting in the election of the following geotlemen by acclamation: President, J. S. N. Dougall; vice-president, Richard Booth; treasurer, Chas. Gurd; trustees, David Watson, E. H. Copeland, Max. Murdock, J. F. L. Dubreuil, and J. N. Christie.

The newly appointed president, Mr. Dougall, retires this year from the presidency of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, having filled that office for the past two years.

PUSH ON.

Hold up your head and push on!

If you want to succeed and get to the top of the tree, devote all your thoughts of your business.

School yourself into being all eyes and ears.

Never miss the opportunity of meeting men likely to be of use to you. Make yourself pleasant to them at first, then try to make yourself useful; then, maybe, they will find you indispensable to them.

When you have made up your mind to do a thing, do it; let no one divert you from the road that leads straight to the goal.

Have confidence in yourself. If you cannot swim, go and look at people swimming, and say to yourself: "They can do it, therefore, I can," and you will do it after two or three "trys."

Put up with the hard times in a manly way, and they will be soon over.

No one who has character (with or without talent) has any business to be poor. Any one who has health and character must more or less succeed. No one has any business to vex his friends and acquaintances by grumbling, complaining, or striving to win pity or sympathy.

Hold up your head, push on, and you will get there.

Mr. F. A. Kelly, who has been with the Grimm Mfg. Co., Limited, Montreal, for ten years, representing them on the road, was married on the 18th ult. to Miss McGarry, of Peterboro, Ont. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, after a tour through the Eastern States, will take up their residence in Montreal. As "Fred." has always been in the maple sugar business, the sweetness of married life will be thoroughly appreciated.

THE PATH THE CALF MADE.

One day, through the primeval wood,
A calf walked home, as good calves should;
But made a trail, all bent askew,
A crooked trail, as all calves do.

Since then two hundred years have fled,
And I infer, the calf is dead;
But still he left behind his trail,
And thereby hangs my moral tale.

The trail was taken up next day
By a lone dog that passed that way,
And then a wise bell-wether sheep
Pursued the trail o'er vale and steep
And drew the flock behind him, too,
As good bell-wethers always do.

And from that day, o'er hill and glade,
Through those old woods a path was made;
And many men wound in and out,
And dodged and turned and bent about
And uttered words of righteous wrath
Because 'twas such a crooked path.

But still they followed—do not laugh—
The first migrations of that calf,
And through this winding woodway stalked,
Because he wobbled when he walked

This forest path became a lane,
That bent and turned, and turned again;
This crooked lane became a road,
Where many a poor horse, with his load,
Toiled on beneath the burning sun,
And traveled some three miles in one;
And thus a century and a half
They trod in the footsteps of the calf.

The years passed on in swiftness fleet,
The road became a village street;
And this, before men were aware,
A city's crowded thoroughfare;
And soon the central street was this
Of a renowned metropolis;
And men two centuries and a half
Trod in the footsteps of that calf.

Each day a hundred thousand men
Followed the zigzag calf about,
And o'er his crooked journey went
The traffic of a continent.
A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf near three centuries dead,
They followed still his crooked way
And lost one hundred years a day;
For such reverence is lent
To well established precedent.

A moral lesson this might teach,
Were I ordained and called to preach;
For men are prone to go it blind
Along the calf paths of the mind,
And work away from sun to sun
To do what other men have done.

They follow in the beaten track,
And out, and in, and forth, and back,
And still their devious course pursue,
To keep the paths that others do.
But how the wise old wood gods laugh
Who saw the first primeval calf,
Ah! many things this tale might teach,
But I am not ordained to preach.

A CASE OF LUCK.

Here are two striking advertisements which appeared once in a local newspaper. The first ran:

"In consequence of annoying mistakes, Thomas Smith, the baker, begs to announce that he is not the same person as Thomas Smith, the sweep, and that he has no connection with the latter individual."

The second, which appeared the following day, ran: "Thomas Smith, the sweep, who was stated yesterday to be a different person from, and to be in no way connected with, Thomas Smith, the baker, wishes, for the sake of distinction, to be known in future as Lucky Thomas Smith."

AN INDUSTRY FOR YARMOUTH.

MANY years ago, in fact since the first settlement of Yarmouth, its inhabitants have been deeply interested in the fisheries—not only so, but many of its hardy sons have toiled and built vessels for the purpose of prosecuting this industry.

As the place advanced in population and in enterprise the list of fishing vessels grew in proportion and for many years every resident could point with pride, as well to its fishing as to its deep sea sailing fleet.

Yarmouth seemed particularly adapted to the prosecution of the fishing business, but of late years, through some ill-starred fate, the fleet has dwindled until to-day there are but few, alas too few, vessels engaged in this important enterprise.

This is not as it should be, and Yarmouthians can easily take a lesson from their neighbors in Digby and Lunenburg Counties. For several years past quite a fleet of Digby vessels have entered Yarmouth with fares of fish caught immediately off their shores, and last week two Lunenburg vessels also came here with full fares to obtain some supplies.

With the best shore fishing grounds at hand and with a long experience in the construction of all sorts of vessels, it really appears to be too bad that not more of the coming generation are engaged in this hardy but lucrative industry.

INTERESTING TO POULTRY MEN.

Some practical experiments have been made by the American Government as to the proper construction of poultry houses, how much space should be allowed to a given number of fowls, etc.

At the experiment station in Maine it was found that the best possible results were obtained by allowing from eight to ten feet of floor space for each hen.

After scientifically ascertaining the number of respirations a minute of a fowl, the poultryman says that in a wooden poultry house with the ventilation at the top the air apparently changes about four times an hour.

Each bird must, therefore, have at least the amount of space mentioned above allotted to it. Overcrowding is said to diminish egg production and encourage croup, tuberculosis and other diseases. The air in a house with the bottom out is said to be twice as good as one with the bottom in, the air changing twice as quickly, probably accompanied by a draft.

A GOOD REPORT OF THE LAND.

One of the greatest Canadian enthusiasts in the trade is surely Martin Niermeyer, export manager for G. F. Sutton & Sons, London, England.

Mr. Niermeyer has recently returned to England from a trip round the world which occupied almost two years, during which time he visited almost every part of the British Empire. Of all the countries in the world, however, Canada attracts him most forcibly, and though he reached Halifax in February and did not arrive in Vancouver until April, he considers his Winter's experience one of the pleasantest he ever had. According to his judgment Norway and Sweden do not begin to compare with the west of Canada in point of scenery and climate. Mr. Niermeyer has been considerably on the move during the past 20 years, and is a much-traveled man, and though he visited Canada a few years ago he had not been across the country from Winnipeg to the coast. He is greatly impressed with the possibilities of Canada, and loses no opportunity of speaking in glowing terms to British merchants and manufacturers with whom he comes in contact.

TRANSPORT OF GRAIN.

As a result of the situation at the eastern terminals of the lake grain route the C.P.R. has made arrangements for shipping a million and a half bushels of wheat all-rail before the close of navigation. This grain is being sent forward for exporters who are unable to fulfil their obligations in any other manner. Although it is understood that the railway company is giving an exceptionally favorable rate, the exporters stand to lose a considerable sum by being compelled to ship by rail instead of by water.

and see just what "The Fairbank Plan" is. While we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year advertising the six great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

FRESH AND CURED FISH

JAPAN'S GREAT FISHERIES.

JAPAN leads the world in the economical and scientific development of its fisheries. It has more persons engaged in this industry, says Dr. H. M. Smith, than any other nation. Sharks are among the commonest food fishes of Japan. They are sent to the markets to be "butchered," like beeves in other countries. The extent of the Japanese fisheries may be judged from the size of the nets employed by the fishermen. Doctor Smith tells, in the National Geographic Magazine, of a net employed for catching yellowtails which was more than a mile long. It had a bag 900 feet long, 250 feet wide at its mouth and 125 feet deep. On one occasion 10,000 fish, averaging 20 pounds in weight, were taken at a single haul.

NEW FISHERY STATION.

Five new fishery stations will be opened on the lower Detroit River by the Dominion Government, four on Fighting Island and one on Bois Blanc Island. Their chief purpose will be to gather spawn and eggs for the Government fish hatchery at Sandwich. The work will be under the supervision of Mr. William Parker, who has charge of the Sandwich hatchery.

COD PRICES IRREGULAR.

A Newfoundland paper is responsible for saying: "There is no doubt the price of fish is far from fixed or steady just now. A quantity of large cod caught off this port the past season and well cured, sold to one firm for $6.70, while another firm gave $6.80 for similar fish. Competition in buying is very keen, but there is nothing to warrant such figures. No one wishes to see a collapse of any one business house, but how can a firm exist that pays out money with a surety of loss? Fishermen themselves will be the sufferers eventually. If fish ruled at say $5 this autumn it would be better all round."

FISH NOTES.

The Dominion Government has not this year extended the season for taking whitefish and salmon trout for the usual ten days, and as a result the close season commenced on November 1st and will continue throughout the month. There is one exception to this rule, namely, that whitefish may be taken in Lake Erie in the waters bounding the Counties of Kent, Haldimand and Monck where the close season has been abolished.

Professor Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries, has returned to Ottawa after an absence of several weeks in British Columbia. The commission that have been sitting there adjourned until November 9th, when a conference will be held at Seattle with commissioners from the State of Washington to consider joint action for the protection of the salmon fisheries. The Georgian Bay Commission, owing to rough and boisterous weather, have postponed sittings until next Spring.

Notwithstanding the reported scarcity of oysters on Prince Edward Island, heavy shipments are being made, the boats running to the mainland carrying hundreds of barrels each trip. The largest single shipment was on Saturday last, when the boat from Summerside for Point du Chene landed 400 barrels at the latter place. These [illegible] were all for the upper Canadian market, where the demand is, as usual, good. The best hand picked oysters are quoted in Halifax at $7 per barrel.

A letter has been received at the Ontario Fisheries Department from a gentleman in England asking as to the feasibility of transporting Canadian black bass to the Old Country. The writer wants to stock some private waters. Mr. S. T. Bastedo, superintendent of the department, replied, saying that twenty years ago a shipment was made. He recommends that fish hatched this year should be only about four or five inches long, and would be hardy enough to stand a voyage.

The Department of Marine and Fisheries has decided to build a steamboat for the use of officers of the department employed on Lake Winnipeg. The craft will cost $10,000, and will be built at Selkirk during the coming Winter. Up to the present the department has been compelled to hire boats, and the outlay has been so great that it was decided to build a Government boat. The engineers engaged in the hydrographic survey of Lake Winnipeg and the officers connected with the fisheries will have the new boat at their command constantly, and the cost will be saved in less than two seasons.

The enormous business being done in British Columbia halibut by the New England Fish Co., of Boston, has been the subject of a good deal of protest by Canadians interested in the same line. The principal grievance lies in the fact or the alleged fact, that these splendid fish, some of which weigh several hundred pounds, are caught in what are regarded as Canadian waters. The halibut is plentiful along the Pacific coast from California to Alaska. T[illegible]lso abound in Hecate Straits and Dixon Entrance off Port Simpson.

The magnitude of the above company's operations may be gleaned from the fact that last year it paid in express charges alone to the C.P.R. over $300,000, whilst their catch was nearly half that of the whole Pacific coast, which amounted to 25,000,000 pounds.

The stock of J. S. Armstrong & Machum, grocers, St. John, N.B., has been sold to F. E. Williams, Limited, at 63 cents on the dollar.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

AN INEXPENSIVE SHOW CASE.

MOST storekeepers have experienced more or less difficulty in displaying their stock of dried fruits. This question, however, has been solved in an easy and effectual way by some ingenious storekeepers. A case is made about the length of an ordinary counter, and any convenient width, a foot high at the back and 7 or 8 inches high in front. It is then divided into as many compartments as is required for the various kinds of fruit. This case can be placed either on a counter or a convenient shelf. By filling each compartment with a nice show of fruit, and a neat show ticket at the back, customers are at once face to face with an attractive and suggestive display. The addition of sliding glass tops will add to the appearance and more than repay the outlay by protecting and preserving from the atmosphere.

METHODS OF SELLING FRUIT.

SOME very interesting and instructive remarks have been made by Mr. A. E. Sherrington, of Walkerton, in the Canadian Horticulturist, on the packing and selling of Canadian fruits, from observations when visiting Europe. We give the remarks for the benefit of our readers :

"After visiting all of the principal fruit markets in England and Scotland, I am more convinced than ever that co-operation among the growers and shippers of Canada and other countries is an absolute necessity if the growers are to retain that market and receive a share of the profits on the products of the orchard. I saw some dickering in Great Britain last Summer that could scarcely be called square dealing, in fact, it was anything but square. Who was the loser in this particular transaction ? No one but the shipper. The commission merchant had his commission and was at no loss. The time is coming when our fruit and other produce will be sold f.o.b. here, instead of by consignment.

"Retail merchants I saw expressed themselves as very much pleased with our method of co-operation in packing apples, and agreed that all products should be sold direct, and not handled on commission.

"I interviewed several retail fruiterers in regard to shipping apples in boxes. A number of them had had no experience with boxes, but said they were willing to give them a trial, believing that they would be very convenient for their trade. Others who had handled apples in boxes were perfectly satisfied that it is the right package for the finer sorts.

During the short time that I was in Europe I had no difficulty in arranging with reliable parties to take all their requirements from our co-operative association f.o.b. here. If the right kind of man was over there one season he would be able to place nearly all the apples grown in Ontario by straight sales to reliable parties. It does not pay to send anything to Europe but first-class goods. When good fruit was offered the buyers vied with each other in bidding but when the goods were inferior bidding was slow.

"It is a great mistake to mark the barrels wrongly. I saw some apples on Covent Garden Market, London, put up at Cloborne, Ont., marked XXX Duchess. I opened some of the barrels and found one marked XXX Duchess which had not a Duchess in the barrel. They were green apples without a particle of color. Another barrel contained Duchess, but only number two, and marked XXX. This kind of packing will not do. It can be prevented by co-operation in packing.

"The need for greater co-operation on the part of Canadian growers becomes more apparent every year. Co-operation will mean better packing and higher prices, and will strengthen the fruit industry in all its branches. Wherever it has been given an honest trial in Ontario it has been a great success. The more of these associations we can have the better for the growers of the Province."

THE APPLE TRADE.

There is great dissatisfaction among fruit dealers over the apple trade in St. John, both as regards the packing done in Nova Scotia and the inspection there. It is stated that the duties of the inspector as carried out are to see that the barrels are all marked with the packer's name, the variety of fruit and the classification. If the marking is all right the barrels are passed, and no attention is paid to the quality of the fruit, to see whether it corresponds with the markings.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Business has shown a good deal of activity during the week under review.

Oranges are coming in in good form, and prices have evened down somewhat.

Lemons are also easier in price, although supply is not over-abundant.

Bananas continue firm, with every indication of demand materially improving.

Grapes are active with previous quotations ruling firm.

The domestic fruits are still coming in in fair quantities. The trade in apples is very good with arrivals scarcely sufficient to fill early orders. Best quality apples are ruling high and good grade apples are easily placed.

Vegetables.

The local market for vegetables has not been marked by any great activity. Demand continues steady with no particular feature of interest.

Tomatoes are practically finished for the season.

Potatoes are showing increased demand and remain firm at 90c. per bag. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Trade has been a little brighter this week, mostly attributed to the last sailings of the boats to the lower ports and buyers anxious to get in stock before cold weather sets in.

Jamaica oranges are doing a little better on account of their condition and quality being more palatable than they have been, and prices show an advance of 25c. to 50c. per barrel.

New crop lemons are a little lower, selling from $3.50 to $4.

Nova Scotia cranberries are very firm, selling from $8.50 to $9.50 per barrel.

Almeria grapes are steady with an upward tendency, due to light receipts and prices being much higher in United States markets. Stocks are light here, which looks like higher prices shortly.

Spanish onions in crates are selling 80c. to 85c.; in cases $2.50 to $3.75.

Red onions are selling at 90c. per bag and $2.50 to $2.75 per barrel, the latter price being for large, fancy stock.

Apples show an improvement in this market, the better variety, such as Spies, Baldwins, Greenings and Russets, in good demand and selling from $3.75 to $4.25; other varieties are in light demand and selling from $2.75 to $3.50. European markets report higher prices, but results do not seem to justify quotations that have been accepted here. Shipments are lighter this week, and cables ought to show higher prices at next week's sales. We quote :

Dates, per lb		0 04½
Bananas	1 85	2 25

Vegetables.

The vegetable market shown no change from last week.

Potatoes are coming in in good supply and prices are steady.

California reports a very fine crop of celery, but it is not expected that the first car will reach this market before about the beginning of December.

Onions continue strong in price, the I'll wager the store that is busy has my goods in ample quantity. One dealer tells me he sells more of the E.D.S Brand than all other brands put together. ST. JOHN, N.B.

Green Fruit.—Apples are high, at least for good stock. Ontario apples are now here and sell quite freely at full figures. While there are almost daily auctions of Nova Scotia apples, only the poorer grades are sold in this way, and prices this year are not as good as usual.

Oranges, rather out of season. Jamaicas are inclined to be poor. A few Floridas are seen, but it is too early for good fruit.

Lemons, while high, are rather easier.

Small fruits, as grapes, etc., largely out of the market, except Malaga and Tokay grapes.

VANCOUVER, B.C.

Fruits—Apples still in large supply, and local stock fill all grades. Demand large, with prices ranging from 75c. to $1.75 per box.

Some Winter pears still offering, the price from $1 to $1.75 per box.

California grapes in large supply yet, with quotations from $1.25 to $2 per crate.

Vegetables—Potatoes still maintain strong position, Ashcrofts being worth up to $28 per ton, and few offering. Local lower mainland potatoes from $14 to $18 per ton. Field roots, turnips, carrots, beets, etc., are in good supply, and prices still low. Cabbage is not so plentiful for Winter storing, and price is fairly firm at 2½ and 3c. per lb.

LOOK AFTER THE CANDY TRADE.

THE candy business is really only in its infancy, each succeeding year developing or extending the avenues through which it can be sold, and the grocer who starts it now will be in position to participate in the enormous profits which are realized from the sale of candy during the holidays. Undoubtedly the sales of candy this year will be unprecedented in the annals of trade, owing to the wonderful prosperity of the country in general and the fact that everybody will have a few dollars to spend for "goodies" during the holidays.

In handling candy the grocer has a decided advantage over the retail confectioner, as the confectioner must pay all of his expenses out of his candy sales, while the grocer has no extra expenses for rent, heat, light or clerk hire over what they would be were he merely conducting a regular grocery business; in other words, his candy trade would be about one-half or two-thirds profit. Would that he could make the same profit off the sale of all his goods!

Heretofore druggists have made considerable out of candy by handling it as a side line, and the same inducement is now before the grocer, after having been tried by many brother grocers who have found good, substantial profit in it.

As it is with biscuits, so it is with candy—it must be attractively displayed in a neat showcase or in the display window, preferably in shallow pans, neat cartons or special packages or boxes. A display of candy can be made in the front window, along with other goods; but in the showcase it is best to make a separate display by having the cakes, etc., on one side and the candy on the other. The glass of the window or showcase should be washed several times a week and wiped off frequently, for next to having an attractive display, cleanliness will help to win custom and hold trade. A neat showcase of candy will also bring fancy trade, while customers for other things will often be tempted to buy a little candy. Again, a pretty showcase for the candy will add to the attractiveness of the store, and the grocer who has not an appropriate one will find it advisable to procure one at the start, as the candy sales will soon pay for it.

JAPANESE RICE CROP SHORT.

A cable despatch received from Tokio, Japan, says: Notwithstanding the silence of the Government, the real fact is disclosed that Japan made peace at Portsmouth in fear of a financial breakdown. The war proved more costly than had been calculated, and the rice and cereal crops seemed doomed to failure. Instead of sunlight and warmth during the month of August, when the crops ripen, there was continuous rain and exceedingly cold weather. While some improvement may still be in store, it is certain that the rice crop proves to be from 15 to 20 per cent. below the average and far below last year's crop, when it was marvelously large. Six months more of war would have meant very hard times, for the masses of the people are very poor and rice is bread and meat to them.—Modern Miller.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY TROUBLES.

Another serious complication has arrived in the fishery situation at the Bay of Islands when the steamer Active, carrying eight small boatloads of local fishermen, sailed with the intention of proceeding outside the three-mile limit, and there transferring the fishermen to United States fishing vessels, on which they would ship as members of the crews.

The colonial cruiser Fiona chased the Active and threatened her with seizure if she went beyond the three-mile limit without clearance papers. The Active thereupon returned. The customs authorities refuse to grant clearance papers to the steamer except for a bona fide voyage. The United States fishermen are indignant, and threaten to appeal to Washington for a warship. The British cruiser Latona is patrolling the bay to prevent collisions between the rival fishermen.

THE LIMIT.

By the side of a certain portion of a suburban railway stands a glue factory which sometimes gives out a particularly offensive smell.

A lady who was obliged to travel on this line quite often always carried with her a bottle of lavender salts.

One morning an old farmer took the seat beside her. As the train neared the factory the lady opened her bottle of salts. Soon the whole car was filled with the horrible odor of the glue.

The old farmer put up with it as long as he could, then he shouted: "Madam, would you mind puttin' the cork in that 'ere bottle?"

The doctors dosed him faithfully
With powder and with pill.
A friend advised him what to take
To put him on his feet;
He has it for his breakfast now,
A dish of ORANGE MEAT.

The friend advised him and the grocer supplied him. That is taking place every day and grocers are gaining thereby. But it doesn't matter what turns the people to

ORANGE MEAT

It's all the same to the grocer who gets the business, and who has tangible proof that he gets it—the Profits. FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

DELAY IN SHIPPING GRAIN.

WHEAT deliveries along the C. P. R. system indicate that the estimates of the grain crop made early in the Fall will be far surpassed. Already deliveries exceed 25,000,000 bushels, as compared with 11,536,000 at the same period of last year.

The eastern blockade is having a serious effect on prices, and the farmers are the main sufferers. Some idea of the acuteness of the blockade situation may be gathered from the fact that a dealer buying cash wheat to-day would have absolutely no chance of delivering that wheat on December contract at Liverpool. A Liverpool dealer who is at present in the country is reported to have been refused space for cash wheat to be delivered on December contract more than a week ago.

The losses to exporters by the blockade across the lakes cannot be estimated. On one cargo shipped from Fort William the exporters had to pay $500 for delay at Depot Harbor.

This makes vessel owners decline to make charters except at such figures as will actually cover all loss of time. It is almost impossible to charter a vessel for Montreal at the present time under nine and one-half cents. There are rumors of ten cents having been paid.

Other rates known to have been made are seven and a half to Kingston and four and a half to Georgian Bay. Vessels are not averaging much more than one trip in three of former years owing to delays in unloading.

POINTS ON STORAGE CAPACITY.

THE total elevator capacity of Western Canada, including the elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur, with those at interior points, is 45,883,000 bushels.

The Canadian Pacific Railway built its first elevator at Fort William as early as 1884, when elevator "A" was begun. It received the crop of 1885 and was considered a giant in those days, having a capacity of 1,250,000 bushels. It has been joined by B, C, D, and E, all of modern construction and equipment and with a total capacity of 8,500,000, and in addition there are located at Fort William the Empire elevator with a capacity of 1,700,000 bushels, and the Ogilvie with a capacity of 500,000. This gives Fort William a storage capacity of 10,750,000.

Port Arthur, the adjoining town, has the largest wheat elevator in the world. This is the tile tank elevator of the Canadian Northern Railway with a capacity of 6,500,000 bushels. The King elevator in the same town has a capacity of 800,000 bushels. The terminal storage at Port Arthur and Fort William, twin towns on Lake Superior, reaches the immense total of 18,500,000 bushels.

In 1900, just five years ago, there were 519 elevators at interior points in the Canadian west with a total capacity of 15,379,000 bushels. This year there are 1,018 elevators with a capacity of 28,768,030 bushels, representing an investment of close upon $55,000,000.

FLOUR MILL SOLD TO AMERICANS

The Carberry flour mill has been sold by C. J. Hurt to a syndicate of American capitalists, represented by I. Bruce Howard, of Minneapolis. It is understood that the purchasers intend to establish a string of mills throughout the west, and will manufacture for the export trade.

WHEAT FOR MEXICO.

Mr. A. W. Donly reports to the Department of Trade and Commerce that the wheat market in Mexico has suddenly become stringent, and if samples of No. 2 red from Canada are satisfactory, good business may be done. Until December 31, wheat enters Mexico at 70 per cent. reduction on duty.

CEREAL NOTES.

Mr. Alexander MacLean, Canadian agent in Japan, reports to the Trade Department that the latest returns of the rice crops for the current year show a falling off of 19.9 per cent. over last year and 7.2 per cent. over the average yearly production. He reports quite an extensive demand in Japan for fertilizers. Last year the empire imported artificial fertilizers to the value of $2,878,540, while this year the value of the importations amounts to $6,538,178.

Hall & Son, of Manitoba are contemplating building a warehouse and wheat elevator in the immediate future at False Creek, B.C., on premises acquired from the Canadian Pacific Railway. They also intend building a flour mill in connection with the elevator, and it is understood that arrangements have been made for the supply of power. Wheat will be shipped in bulk from Vancouver until the mill is built, when, if the flour justifies it, the Oriental flour trade will be invaded with Vancouver milled flour.

ENCOURAGE TOBACCO SALES.

AT this season of the year a fine opportunity presents itself to push tobacco sales, and nothing can help more than a careful utilizing of the show window.

Do you know that window space properly utilized is one of the most valuable mediums of publicity in the world and the one vehicle most convenient and desirable, calculated to meet the requirements of the conservative, dignified business man or firm who desires advertising ?

Some reasons why.

All other advertising space must be purchased or rented—window space, infinitely more valuable, costs nothing.

All other advertising space is for temporary use—window space constitutes the direct opposite, permanency.

No other advertising space has the article itself behind it—window space has your goods behind it, also the dealer behind it.

All other advertising space costs time and money to keep it in force—window space is ever in good repair and bright ; dealer does it himself.

All other advertising space is practically "dead" at night—window space "works overtime," night and day ; dealer pays for illumination.

All other advertising space involves large expenditure, risk and uncertainty —window space affords maximum results at minimum cost, and is certain.

What did you note in your competitors' windows the last time you went by them ? If something attracted you, it would probably attract your trade. Try it and see.

Pictures always attract attention in the window. If you have or can get anything unusual in the way of a picture, put it in your window the next time you make a change.

Many tobacco merchants are now supplying excellent advertising show cards.

IMPORTS INTO BRITISH INDIA.

The total value of the tobacco imports into British India in 1904-'05, $933,333.93, exceeds by about 20 per cent. the amount imported in 1903-'04. Cigarettes are mainly responsible for this advance. At Calcutta, 584,000,000 cigarettes were imported, of which England furnished 385,000,000 in 1904-'05 ; the United States, 111,000,000 ; China, 66,000,000 ; Egypt, 11,000,000 ; and Straits Settlement, 8,000,000.

THE COSTLIEST CIGARS.

"The costliest cigars in the world," said a tobacconist, "are made for the Barons Rothschild. These cigars cost $1.25 apiece.

"They are called 'Henry Clay Sobranos.' They are wrapped in pure gold leaf and packed in cabinets of cedar inlaid with ivory. A black, rough-looking cigar, they smoke with the most delicate aroma that you can imagine.

"King Edward's cigars only cost a little more than half what the Rothschilds' do."

GREEK TOBACCO.

A COMPANY is being formed in Greece under the auspices of the Bank of Athens with the support of the principal tobacco merchants of Volo, for the purpose of improving the cultivation of tobacco, developing the export trade and manufacturing cigarettes for export. Although the culture of tobacco has improved in Greece, still the quality produced is considered inferior. With the object of improving it the Government has for the past two years been distributing to growers Kavalla, Xanthi and Yenidje seed, which have given very satisfactory results. Experiments have convinced the promoters of the undertaking that they can produce as good tobaccos as Turkey if certain changes are made in the methods of cultivation. The principal market for Greek tobacco at present is Alexandria, but considerable quantities are also exported to Italy, Roumania, Germany, Tunis and the northern provinces of Russia.

TOBACCO NOTES.

Advices from Tokio state that the profits on the tobacco monopoly of Japan this year will be about sixteen million dollars, and probably five hundred thousand dollars more than they calculated upon.

Key West sent to the north the first six months of this year about 15,000,000 cigars ; Porto Rico threw into the United States during the same period about about 40,000,000 cigars, while there came from Cuba during that time 25,000,000 cigars.

Ovila S. Perrault, secretary American Tobacco Company, Montreal, was in the city recently. Mr. Perrault has just returned from a trip in the company's interests to the Pacific coast, taking in also the Edmonton and Crow's Nest Pass districts. Like all returning travelers from the west, Mr. Perrault is enthusiastic over the resources of the west and the development that is taking place.

Mr. Felix Charlan, an expert in tobacco growing, who has been loaned by the French Government to Canada for the purpose of giving instruction in the culture of the fragrant weed and its preparation for market, has arrived in Ottawa. He has been visiting at the Central Experimental Farm, and from there will proceed to the tobacco growing districts of Canada, where he will give demonstrations to the farmers and growers.

To produce the tobacco manufactured in this country during the last fiscal year, 8,110,800 pounds of raw leaf tobacco were imported, paying an excise duty of 25 cents per pound. With this was used 2,995,000 pounds of Canadian tobacco and 1,550,000 pounds of "combination tobacco." Roughly speaking, between one-quarter and one-third of the tobacco sold in Canada is from Canadian leaf. Of the cigarettes sold in this country, only about four per cent. are imported. A few million of those made in this country are the product of Canadian leaf.

The following recipe for cement is considered an excellent one for repairing meerschaum pipes: Take of freshly burnt plaster of paris five parts and freshly burnt lime one part, also have embodied white of egg as much as may be necessary. The plaster of paris and lime must be reduced to very fine powder and mixed thoroughly together, then moisten the surfaces to be joined with a little of the white of the egg. When that is on rapidly mix the powder with white of egg and at once lay the mixture on the broken surfaces and firmly press the pieces together. This egg cement, as it is called, is by some considered the very best thing you can employ, while others say nothing acts as well as what they call the tree meerschaum cement. This is composed of garlic, which is crushed and worked into a dough; it is then rubbed into the two fractures, which are drawn very closely together and bound with fine iron wire and boiled in sufficient milk for half an hour, keeping the fracture well covered in the milk all the time.

THE MAN WHO'S AFRAID.

I've paid close heed to the ways of men,
I've observed what the world calls luck,
I have silently marveled, now and then,
At the potent power of pluck;
And this as a bit of truth I hail,
A sentence that's worth one's heed:
The man who is always afraid he'll fail
Don't stand much show to succeed!

Quaker Canned Goods

We have finished packing Corn and Tomatoes for this year. Taking the season altogether it has been the most favorable for quality we have ever experienced, the weather being about perfect all through the season for maturing vegetables in splendid condition. This applies to all lines, commencing with Peas and running right along into Beans, Corn and Tomatoes. With the fine quality of canned goods this season and the moderate prices there should be an enormous increase in the sales over previous years. While the pack has been large it does not exceed in our estimation the pack of two years ago in any line. Of course, we cannot speak for the whole country, but we know this applies to our pack. Judging from this we believe every case of Corn, Tomatoes, Peas and Beans packed will go into consumption before new goods come on the market next year. The fine quality of the goods alone this year over previous years should make an enormous increase in consumption, to say nothing of the much lower price the consumer can buy goods compared to the last two years. We packed thirteen thousand cases of Sugar and Cream Corn. This is a new line for us and is as fine in quality as the name denotes. We expect with this 13,000 cases sprinkled between the two oceans to lay the foundation for a trade in this line that will take the entire capacity of one of our factories next year to cater to.

It's No Longer a Theory It's a Fact that Old Homestead Brand canned goods are incomparably the finest canned goods ever put on the Canadian market.

We Had a Theory that the fruit and vegetables grown in the fertile Picton district, put up by the best processor in the business, under condition of the most scrupulous cleanliness, would outclass any other canned goods on the market.

We Turned that Theory Into a Fact

We put up our fruits and vegetables in the stoutest tin and the handsomest labels, and we named them The Old Homestead Brand.

Then we began to tell the trade about Old Homestead Brand. The trade caught on, so that this year we had to double our capacity. The trade continued to catch on and are still catching on, because they find that The Old Homestead Brand are the kind of goods that hold old customers and bring in new ones.

The Old Homestead Brand are now handled by the best grocers all over Canada.

TARIFF COMMISSION IN MONTREAL

LAST week, on the 7th, 8th, 10th and 11th insts. the Tariff Commission met in the board room of the Board of Trade, Montreal. Hon. Mr. Fielding, Finance Minister, presided. Associated with him were the Hon. Mr. Paterson, Minister of Customs, and Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Inland Revenue.

At the first session of the Commission the wholesale grocery interests were heard, represented by Mr. L. E. Geoffrion, of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Mr. C. A. Chouillion and Mr. C. H. Binks.

The grocers, representing some of the largest importers, asked that raisins, currants, etc., be placed under the same classification as teas and coffees, that is, if imported direct from place of growth they be allowed to enter on such a basis as will prevent their re-importation from the United States. In the case of teas and coffees they are allowed to enter free when direct from the place of growth, whereas if brought in from the United States on other than a direct bill of lading they are subject to a duty of ten per cent. ad valorem.

The Americans, they claimed, utilized Canada as a slaughter market, and thus created unfair competition.

Interest of Shippers.

Hon. Mr. Paterson pointed out that the French treaty prohibited the altering of this Act so far as regards that country ; as far as other countries were concerned a change was possible. The Minister also brought up the question as to whether the wholesale grocers did not favor direct importation through Canadian ports on British or Canadian bottoms.

Messrs. C. O. Chouillion and L. E. Geoffrion stated that they were not opposed, only so far as there might not be sufficiently good facilities. They would be satisfied if the Government would so adjust matters that goods of this class could be shipped through from place of growth via the United States or any other country on through bills of lading. This would prevent the breaking of bulk in such centres as New York and do away with the competition which was undesirable.

Mr. Fielding : "Your resolution as presented does not go to build up Canadian shipping."

Hon. Mr. Brodeur : "Who is going to benefit by your proposal ? The shipping men of Canada would not benefit. Have you any objection to encouraging the Canadian shipping industry ?"

To this the deputation replied that they had no objection to Canadian shipping getting the business provided they could handle it.

Olives and Sardines.

Mr. C. H. Binks, of C. H. Binks & Co., asked for a change regarding the duties on olives and sardines. There is at present a duty of 20 per cent. on "green olives in natural state." This, said Mr. Binks, was a commodity which does not exist, because after picking, olives are put in brine.

He suggested that the regulation be amended to read, "Olives otherwise than in bottles or such packages, 20 per cent. ; in bottles, 35 per cent." Mr. Binks produced models of "boxes," "halves" and "quarters," set down as sizes in the Customs regulations. No such sizes as "boxes" or "halves" exist and on "quarter" boxes there is a duty of 2 cents a box on "quarters." When the size was established European packers made a box known as an "American quarter." This was too large for ordinary consumption, and the style of box imported is an eighth size. Yet there was no cognizance of this in the regulations, and the duty of 2 cents is imposed on boxes costing five cents. This box retailed at 12½ cents, and Mr. Binks considered that a reduction or rebate commensurate with the size of the box would mean a gain to the consumer of 2½ cents, as the retail price would fall to ten cents a box.

The Sugar Industry.

At the evening session Mr. Thomas Montgomery, of Thos. Montgomery & Son, importers of nuts, fruits, sugars, etc., appeared before the Commission, complaining that the enactment of the dumping clause had practically killed his firm's sugar trade and asked for redress.

The firm's sales during 1903 amounted to almost 4,000,000 lbs., in 1904, about 2,000,000 lbs., and the present year practically nothing.

Mr. Montgomery's contention was that under the dumping clause, the sugar he imported should now come in without the 50 per cent. extra duty being enforced. The Act declared that when ad valorem duty amounted to 50 per cent. no special duty would be enforced.

The imposition of the dumping clause is taken advantage of by Canadian refiners, who already enjoy heavy protection, placing a duty on the raw article of 48 cents per hundred pounds, against $1.26 per hundred on the refined article.

The public interest in the matter was thus shown by Mr. Montgomery : Centrifugals, 96 deg. test, are to-day quoted on the New York market at $3.50 per hundred pounds. Duty on West Indian sugar, which our refiners use, is $1.89, making cost by them of $1.61 ; add extra freight to Canada, say 10 per cent., and Canadian duty of 48 cents, make cost to them $2.20 per hundred, against $3.50 to American refiners. The refiners' price to-day is $4.40 per hundred pounds, or $4.30 net ; Canadian price, $4.30, less 5 per cent., or $4.09 net—so that while the American refiners pay $1.30 per hundred pounds more for raw materials than the Canadian refiner, the difference in selling price is only 26 cents, thus making the Canadian public pay in proportion to cost nearly one cent a pound above the American public.

"I am not indisposed," said Mr. Montgomery, "to a fair protection, but think our refiners have too much."

These sugars, he told the members of the Commission, were bought in the open market at Hamburg, and he could not understand how they could rightly come under the dumping Act.

Government Will Investigate.

After receiving all the particulars, Mr. Fielding stated that Mr. Montgomery had apparently a very good case. However, the market prices at the time of purchase governed the workings of this Act. It was a matter of detail with the department. Mr. Paterson assured Mr. Montgomery that he would have the matter investigated at once.

Dried Fruits.

Mr. Montgomery also suggested that while they were about tariff revision, it would simplify matters very much if all foreign dried fruits and nuts were placed upon the same scale of duty. For instance, filberts paid 2 cents per pound and other nuts 3 cents. Some fruits paid 1 cent per pound and others 2 or 3. He did not care what the duty was made so long as it was uniform.

The Friday afternoon session was taken up by the Tobacco Growers' Association, the spokesmen being Messrs. L. V. Labelle, L. O. Dugas, M.P., and J. A. Dupuis.

Mr. Labelle frankly declared that the planters had tasted of protection, and had found it so good a thing that they wanted a great deal more of it.

"We cannot but hope," said Mr. Labelle, "in view of the eminently satisfactory results attained by the revision of the tariff in 1897, as recommended by a similar commission, that our further representations will be equally well received."

What the planters asked was (1) a further duty of 20 cents per pound on all foreign raw leaf tobacco imported into Canada for manufacturing purposes ; (2) a uniform and single color of stamp for affixing on goods the product of the manufactories in any form — whether cigar, tobacco, cigarette or snuff ; (3) that a single license system be adopted for all such manufactories under control of the excise.

The present position was described in answer to the following interrogations : Has Canadian tobacco proven its claim as a marketable commodity since the tariff of 1897 ?

Is Canadian tobacco inferior in quality ?

Is further protection now desirable or opportune ?

The first question was answered from statistics, which showed that in 1896 the fiscal year prior to the ten-cent tax on foreign leaf, the manufacture of Canadian leaf amounted to only 590,283 pounds, and the returns for the fiscal year ending 30th June last showed that 4,986,565 pounds of Canadian and combined tobaccos had been made and sold.

As to whether the tobacco had improved in quality and could undergo sufficient further improvement it was stated that all who had had an opportunity of inspecting the successive crops in Western Ontario and Quebec were agreed that they had improved materially in quality. This was due solely to better knowledge gained by the farmer through practical experience in planting, cultivating, curing and handling his crop.

The third question was answered by drawing conclusions from the two foregoing answers. Whatever difficulties they had was due to some defective arrangements in the law and regulations governing the industry and detrimental to the interests of the growers.

For that reason it was asked that the present regulations requiring separate factories and separate distinctive stamps for this class of goods should be abolished, and the regulations simplified, with a single stamp and single license.

In answer to Mr. Fielding, that the 20 per cent. of increased duty asked for was in addition to the 10 per cent. now received. This would bring the duty up from 35 to 55.

"The duty you ask for would be equivalent to 100 per cent. on the value of the article. How would you like 100 per cent. on your agricultural implements?"

Mr. Labelle: "But the increase of duty would mean in this case that the price would be still lower, because by keeping out a large proportion of the foreign product, the public would be able to have a good domestic article at a lower price than they pay for the foreign one."

Mr. Brodeur: "Don't you think the increase you are asking for is rather stiff?"

Mr. Labelle: "Possibly; but we are only praying for it." (Laughter.)

The Pickle Industry.

Mr. John Carsley, president of the Ozo Company, Limited, Montreal, at the Friday evening session of the Commission appeared on behalf of the Canadian pickle manufacturers. Mr. Carsley asked that a duty of 40 per cent. he imposed on all pickles coming from Great Britain and from other foreign countries in proportion.

He contended that Great Britain was able to manufacture pickles much cheaper than Canada, and for that reason the Canadian manufacturers were in urgent need of protection.

A statement was read showing that there were twenty pickle factories in Canada, having a capital of $165,000, employing 225 hands, with annual output of $230,000, and paying wages amounting to $65,000.

It was argued that the pickle industry in Canada was in a very bad way and that as matters stood now the manufacturers were practically forced to sell at a loss. The preferential tariff was held to be mainly responsible for this state of affairs, as under it Great Britain was exporting pickles into this country in vast quantities, and figures were quoted to substantiate this contention.

The competition from the United States was also somewhat severely felt, but this applied only to certain grades of pickles. Under the circumstances the pickle industry was falling off very rapidly, and something should be done to protect it. It was pointed out that it deserved encouragement, as it helped the farmers and as everything used in connection with it was grown in Canada. Besides this, Mr. Carsley argued that with proper protection the manufacturers hoped to become exporters of this commodity and everything considered it was only right that protection should be afforded the manufacturers.

Before concluding his case Mr. Carsley pointed out that it would not only be necessary or advisable to impose a protective duty on the imported article, but it would also be necessary to instruct the farmer to grow the better grades of vegetables, to grow them in a scientific manner, if the Canadian manufacturers ever wanted to compete with the British article.

In answer to an inquiry from Mr. Fielding, Mr. Carsley stated that the best grades of pickles could be manufactured in this country, but that if they did not do this, it was the merchants who were to blame, the latter as a rule giving the imported article the preference.

NOTES WORTH NOTING.

CANADA has exported $30,000,000 worth of cheese and butter during the past year. The mild and gentle cow is only second to our wheat fields as a source of prosperity.

A conference with regard to the work of the dairy instructors was held recently between G. H. Barr, London, chief instructor, G. P. Publow, instructor for Eastern Ontario, and Mr. Putnam, superintendent of the department. It was announced that the quality and quantity of cheese was never equalled in any previous year. Dairymen throughout the country are beginning to see the necessity for up-to-date sanitary equipment, and large sums of money have been spent during the year on modern curing and cooling rooms in many factories.

The make of cheese in the Maritime Provinces is now over. The stocks that are being held are of very fine quality. The sale of cheese at the Charlottetown board last Friday at 11 7-16c was rather a surprise to the trade, as they were looking for lower prices in line with the Upper Provinces markets. Dealers are looking for a firmer market on this article from now on until Spring, as the stocks on the other side are undoubtedly small.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

W. H. DUNN, Montreal, spent a few days last week in Quebec among the trade. He reports most satisfactory business, in fact one of the best trips he has experienced there. All the jobbers and importers and wholesale houses are reported unusually busy, indicating that Quebec grocery trade is in a flourishing condition. Mr. Dunn left for New York on Tuesday, making his semi-annual trip to that market.

David McDonald, grocer, Hamilton, Ont., is dead.

The Metropolitan Bank has opened a branch at Bancroft, Ont.

Paschal Poirer, flour mill, Shediac, N.B., has been burnt out.

A. M. Anderson, general merchant, Franklin, Man., sustained loss by fire.

John Pugsley, of Pugsley, Dingman & Co., Toronto, was a visitor to Montreal this week. Mr. Pugsley reports Comfort Soap as more in demand than ever.

Joseph Irving, Toronto representative for W. H. Dunn, was a visitor to Montreal at the close of last week. Mr. Irving reports business particularly good in the west.

R. J. Sharp, representative for W. P. Downey, Montreal, has returned from a trip through Western Ontario. Mr. Sharp reports trade in a very flourishing condition.

William Wilson, well known in the cheese trade as well as in curing circles, died at his home, 173 Metcalfe avenue, Westmount, recently, at the age of sixty-eight. Mr. Wilson had been confined to his house since last May with cancer of the stomach. He had been gradually sinking from this affliction, so that his death was not unexpected.

J. M. Hughes, of the Bailey Broom Co., Kingston, Ont., was met by The Grocer in Montreal last week. Mr. Hughes reported business most satisfactory and intimated that owing to the strong advance in broom corn manufacturers would be compelled to raise prices in the near future. Some broom makers had already raised their prices.

The building season in Port Arthur has been a most active one, and many creditable buildings have been erected, but one of the most handsome structures completed this Fall is that of Hy. Chausse, grocer, who has built a solid brick block on the corner of Cumberland and Ambrose streets. The building is 35x60, and is divided into two stores on the first floor, the second floor being fitted up for offices. The block was completed last week and Mr. Chausse has moved his grocery business into the corner store. The furnishings are all new, the counters being of quarter cut oak. He has a large stock of excellent goods displayed on the shelves, and the basement and a large warehouse at the rear are filled with merchandise.

NEW PRODUCE COMPANY.

As was mentioned in this paper three weeks ago, a strong new wholesale produce company is being organized in Winnipeg. It will be under the active management of Geo. W. Prout, who was formerly manager of the produce department of J. Y. Griffin & Co. Application has been made for a Dominion charter, and if the request is granted in all details the business will be conducted under the name of the Dominion Produce Co., Limited. The new company will be capitalized at $100,000, and it should be in a strong position to compete for the western trade.

J. Y. Griffin will be president of the new company, and J. Griffin will be vice-president. Kenneth McKenzie, of Kenneth McKenzie & Co., wholesale grocers, and D. W. Bole, M.P., president of the Bole Drug Co., are directors. Premises have been secured at 127 Princess street, Winnipeg, and business was commenced this week.

HEAVY OYSTER SHIPMENTS.

Notwithstanding the reported scarcity of oysters on Prince Edward Island, heavy shipments are being made, the boats running to the mainland carrying hundreds of barrels each trip. These oysters were all for the upper Canadian market, where the demand is, as usual, good. The best hand picked oysters are quoted in Halifax at $7 per barrel.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Nov. 15, 1905.

THE cheese market has had a further sharp advance in prices since our last report, and it is most remarkable this year that the highest prices of the season should be paid for the poorest quality, viz., late made October and November cheese.

Undoubtedly the cheese is wanted in Great Britain and the latest reports speak of a short make in New Zealand. If this proves to be true, we must certainly look for exceptionally high prices during the Winter months.

Shipments during last week were very light. Reports from British markets, while showing an advancing tendency, are not up to our ideas of value and holders here in many instances refuse to name a selling price, feeling sure of higher prices in the future.

Meanwhile our Canadian merchants feel confident of the situation so that they would rather buy than sell at present market prices. The situation is undoubtedly "bullish." Stocks are light as compared with former years, and trade conditions in Great Britain are favorable for a good consumptive demand, and while present high prices would or should be a mark of caution, there seems to be nothing in sight at the moment to prevent a further advance.

Although the retail prices in Great Britain have been raised about two pence per pound, the demand has not yet been checked materially and the supplies, as far as we have figures at hand, are none too large for the ordinary trade requirements and the present outlook is certainly for higher prices.

Nevertheless it is just as well to be cautious for merchants. There is certainly a limit to any advance in prices, and no matter how strong the situation may appear, there are other articles of food to be considered besides cheese, and when the price of one article gets too high the consumption will usually get on another article of better value.

If, as it appears at present, the supplies of cheese are short for a natural consumptive demand, the prices are likely to advance, but when the consumer finds that he has to pay a fancy price for cheese, he may stop buying it and take something else instead. In this case cheese would become an article of luxury instead of an article of necessity and the consumption would fall off.

This is not what we want. We produce so much a year and we want this production consumed. Cheese is good, wholesome food. We produce a large quantity every year and we certainly have no desire to have the demand for it diminish, but fancy prices might curtail the consumption unless other articles of food advance correspondingly.

This has been an exceptional season for dairy products, both for cheese and butter. The farmers have done remarkably well, but the merchants on the whole have not had a profitable season. Prices here have ruled high and the lack of confidence in the United Kingdom has prevented our merchants from making a fair profit on their country purchases, and on the whole there is a good deal of dissatisfaction with this year's business.

Butter, as far as the export business is concerned, is getting almost out of the question. Great Britain is commencing to get butter from Australia, our own supplies are running very short and prices here are advancing, while British markets actually show a declining tendency. The fact is we really have no butter to spare for export and Great Britain is getting supplies from other sources. This means that exporters of butter may now expect a dull time until the new season opens next year.

Exports of butter since May 1st show an increase of over 70,000 packages as compared with the same period last year. Even if our production this year has been heavier to the same extent, we must run short in our own requirements and higher prices will undoubtedly prevail later on.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By Our London, Eng., Correspondent.

November 4, 1905.

Butter.

THE demand for Canadian butter during the past week has been on the whole, satisfactory. Particularly is this the case for brands of "choicest," which at the present moment is scarce. Arrivals of Canadian butter during the past few days have been small, and the total receipts for October show a decrease of some 15,000 cwts, as compared with October, 1904. This is to be expected when the comparatively small stocks of butter in Canada are taken into consideration. There has been some easing off in price, and quotations are now 2s. lower, being 100s. to 102s. for finest and 106s. to 108s. for choicest. These prices, however, are 8s. more than was asked for finest at this time last year, and 10s. more for choicest.

Cheese.

There has been no display of activity for Canadian cheese on this market during the past week. The demand may be described as fair and prices remain practically unchanged at 57s. for choicest white and 58s. for choicest colored. The total stocks of Canadian cheese in London, held by and for importers, are about 200,000 boxes. This figure, it must be noted, is not exact, but may be relied upon as an approximate estimation, founded upon good sources of information.

Some very pleasant comment was made lately as to the quality of Canadian cheese, particularly the September make. One importer, of long experience, said that some of the cheese he had been recently handling was of finer quality than anything he had previously received from the Dominion. It was almost perfect. This same man, when discussing the outlook for the next few weeks, remarked that, although he had heard that stocks in Canada were not large, still he did not believe that there would be any material decrease of supplies for this market, but, if there was any advance in price, he thought that it woud not affect trade any more than the present quotations. However that may be, it must not be overlooked that the present prices undoubtedly are curtailing the consumption, for, as was reported some two weeks back, all the large retail concerns have advanced the price to seven pence. Whatever may be said to the contrary, there can be no doubt that this will affect consumption in a greater or lesser degree. Moreover, other food-stuffs, particularly meats, are becoming plentiful just now. When the c.i.f. prices of Canadian cheese are considered, it will be seen that the dealers and large retailers are quite justified in advancing their prices as they have.

Bacon.

In reviewing the position held by Canadian bacon on this market, one must take into consideration not the opinions of the packers' agents alone, but also of the dealers and large retailers. It is not surprising to find that the opinions of these two classes are of a very conflicting character, for they look at the matter from entirely different standpoints. But there is something to be learned from both. In the matter of price they disagree entirely, but in the matter of packing and quality they have, for the most part, a great deal in common.

From the dealers' and large retailers' point of view, there is much cause for dissatisfaction. There are several dealers who contend that the packers' agents are forcing prices of Canadian bacon nearer to the prices of Danish and Irish than the quality will justify. Such as these are loud in their protests, and say that with prices for Canadian bacon so high they prefer to leave it alone whenever it is possible. It simply does not pay them to handle it, for they either have to put the price of Canadian bacon up to nearly the same figure as Danish or Irish, and let the public purchase or not, as they choose, or else they must be content to sell at a lower figure, making little or no profit. That is the general feeling amongst dealers. There are some, of course, who handle certain brands of Canadian bacon which are proverbial for their good quality. Such as these are quite content, but those who receive the exceedingly small and "skinny" pigs, which some Canadian packers are sending over have real cause to complain.

The bacon agents' views are different They do not deny that prices are very high, and they agree that, on the whole, lower prices would bring better business But at the same time they are in business to get just the best prices possible, whether it be for full-sized or small pigs. Moreover, most agents report good business, from which one may gather that dealers, in spite of their complaints, are buying Canadian bacon in such quantities as short supplies will permit. The agents, too, agree that much improvement could be made in the packing and feeding of Canadian pigs, and they frequently place themselves in communication with packers in order to emphasize this point, but the shortage of what might be termed raw material in Canada is a drawback which is fully realized.

The trouble, such as it is, evidently lies in the fact that agents here are asking prices which do not appeal to the dealer, and also that there is a good deal of undersized bacon being recieved which does not seem when compared to Danish or Irish, worth the price.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Provisions—Trade in provisions has continued on a steady basis during the week under review. The arrivals have been only in moderate quantity and barely sufficient to supply the demand manifested.

Prices generally are firm with a slight weakening in lard and rolled bacon.

Beef is fairly plentiful and arriving in excellent condition, with previous quotations ruling firm.

Dressed hogs continue to arrive in fair quantity and previous quotations are well maintained.

Butter—There has been no marked improvement in the arrival of butter since our last issue and it is not expected to show any material change until cheese making is finally shut down.

Creamery butter has shown a hardening aspect and dairy prints have advanced from one to two points. Large rolls are added to our list, the present quotation being 20c.

Cheese—The domestic market has shown very little activity, in fact, it might be accurately described as dull. Reports from the various cheese boards have had the effect of still further strengthening quotations, although little business has been effected. Spot stocks are considered light and although it is believed there are good stocks on hand they are mainly carried by speculative holders. Our quotations show an advance of from 1-2c. to 1c. advance.

Poultry—The advent of cold weather the early part of this week has made an improvement in the demand for poultry of all kinds and wholesale houses report better enquiry.

Turkeys are scarce and quoted at 14c. to 15c.

Geese in fair demand at 10c. per lb.

Ducks are in short supply and quoted from 12 1-2c. to 13c.

Chickens are plentiful at 10c. to 12c., and fowls, 7c. to 9c.

Butter—The market holds a strong position. This is largely attributable to good local demand and the anxiety for dealers to stock up. Stocks are light with a good demand for choice creamery. Fancy Townships are quoted 23 1-2c. to 23 3-4c., choice 23 1-4c. to 23 1-2c. and good to fine, 22 3-4c. to 23 1-4c.

Eggs—The market continues steady. Receipts are very light. Exporters are rushing out all they can before close of navigation. No. 1 fresh are quoted at 21c. and select fresh at 24c. to 25c. Cold storage, 20c. to 21c. Montreal pickled, 20c. to 21c. and Western, 19c. to 20c.

Produce—Eggs continue to attract attention by their scarcity. It is almost impossible to obtain the strictly fresh laid article and the predicted retail price of 75c has been paid in the last week. On the New Westminster market the lowest price to jobbers was 55c. and few eggs offering at that figure. Case stock is worth 28 to 30c. and not too much on hand.

Butter— Is fairly plentiful, both of local origin and imported from east of the mountains. The local stock is now quoted at 30c. for creamery, strictly fresh made.

Poultry—Chickens are in liberal supply, and sell on the market at $3 and $4 per dozen for broilers, and $5 to $7 for large fowls. Ducks bring $8 to $10 per dozen, and geese 75c. to $1.25 each.

Provisions—In both barrel pork and beef quite full prices rule.

There is steady business in pure lard and the market is largely supplied with American goods. Prices are high. Refined lard is still low and selling freely.

Smoked meats higher.

Fresh beef is low particularly domestic, which is very freely offered.

Lamb is still held at full prices.

Mutton is dull. Very little veal seen.

While more pork is offered, full prices rule. We quote:

TOUR OF THE WEST BY A PROMINENT PACKER.

MR. J. W. WINDSOR, Montreal, the well-known packer of lobsters and other sea fruit, has just returned from a six weeks' trip to the Canadian Northwest, British Columbia, and the Pacific Coast States. In an interview with The Grocer representative, Mr. Windsor stated that, though a Canadian, and with a good knowledge of the western country and trade, he was forced to admit that this trip was an eye-opener to him. "It is my first trip," said Mr. Windsor, "beyond the Great Lakes, and I was agreeably surprised that even my sanguine anticipations were exceeded by what I saw in the way of trade and development of our great western country. The city of Winnipeg, of whose development and growth our papers have been so full of laudatory reports, impressed me very much. I found the merchants pushing, up-to-date in every respect, and I received a most pleasant reception at their hands, and everyone full of that optimism that augurs well for the future of Canada's great inland centre. Calgary, my next stopping place, also impressed me very favorably as a wholesale distributing centre of great possibilities. The merchants and citizens generally have every confidence of a great future for their town. Many of the Winnipeg, and several Western Ontario, wholesale houses have established branches in Calgary, and all of them are doing a large trade. In Vancouver I was very well received, indeed, and found business most satisfactory and the merchants all reporting a good season's trade. The salmon fisheries, as well as the lumber industries, of the past season have made business very good in Vancouver. I went up the Fraser River as far as Steveston, where I inspected the salmon canning industry, which I found most interesting, being a canner myself of eastern water fish. Victoria also struck me as bound to have a great future. From Victoria I visited Seattle and Portland, in both of which places I found business very brisk, and made numerous satisfactory sales.

"While in British Columbia I was informed that a new departure had been made in the past season on the Coast by the canning factories in the manner of disposing of their products to the English markets. In former years it was customary for the canners to ship their goods to the British market largely on consignment to commission houses and brokers in Liverpool, London, Glasgow, and other centres. After arrival of the goods there disposal was made and returns sent to the Canadian canners. Often many months would lapse becore account sales would be rendered, and these account sales frequently were not of such satisfactory character as to make this business profitable to packers on this side. It appears that the British Columbia canners this year adopted the principle of having British buyers visit the canneries, inspect the stock there and arrange for settlement. I met several agents of large English houses making their inspections. This new rule no doubt will work out to good advantage of both parties, as the Canadian canner will get full returns for his pack and there will be no opportunity for complaints on part of English buyers. There is no doubt that the sending of inspectors by the large English importers will be to their advantage, as they have a personal opportunity of visiting the various canneries on the Coast and making a selection of such goods as will suit their market."

Asked as to the condition of the lobster trade this year, Mr. Windsor stated that although the catch was shorter than last year, he had been able to secure a fair amount, sufficient to keep his brands prominent before the trade. It was very pleasant to him to have to report good sales on his western trip, and particularly was he pleased to mention that he had received a very satisfactory order from Constantinople, Turkey, as well as large orders from other continental trade centres.

1906 B.M.A. FOOD EXHIBITION.

The seventy-fourth annual meeting of the British Medical Association will be held at Toronto, Canada, from Tuesday, August 21st, to Friday, August 24th, 1906, inclusive.

Arrangements are being made to hold the usual exhibition of foods, drugs, surgical instruments, etc., in connection with this meeting, and a convenient building will be secured for the accommodation of such exhibits.

The 1906 Exhibition promises to be one of the largest and most successful in the annals of the association. A good attendance of medical men from this country is anticipated, while in addition the Canadian Medical Association will meet at Toronto during the same week.

A DISTINCTION.

Horatio G. Herrick, of Lawrence, Mass., for many years county sheriff, took a lively interest in the schools of his home town. Shortly after Garfield's death Mr. Herrick visited one of the schools and made an address upon the life of the statesman. He asked:

"Now, can any of you tell me what a statesman is?"

A little hand went up, and a little girl replied:

"A statesman is a man who makes speeches."

"Hardly that," answered Mr. Herrick, who loved to tell this story. "For instance, I sometimes make speeches, and yet I am not a statesman."

The little hand went up again, and the answer came, triumphantly:

"I know: a statesman is a man who makes good speeches."

must not be confounded with ordinary Salt. In quality, it is as high above the common Salt of trade as can be imagined. It won't cake—it is pure, white, dry. There is no impurity in it because of the care taken in manufacturing. It is sifted, not ground. Every particle of it is a separate Salt Crystal. It pays to sell Windsor Table Salt, because it is so good, clean, pure—
it is all Salt.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PACKING BUTTER.

THE Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland has issued a leaflet in the course of which it states that the important part that proper packing plays in the marketing of butter can hardly be exaggerated.

Experience has proved that in the present condition of English markets the packing of butter has a considerable influence on the price received.

If butter is to be properly packed it is essential that a clean, dry, well-ventilated and well-lighted store be available for the materials used in the various packages. Damp and dirty stores frequently cause mouldy growth on the wood and parchment, and much injury may thus be done to the butter packed in such materials.

The wood used for butter packages should be thoroughly seasoned and free from odor. For this reason it is recommended that all packages should be made up and well aired some time before their use.

If, after all precaution has been taken, the wood has a strong odor, the bad effects may be lessened by heating the package thoroughly, and painting the interior with a thin coating of melted paraffin wax, using a soft brush for the purpose.

Each package should contain as nearly as possible the quantity required to fill it, as considerable inconvenience and frequent loss are occasioned by the use of insufficiently-filled packages. A filled package travels better than one with room to spare. The quantity of butter to be put into packages should be weighed out accurately, allowing one-half pound extra for a 56-lb. package, and 1 pound for a 112-lb. package.

Small quantities only should be put in at a time, and should be well pressed against the sides and into the corners by a heavy packer. Great care should be taken against creasing the parchment.

The butter when turned out on the shop counter should show perfectly solid and smooth, without holes or crease marks, and showing clean angles. The top should be finished off smooth and flat, and carefully covered with a neat-fitting piece of parchment paper.

If the foregoing instructions are carried out better prices will result, which more than pays for the extra care.

AN IMPERIAL BOARD OF TRADE.

A LARGE meeting of Montreal business men, recently held in the Board of Trade chambers, was addressed by Sir Frederick Pollock and Mr. Geoffrey Drage, who have been visiting this country in the interests of binding more closely together the various parts of the Empire. Although it was frankly admitted that the time is not yet ripe for the formation of any new body, whether it be styled an Imperial Council or anything else, still it will be interesting to note what these gentlemen are aiming ultimately to establish in the way of creating better understanding between the component parts of Britain's domain.

In the first place, if any more formal union is to come about it must be a gradual evolution and come out of business arrangements. And in the process of this evolution there are many practical problems to be solved. The all-British cable must be dealt with; the question of naturalization and that of copyright must be settled, and there should be one uniform commercial law ruling throughout the Empire, consolidated and codified by the Imperial Government. Such an arrangement would remedy the glaring discrepancies which now exist in the insolvency law and the law of patents. It is said that in order to patent any invention throughout the Empire it is necessary to take out no less than twenty-eight distinct patents.

In solving these and similar problems the idea of Imperial co-operation and closer union would work itself out; but without assistance the evolution would be a painfully slow one. And in order to hasten the result it is proposed to make a systematic attempt at getting adequate information to bring about the various reforms suggested. How could this be better accomplished than by establishing an Intelligence Department, which would perform the same function towards civil business as similar Intelligence Departments do towards the army and navy? A competent secretary could be appointed in England, and he should be assisted by an able staff of clerks throughout the Empire. The British House of Commons would, no doubt, be willing to defray the expenses of this system. Furthermore, the conference of Premiers should be revived, and meet periodically under the name of "Imperial Conference," to promote the affairs of the whole Empire. The result of these investigations and deliberations could be incorporated in a uniform statistical blue book for the Empire.

This is a dream of the future, but it is one that could surely be realized, if natural evolution were assisted in some such manner as that described. Canadians will wish the project every success.

THE ONTARIO HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

THAT the annual meeting of the above society being held at the time of writing in Toronto is one of exceptional success is confirmed by all who visit it.

Each recurring Autumn has seen the annual fruit, flower and honey show attended with increasing prosperity, and the Exhibition so auspiciously opened on Tuesday afternoon should easily prove the most notable of any yet held.

The floral display is one of exceeding beauty. It is doubtful if such a fine lot of chrysanthemums has been before shown in Toronto. The orchid display is also very fine, and shows some unique varieties. Other flowers are in equal beauty and profusion.

The fruit show is one of particular interest, and reveals a high state of cultivation. To award the prizes will be no easy matter. Of still further interest are the various systems of packing and packages, which present an object lesson of no mean order. It is intended to hold demonstrations of packing at intervals during the four days' Exhibition.

There are samples of the standard cases used in British Columbia and California, some packed in the manner adopted at those places.

Vegetables, too, are well in evidence, notwithstanding it is their first appearance at this show.

There is no doubt the Exhibition must be conducive to the education of all who visit the show, and it is to be hoped that every available opportunity will be utilized for instruction. The fruit industries of Canada have reached a crucial point in their history, and it is of the first importance that not only should every care be given to the cultivation, but that systems of packing and crating should be uniformly correct, and there is no better way of educating the growers than by an Exhibition of this character.

The show itself presents an exceptional display of beauty and attraction, and will be a source of pleasure and profit to even the mere ordinary visitor.

There is, however, one point which should be seriously debated before another season comes round, and that is as to whether a more suitable building could not be secured. The Massey Hall is, of course, a fine building and very popular, but scarcely suited to such an Exhibition as the fruit, flour and honey show. A more adaptable building could surely be found, where the whole display might be on one level, and laid out to artistic effect throughout. A suitable hall could be found in the Armories, if it were possible to secure it for the purpose. Ample space would be available, and a portion could be well marked out for such objects as demonstrations and informal lectures on the science and art of packing various fruits, and the increased profit which accrues in doing so on a correct basis.

THE TRADING STAMP ACT AND ITS PURPORT.

CORRESPONDENCE still continues to come to hand from retailers who are anxious to know whether or not to continue their respective coupon systems.

Last week we gave in our editorial columns the full text of the new Trading Stamp Act, and from a careful perusal of the four clauses it contains, our readers should be able to measure their systems of premiums by its text.

The first clause in its sub-division (a) gives clearly and concisely the description of what it is intended to cover under the expression "trading stamp," and reads as follows :

"(a) The expression 'trading stamps' includes, besides TRADING STAMPS commonly so called, ANY FORM OF CASH RECEIPT, RECEIPT, COUPON, PREMIUM TICKET OR OTHER DEVICE."

The words in capitals are so comprehensive that we question very much whether any device can be invented that could possibly be considered outside its bane. Take for instance the word "premium." It will be found that that word alone embraces in itself wellnigh every device. It means "a prize," "a reward," "a bonus," "a fee," "interest paid," or anything of the nature of an "inducement." So that it will at once be evident that almost the whole of the systems in vogue at the time of the passing of the Act are effectually assailed. Further, if there were any doubt the closing words remove it : " * * designed or intended to be given to the purchaser of goods by the vendor thereof or his employe or agent, and to represent a DISCOUNT on the price of such goods OR A PREMIUM to the purchaser thereof, WHICH IS REDEEMABLE either * * "

"Which is redeemable" clinches the question completely.

The Act next deals with the persons giving any such trading stamp, and includes any person selling or connected with the selling or manufacture. In the case of the grocer, the word "vendor" or his agent touches him distinctly. The latter paragraph 3 of clause 1 is a very important one and will be dealt with presently.

Sub-division (b) (c) then proceeds to explain the meaning of certain terms used.

We now come to clause 2, which deals more particularly with the relation between wholesaler and retailer, or any corporation and the retailer, and fixes the amounts of penalty.

Clause 3 deals directly with the retailer and fixes the penalty as against the retailer who actually gives the stamps, etc., to the public.

Clause 4 then proceeds to indict and penalize the purchaser, or in other words the general public, who purchases and who accepts trading stamps, etc., from their storekeeper.

It is clear from the foregoing that the Act is most comprehensive, dealing first with any and every description of coupon, second with any and every person concerned in the selling and issuing, third with any and every person concerned in the receiving of such coupons, and lastly with any executive officer of a company who acquiesces in their being used.

Provision was made in the Act so that any coupons, etc., issued before the 1st November could be dealt with by the vendor, but at that date the law came into active operation.

We now go back to paragraph 3 of clause 1, which appears to be the sole exception and which reads :

"But an offer, printed or marked by the manufacturer upon any wrapper, box, or receptacle in which the goods are sold, of a premium or reward for the return of such wrapper, box, or receptacle is NOT a trading stamp within the meaning of this section."

It would seem from this that manufacturers whose coupons form part of the wrapper or receptacle are exempt from the provisions of the Act, and that this form of premium is allowed to continue.

Our advice, therefore, to those who have written us and to our readers at large is to break at once with the whole business of trading stamps of whatever kind, as in our judgment the reading of the Act makes the giving of trading stamps, receipts, coupons, premium tickets, or any such device, which is redeemable, clearly and distinctly an indictable offence.

LOOKS FORWARD TO THE GROCER.

Extract from a letter from Alfred Powis, Manufacturers' Agent, 141 Bannatyne Ave., E. Winnipeg :

"I am a subscriber to THE CANADIAN GROCER and look forward each week to its arrival, as I think it one of the best mediums for keeping posted about things of interest to the trade throughout Canada."

THE-OUT-OF-TOWN TRADE.

IF there is any trade to be drawn to your store from surrounding towns, you ought to make every effort to get as much of it as you can.

People often have a lot more faith in a store located somewhere else than they do in their own local stores. No one knows why—it is the old principle of the prophet without honor in his own country.

If you advertise in the surrounding towns, you will create the impression that your store is a good one, or it could not expect to attract trade from other centres—and you will find shoals of people who will take you at your word.

If you are the first man in your place to reach out after this outside trade, you will get a good start on your competitors.

The big department stores in the larger cities have long recognized the value of this plan, and you will find that they advertise just as carefully and as persistently in the small local papers in the adjacent territory, as they do in the big city dailies.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION NEWS

"The Canadian Grocer" the Official Organ.

Address all communications for this department to THE CANADIAN GROCER, 511 Union Bank Building, Winnipeg, Man.

OFFICERS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

President, T. J. Lawlor, Killarney, Man.; 1st vice-president, H. C. Hamelin, Lauder, Man.; 2nd vice-president J. D. Baine, Boissevain, Man.; secretary and organizer, W. A. Coulson, Williamson block, Notre Dame avenue, Winnipeg.

Executive A. G. Munro, Morden, Man.; A. E. Hill, Griswold, Man.; W. G. McLaren, Souris, Man.; J. Brown, Neepawa, Man.; R. F. Moore, Cartwright, Man.; F. W. Clingan, Virden, Man.; N. D. McKinnon, Weyburn, Sask.; G. C. Sayles, Elva, Man.; E. H. Glinz, Oak River, Man.; W. Ledoux, Arnaud, Man.

FROM reports received by The Canadian Grocer from all parts of the west it would seem that, speaking generally, the association programme regarding credits is being pretty generally adopted this month by the members. In order to ascertain to what extent the plan was actually being put in force, letters were sent out about the first of the month to dealers in different parts of the west who were known to be members of the association. Upon the whole the replies were very encouraging to those who are interested in seeing the credit evil stamped out. The great majority of the letters received were to the effect that credit had been stopped the first of the month but that it was too early to report how the cash system was working. In most of the letters received there was noticeable an optimistic spirit which augurs well for the success of the movement.

It would be impossible to print all these letters, and hence space is given in this issue only to two or three letters which indicate a state of affairs different from that existing in most western towns. Wm. Chambers, secretary of the Hamiota section, writes The Canadian Grocer as follows under date of November 8th :

"Dear Sirs : Your favor of the 2nd inst. to hand and I beg to reply as follows to the questions you ask about the association work here :

"First, the dealers in this district have made no concerted effort to put in force the no credit programme of the association as the evil in this district is not considered to be so great as to demand it. It is felt that it can be dealt with best by individuals.

"The above being the answer to your first question, your other questions as to the difficulties in introducing the cash system and whether 30 days' accounts are treated as cash require no answer. As to the prospects of the association in this section, they are very good, and with a little 'give and take' from the various parts of the district, I think the organization will work quite harmoniously.

"Yours truly,
"WM. CHAMBERS,
"Secretary Hamiota district of the Association."

Hamiota merchants are fortunate if the credit evil is not of sufficient extent to render drastic measures absolutely necessary. But when there is so little to be accomplished, when there are so few long standing accounts to shut off, why not fall in line with the movement in other parts of the Province and shut off credit during the Winter months ?

In the course of a letter to The Canadian Grocer relating to association affairs, Jas. A. Clare of Neepawa deals with the credit evil and says :

"In my opinion this credit question, in order to be handled effectively, must be handled by the wholesale houses. Just so long as they will scatter goods to any person, giving long dating and constant renewals, so long will these goods in turn be scattered on the same condition by the retailer and it is usually the case that the dealers who can afford it the least are those who take the greatest risks. In many lines the present inducement to retailers is 'the more you buy, the lower the price.' The correct way to get business on a sound financial basis would be for the wholesaler to say, 'Buy only what you can pay cash for, save your discounts, and don't ask for credit.' If this were done it would force out of business many who have no capital or business ability, it would prevent over-stocking, depreciation of value, and heavy tax and insurance bills on dead stock. It would enable those who have heavy investments in business to make a fair return on their capital. It would give the wholesaler less expense for travelers and fewer accounts, but all good healthy ones. It would be a great benefit to all. But it must come from the banks and wholesale houses as they have the remedy in their own hands."

In writing The Canadian Grocer to this effect Mr. Clare said he did so not as secretary of the Neepawa section of the association but as expressing his own individual opinions. His letter directs attention to the fact that without the co-operation of the financial and wholesale interests, the association can not accomplish its objects. If the wholesale houses will recklessly give credit to all comers, long credits by retailers can not be stopped. One man in a town who gives long credits can demoralize the trade in a whole district, and he can do it if he can get unlimited credit from his wholesaler.

But the association have definite assurances of support in this matter from the wholesale houses and a few minutes' conversation with the wholesale men will convince the most skeptical that the jobbers mean business in this matter. A strong effort is being made to collect outstanding accounts and indiscriminate credit is being cut off. In this matter, the retail trade can count upon the effective and enthusiastic support of the wholesale and financial interests.

It is evident that in some parts of the country the trade expect too much of the secretary. Two or three complaints have been received at this office to the effect that the only thing the secretary has done has been to visit their district and collect their fees. Up to the present Mr. Coulson's work has consisted in visiting the merchants, enlisting their support, collecting their fees, and organizing them into local sections with their own secretaries. Evidently some dealers regard the organizer as a Son of Righteousness with healing in his wings and expect him to do the whole work while they look on with folded arms. But the secretary can not stay in any one district to smooth over disputes, nor in view of the immense field which he has yet to cover can he afford the time to re-visit every town where local difficulties arise. Having provided each district with its local organization and its own secretary he is compelled to leave the dealers in each section to work out their own commercial salvation. In most districts the local organizations are working well.

Secretary Coulson is still in the far western Provinces promoting the organization of the association in the newer parts of the country. An encouraging list of new members is promised very soon, probably for next issue.

MR. C. D. PICKFORD ON THE WEST INDIES.

Mr. C. D. Pickford, a member of the firm of Pickford & Black, Halifax, N.S., was a caller at the Toronto office of the Grocer this week. Mr. Pickford spoke well of the prospects of trade with the West Indies, from which place he has but recently returned. He informed The Grocer that his firm had recently added a new steamer to their fleet, expressly for the West Indian trade. There will now be a regular fortnightly service between Jamaica and Halifax, calling at Bermuda and Santiago, taking only seven and a half days. An interesting and very satisfactory feature of this service, and particularly of the new boat referred to, was demonstrated on its first return trip, when out of a cargo including some 2,500 bunches of bananas, only "nine" were found to have ripened on the voyage. This result is considered to speak well for the superior preserving capacity of its storage, and is an important feature, seeing that the bulk of the trade is in eatables needing careful storage, such as fruit, vegetables, flour, etc. The firm have made a special feature of fitting their vessels for fruit traffic. Mr. Pickford intends returning to Jamaica at a not very distant date to take up his firm's interests at that end.

A CAUTION.

Beware of the statement, "Selling below cost." The vital question to the customer is what it costs him, not what you lose. He knows you are not in the business for fun, and if you are continually admitting that you are selling below cost, he is likely to conclude that either you do not know your business well enough to buy right, or that you are deceiving him. In either case his confidence in you is shaken. Better say "We bought them right, you get the benefit."

THE APPRECIATION OF YOUR CUSTOMERS

You Can't Fool the Cook

won its first success in the kitchens of practical housewives. The recipes printed on the boxes were not the conventionally absurd kind, compiled as if for royal households or millionaires' palaces, but were of the common-sense kind. They "worked" and at once became widely popular, popularizing at the same time the "Brantford" brand of Corn Starch.

Ground slowly, without overheating, bolted through silk to microscopic fineness, free from grit or grain and with the delicate aroma and delicious, natural flavor of bottom-land corn retained :

BRANTFORD PREPARED CORN STARCH

was quickly recognized as very different from and superior to other brands.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Ontario Markets.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Nov. 16, 1905.

REPORTS of local trade denote continued slowness. The activity which has been noticeable for some time past is now somewhat abated, most of the outside points having placed their orders for the coming season.

In canned goods there is little of importance to note. Strawberries are practically off the market, the canners having been only able to supply about 50 per cent. Prices, therefore, are merely nominal.

In sugar the market continues on basis of our last report. Trade has been noticeably quiet during the week in review and whilst the general opinion is that prices have reached about bottom there appears to be no indication of any desire to lay in stocks.

In molasses trade has been particularly quiet whilst the activity in syrups has abated, owing to buyers having well stocked up.

Whilst coffee is attracting increased attention there is no great activity to be noted and prices remain on previous basis.

Dried fruits are arriving in good condition and the last direct shipment is expected during the coming week. Immediate trade in these lines, however, is quiet, no fresh orders of any importance being reported.

Rice is showing great activity and supply is barely equal to the demand.

Spice is uninteresting.

Honey has somewhat slowed down in demand, the activity which has been ruling for some time having settled down. Prices, however, are remaining firm at previous quotations.

Beans are showing fair activity, with prices stiffening to advance.

Tapioca whilst in active demand is difficult to supply as spot stocks are very low.

Fresh fish has been very active, with prices ruling extremely firm.

Dried and cured fish are unsatisfactory on account of buyers being unable to secure shipment from points of production. Orders are in plenty but are awaiting execution.

The hide market still shows a more satisfactory standing than was manifested at earlier dates. The United States markets continue to manifest great firmness. Quotations still advancing and with good business being done. The effect of this on the Canadian market is to strengthen the present position. Arrivals are barely equal to the demand and no stocks are expected to accumulate until a material break in prices occurs.

Canned Goods—There has been no development of importance during week under review. Strawberries have practically left the market, since packers reported short deliveries of 50 per cent. Other lines continue unchanged. We quote:

Sugar—Showing an uninteresting market. The drop reported in our last issue has not had the effect of strengthening the market. During the past three months there has been a constantly declining market, the total drop during that period being equal to about $1.50 per barrel. The general opinion is that bottom has been about reached, yet no disposition is shown to lay in stocks, partly due to the fact that the heavy season has now passed, and that all that is expected is a steady consumptive demand. There are some, however, who think that there will be some further drop before markets improve. From outside points reports denote weakness and uncertainty. We quote :

Coffee—Whilst trade has been fairly active, there are no great signs of advancing demand. There is little doubt but that the consumption is increasing, but on a steady progressive basis. Reports from New York denote greater activity and a stronger market for price. Cable advices were received from Santos reporting drought, unfavorable for the growing crops. European markets reported steady. Brazilian markets holding steady and firm.

Tea — The local tea market has been less active. Wholesalers have shown small interest during the week under review, and trade generally is on the quiet side.

The London market reports that in Indians the somewhat heavy offerings, an appreciable proportion of which afforded a rather lower standard of quality than has been available for some weeks past, caused an easier tone for all except the best in each class. Good medium to finest were steady, tippy Broken Pekoes from about 1s 2d to 1s 8d per lb. being a feature at distinctly higher values.

In Ceylons the offerings were again on a moderate scale, and appeared to be well within the scope of the inquiry. There was an active market, good medium kinds generally being in request at higher values. The special feature of the sale was the strong demand for flavory Pekoes for home use, which in many cases were ½d and 1d dearer, thus showing that teas showing quality are in active demand and continue firm.

Foreign Dried Fruits—New fruits are coming in on account of previous orders, but in some instances are not showing up to expectations. Reports from primal markets denote strengthening prices. Currants are quoted at an advance on early prices of some twelve cents per cwt. Sultanas have firmed up equal to fifty cents per cwt., and walnuts are showing a very much stronger position. It is expected that a much higher parity will rule in dried fruits as the season advances and the true state of the market at primal points is realized. The last direct steamer is arriving at an early date from the Mediterranean. We quote :

Hides, Etc. — The local market continues to settle to a steadier basis at present quotations. Arrivals are coming to hand plentifully but yet are only found sufficient to supply the steadily increasing demand.

Reports from the Chicago market continue to denote great strength in quotations and are ruling one or two points higher than Canadian prices. Although there is apparently not sufficient reason for the great strength of the United States market the general opinion is that it will maintain its present strong condition for some time.

Domestic dealers are more satisfied with the present condition of the market and although prices would not warrant materially laying in of stocks, it is considered that the condition is more healthy and as long as arrivals are only equal to demand, present prices will continue to rule.

Coffee—Local coffee trade is unchanged and quiet. Roasters report only a steady trade and jobbers are buying light. Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre in their weekly report of Nov. 14th say as follows:

"The liquidation in options has been very extensive and against most predictions, prices remained firm so that stocks of coffee are now strongly held. We have reliable information from Europe that heavy operators, active on the bull side of the market, control some million bags of stocks in Havre. The gossip is that very strong financial interests in Brazil, Europe and the United States are as quietly as possible accumulating enormous stocks of coffee. Their policy has been directly opposite to that of previous heavy bull operators, in that they are working quietly and not taking the public into their confidence. The result is that to-day this strong interest practically controls the larger part of the world's supply, and that consuming markets are practically short.

The bulk of coffees offered from Brazil are commercial grades, which are seldom operated against on New York exchange.

Brazil continues very firm. Receipts are beginning to decrease and there is no pressure to realize. It is too early to secure definite information as to the crops of 1906-07, but such information as is to hand is not in favor of a large crop."

Tea—The tone of the tea market is firm, with good business reported by the jobbing trade. The latest advice from Yokohama under date of Oct. 26th. from one of the largest shippers of Japan tea is as follows:

"There has been nothing purchased in Yokohama for a month past, and the season is closed. As there are still nine months before any new teas can reach Canada it would appear as though there would be a great scarcity of Japans on your market before long. The full shortage to date to the United States and Canada will probably reach 11,000,000 lbs."

From this it would appear, and the feeling seems to prevail among the trade, that every day buyers put off making their purchases they will have to pay more for their teas. The market for Ceylon and India blacks has shown some improvement and owing to the fact that several large sales have been made during the past week stocks of Orange Pekoes with cup quality ranging from 15c. to 16 1-2c. have become scarce. There has been considerable inquiry for China greens, especially for pea leaf and pin-head gunpecially for pea leaf and pin-head gunpowder. Moyune Young Hysons are somewhat neglected. There is quite an improvement in China congous particularly low grades. Owing to the Canadian Government having rejected considerable quantities of these teas during the past six months the market has shown considerable improvement in Canada. There does not seem to be anything in Congous in half chest form under 10 1-2c. procurable. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—The raisin market is somewhat firmer with no surplus stocks on this market and a steady demand at prices quoted. Sultanas advanced at least 25 per cent over earlier prices and are in fair demand. Muscatels are quite firm and a scarcity of supplies, in fact little or no California loose Muscatels have been brought to this market on account of the high prices ruling at the coast. In seeded Muscatels this applies to even greater extent as prices are practically prohibitory and beyond the reach of the Canadian consumer, an advance of fully 50 per cent. over last year's prices prevailing. The currant market reported advanced a shilling in Greece and while quotations are firm no change is reported, the ruling prices being from 5c. to 5 1-2c. in half cases, bulk, with the usual difference of 1c. a pound for one pound packages. New dates which arrived last week are selling well and the quality is superior to last year's fruit. Figs have arrived on an advanced market of fully 25 per cent over first purchases.

Honey—Has been quiet during the week. White clover is firm at 8c. and comb honey, 12c. to 14c. Buckwheat ruling from 6c. to 6 1-2c. according to quality. The harder weather prevailing will no doubt stimulate the demand from now on. We quote:

Maple Products—Business is report-

Beans—Continue firm and the advance noted last week is maintained. Supplies as yet are limited as it is anticipated that as soon as more plentiful stocks are obtainable prices may ease off a shade, though dealers are none too sanguine on this point, as owing to the reported shortage from the west they do not see how a reduction can follow. Prices remain the same.

Evaporated Apples— Are scarce and high and holders in the west very strong and not inclined to shade, in fact the largest evaporator is hanging out for 8 3-4c. for the winter varieties. Several offers under this figure have been declined.

Fish—Business during this week has shown good improvement owing to the advent of colder weather and the demand for all kinds of fish is good. The sale of salt fish is increasing with every week. Green cod is scarce and high. Finnan haddie arriving by express and meeting with heavy demand, supplies, however, are none too large. Smoked herring also show an improved demand. Bulk oysters are selling freely. Shell oysters are scarce and high and it is thought that dealers will be short of their winter supply as reports from the oyster beds indicate shortage.

B. C. Markets.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 9, 1905.

MR. J. S. LARKE, Canadian commissioner to Australia, leaves for the Commonwealth on the Canadian-Australian steamer Moana to-morrow. Mr. Larke has spent a few days in Vancouver discussing trade matters with the merchants here, and to-day he leaves for Victoria, to spend a day there. In speaking of the recent ruling of the Australian Government on the collecting of customs duties on goods from point of shipment by steamer, thus adding the rail freight charges to the actual cost, Mr. Larke expresses the hope that a reversal of the ruling may be secured shortly. As he has been in Australia a number of years, and has rendered valuable services to the Commonwealth as well as to the Dominion which he represents, his views, when laid before the Australian Government, will carry weight.

Explaining the ruling, he states that the duty is chargeable on the cost of goods ad valorem, under an Act passed in 1901, but which was suspended in 1902 at his solicitation. The Premier of the Commonwealth, Mr. Deakin, and the Minister of Customs, Sir Wm. Lyne, were members of the Government at the time this measure was first passed. The ruling does not affect salmon, flour, and similar articles, on which a specific duty is charged, but agricultural machinery and similar goods are taxed ad valorem, and are thus brought under the ruling.

A steamship line between Australia and the eastern seaboard of Canada is earnestly desired, says Mr. Larke, but that would not affect the trade done from this coast, as a large part of the eastern exports are now shipped from New York, and never would be sent across the continent to be shipped from here. An association of merchants in a large exporting company would be a desirable and practicable method of handling exports of Canadian goods to Australia, is his opinion and suggestion.

The C.P.R. has asked for an extension of thirty days' time in which to file its answer on the question of freight rates from this Coast to Edmonton and other Northwest points. A week ago, when the merchants and shippers interviewed Mr. B. W. Greer, general freight agent, he fixed November 6 as the time by which he could communicate with Montreal and have an answer ready. The delay now asked for is because of the absence of Mr. G. M. Bosworth, fourth vice-president, who is now in England, and it is desired to take the subject up with him on his return.

The Vancouver Board of Trade has been discussing a proposition to secure legislation which will make it more difficult for tradesmen to transfer stock-in-trade without protecting the wholesaler who supplied the goods. It was proposed, as President Erskine put it, to "make the goods responsible for the debt, not the man." The present Bills of Sale Act was so worded that there was nothing to prevent selling off his stock, putting the money in his pocket, and walking away.

A former communication from the Winnipeg Board of Trade asked that notice be given so that all Provinces could secure legislation of the same nature at the same time.

The Blue Funnel steamer Jason, which sailed on Nov. 2, carried from British Columbia ports merchandise, principally salmon, valued at nearly a million dollars. From Vancouver and Victoria she took 122,000 cases of salmon. She also took 25,000 cases from Sound ports.

Those interested in fruit matters in B. C. were somewhat alarmed for the safety of the big shipment of prize fruit destined for the Crystal Palace Exhibition in London England. The fruit was shipped by Commissioner Palmer, on the Bavarian, which was wrecked in the St. Lawrence. However, the fruit was later taken off uninjured, and word was received that it would be shipped on the Virginian, and, barring further accidents, would reach London in time to compete with the fruit exhibits of the world.

An interesting insurance item comes from Fresno, California, the centre of the raisin industry in that State. It is stated that insurance is refused by a large number of companies. Notice has been served to that effect on the president of the Rasin Growers' Association. For some reason raisins are rated by the insurance companies as extra hazardous, and it is not known if the growers can effect re-insurance to cover that part from which the companies have withdrawn. British Columbia purchases all its raisins, practically, in the California market.

Markets.

Conditions are somewhat quiet in most lines at present. No great movement is noted, and trade, locally, might be called a little slow.

Salmon are still plentiful, cohoes and steelheads being the varieties. They bring 8 to 10c. per lb.

Halibut is becoming more plentiful as the season advances. It is quoted at 8c. per lb.

The herring season is beginning, and from now until a month after the New Year the usual big run at Nanaimo harbor and other bays on the shore of Vancouver Island will be on.

A number of concerns are beginning to pack these fish, and the arrival of J. J. Cowie, the Scottish expert, with his "lassies," to teach the art of putting the fish up for market, is causing a good deal of interest. It is expected that a good market for the cured and tinned herrings will result.

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 14, 1905.

The grocery markets are very active and business generally is good. Collections are good and in some sections there is quite an improvement in the cash trade. Prices are firm.

Retailers have dropped the price of granulated sugar to five cents. The wholesale prices of sugar in Halifax at the close of last week and at the corresponding date a year ago form an interesting comparison. The price per hundred pounds now and a year ago will be seen from the following table:

	1904	1905
Granulated XXX	$4.95	$4.45
Austrian Granulated	4.75	4.45
Trinidad Crystal	3.75	4.00
Pulverized	4.45	4.35
Bright Yellow	4.35	4.05

Dried Fruits.

The steamer Jacona direct from the Mediterranean ports has landed a large cargo of dried fruit here. The consignment consisted of about thirteen thousand packages of raisins, besides a quantity of nuts.

Importers are now filling orders, and in some cases the demand has been exceedingly good, the market having been pretty bare when the fruit arrived. The quotations are lower than the California fruit. Spanish raisins opened about two cents a pound lower than last year, and California three cents higher, but they have since declined one cent. Jobbing prices here are about as follows: Fine off stock, 4½ to 5 cents; Valencia layers, 5½ to 6 cents; bunch Dehesas, $3; Valencia halves are ½-cent per pound more. California seeded are quoted at 10½ to 11 cents. Currants are about one cent per pound higher than last year, being quoted at 5½ to 6½ cents, and new cleaned, in packages, 6¼ to 7 cents. The demand is almost wholly for package goods. Figs are lower than last year, being quoted at 8½ to 10 cents for large boxes, and 9 to 11 for one-pound boxes.

Produce.

The butter markets continue very firm and there is some scarcity of choice butter. Dealers experience considerable difficulty in securing first-class butter for their best customers, who will accept no other than the choicest. It is hard to get good butter of any kind under 25 cents. Creamery prints and solids are selling at 25 cents, and dairy 21 to 23 cents. The retailers' price is about three cents in advance of the above. Eggs are very firm, and the latest advices from Prince Edward Island say that they have a tendency to advance. They are jobbing here at 22 cents for case eggs and 30 cents for fresh laid. The latter are hard to get. The cheese market is also firm. Late sales at Charlottetown were at 11 3-16 cents. Large are quoted here at 12½ to 12¾, and small at 13 cents.

Vegetables.

Large shipments of vegetables continue to arrive from Prince Edward Island. During the week vessels came into port with cargoes aggregating 17,493 bushels of potatoes, and 1,855 bushels of turnips. Potatoes are quoted here at 30 cents ex vessel, and on the Island at 20 cents a bushel.

Fish.

Notwithstanding the reported scarcity of oysters on Prince Edward Island, heavy shipments are being made, the boats running to the mainland carrying hundreds of barrels each trip. The largest single shipment was on Saturday last, when the steamer from Summerside for Point du Chene landed four hundred barrels at the latter place. These oysters were all for the upper Canadian market, where the demand is reported to be, as usual, good. The hand picked oysters are quoted here at $7 per barrel.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

White's Worcester Sauce, pints, retailing at 10c, is in stock with Canada Brokerage Co., H. P. Eckardt & Co., Eby, Blain Co., John Sloan & Co., T. Kinnear & Co., James Lumbers and F. W. Humphrey. MINTO BROS., Per W. M.

Why is it that a man who advertises the heaviest always has the biggest business? Ever notice it? And then there are some merchants who persist in saying that advertising doesn't pay.

To think that advertising indulged in for part of the year will leave a reminder in the minds of the public for the balance of the year is a besetting business sin.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto.

Dear Sirs:—

Our advertisement on page 74 of the special number of THE GROCER was of an assortment specially made up by us for that number, and we must say that we are more than pleased at the result of same. We have never had such a response before. We anticipated demand, but nothing like the demand which orders we are now receiving shows. If the direct result is so evident, we are convinced that the indirect will be widespread to our advantage.

Yours truly,
GOWANS, KENT & CO., LIMITED,

THE PROPAGATION OF SALMON

SOME INTERESTING FACTS

FOR several months during the past Summer, back on the headwaters of the streams which feed the mighty Fraser, half a hundred men have been engaged in a unique employment. They have been sowing seed for a harvest not expressed in golden stooks, and groaning granaries, but in millions of cases of the finest food fish in the world. In other words, they have been "sowing salmon," not for garnering the following Summer, as does the husbandman, but four years hence, for such is the span in the work of the fish culturist from seed time to harvest.

Saving an Industry.

These men have been doing something more. They have been saving an industry. Just as the grain field, left to self propagation, will gradually deteriorate, and finally exhaust itself, so was the salmon industry, in the richest salmon stream in the world, threatened with extinction. For years and years this splendid river has been giving up its tribute to Indian, canner, and farmer, without any steps being taken to insure permanency to the industry. The march of invention had perfected the system of taking the salmon, but it had not concerned itself with assisting in its propagation. When, however, the effects of this suicidal policy began to be evident, and the catch to decline, those more immediately concerned became alarmed.

John Pease Babcock Appointed.

The sockeye is the great commercial salmon of the Fraser, and its failure, therefore, to run as abundantly as usual entailed a great loss upon both fishermen and canners. The Provincial Government of British Columbia appointed a commissioner, John Pease Babcock, who had had great success working for the State of California on the Sacramento, to devote his attention to a study of the fish life of the Province, more particularly the salmon, and foster the industry.

Habits of the Fish.

Mr. Babcock was appointed four or five years ago, and immediately began a careful investigation of the habits of this fish from the time it shows its silvery head in the Straits of Juan de Fuca heading in from the sea, till it yields up its life on a sandbar of the Upper Fraser, after fulfilling the supreme purpose of its life. He learned a great deal about this marvellous and enigmatical fish, but for the purposes of this story it is necessary to mention but one or two necessary facts. He already knew, for this is one of the primary facts in connection with the industry, that the run of sockeye in the Fraser is greatest every fourth year and that in the other three years the catch varies from fair to light. He found that the catch is greatest every fourth year because only in that year do a sufficient number of fish reach all the spawning grounds. In that year only is the entire spawning area of the Fraser planted with sockeye seed. He found, from observations made by himself and his assistants, that the Fraser watershed, above the great canyon (including the Quesnel, Shuswap, and Seton-Anderson Lakes section) constituted seventy-five per cent. of the area of the natural spawning grounds of the entire Fraser River watershed.

Two Methods.

He further made the alarming discovery that, excepting on the quadrennial occasion referred to, that these spawning grounds were not only imperfectly seeded — they were, in some years, scarcely seeded at all. To save the industry from extinction two things were necessary. One was to assist nature by artificial means of propagation; the other to place greater restrictions on the fishermen, so that the progress of the fish up the river might not be impeded.

This latter step has been found difficult, because the process of education is not yet completed on the Fraser as it is on the Sacramento, and until it is, the natural objection of the men engaged in the industry to have their means of livelihood interfered with, will have to be considered.

Fortunately no such difficulty exists in regard to the first named method, and in March, 1903, a splendid new hatchery was completed to the order of the Provincial Government near the village of Lillooet. This station is in addition to the three operated by the Dominion Government. The Provincial Government's institution is known as the Seton Lake hatchery, being situated on Lake Creek at the outlet of Seton Lake, which in turn is connected with Anderson Lake. These waters are among the richest of the breeding grounds of the Province.

Successful Beyond Hopes.

As this is the first year that a fair test could be made of the new hatchery (this being the fourth year, the year of the big run) exceptional interest attaches to the results of the year's work as outlined by the commissioner, who has just returned from the station. It has been successful beyond the hopes of the most sanguine, and the enlargement of these facilities, together with the imposition of reasonable restrictions in regard to fishing can almost certainly be relied upon to restore the dwindling fisheries of this ancient salmon stream.

For several weeks before the great run started, a gang of men under Mr. LeRoy Sedgwood, Mr. Babcock's able assistant, had been making all preparations for the reception of their finny visitors. The big building had been thoroughly prepared and its 160 hatching troughs got ready for their appointed work. These troughs are placed end to end and extend the width of the building. The troughs accommodate between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 eggs. The water in the flume running through the building is drawn from a point 100 feet below the surface of Seton Lake, insuring a lower and more even temperature than if drawn from the top.

Running of the Salmon.

It was about the end of July when, one day, the watchman came in with the news that "the salmon are running." The effect of this announcement was about the same as the laconic call of the small boy that "sap's running" in an eastern sugar camp. From that moment the whole staff worked at high pressure, with a result so satisfactory as to highly please their enthusiastic chief.

The fish ran throughout August and for the first week in September, after which the run fell away. The first eggs were taken on the 8th of September, but as the salmon were not sufficiently ripe for spawning work did not begin in earnest in taking eggs until the 12th, and thence on for two weeks the staff averaged from one and a half to two million eggs a day.

The record catch or take was on the 25th, following a respite of the day before, which was Sunday. On the day mentioned the two fishing and spawning crews took four and a half million eggs.

Taking the Spawn.

As the school comes swarming up the stream it is arrested by a dam which extends across Lake Creek, forming what is called the retaining pond. Across the creek where it leaves Seton Lake there is a fence impassable to the salmon, which prevents them entering the lake. Twelve hundred feet below this and at the top of a dam is a similar fence equipped with V-shaped obstructions through which the fish can enter but cannot return from the stream below. This retaining pond is 1,500 feet in length and 225 in width, and has an average depth of six feet.

From this pond the fish are taken with a drag net, out of which they are picked by the fishermen. The ripe females are thrown into what are called live cars, which are really floating crates. The males are thrown into another and similar car.

When forty or fifty fish are collected the car is towed down to the spawning platform at the lower end of the pool. Here the fish are transferred to big pens under the floor of the spawning platform. The floating crew works all day, but the spawning crew only in the afternoon.

When the latter crew is ready to commence, a man with a dip net picks a female out of her pen and throws her into a net suspended alongside. From this she is taken by another man who proceeds to extract the spawn in the following manner:

N. B. Markets.

St. John, Nov. 13, 1905.

THE magnificent Fall numebr of The Grocer received exceedingly favorable comment here. In many ways it was considered the best number yet published. Of one thing St. John considers itself justinably proud, its retail grocery stores, and this is the season when they begin to look their best. While yet early some of the displays are particularly fine. Business is good. There is great difficulty in getting goods with which to fill orders.

Spices tend quite firm. Cloves are already higher. This is the season of best demand.

The feature of the market very noticeable at this season is the few California raisins arriving. It is a matter of doubt if a single box of California loose muscatels has been bought for import this season and the quantity of seeded will be exceedingly light, but a few hundred boxes.

St. John is rapidly pushing to the front as a leading distributing point for tea. We have one of the largest, if not the largest, tea houses in Canada, with several other houses doing a large business. Tea lead which is quite a factor in the package tea business, is at present rising quite rapidly in price.

Oil—As pointed out in this report, burning oil is in a very strong position. A second advance of a half cent has taken place. Prices are still low. In lubricating oils prices at any time show but little change, this is the dull season. Paint oils are quiet but firm. Linseed still quite low. Turpentine high. Quite a little cod oil is being received. Demand quite active at full prices.

Salt—In Liverpool coarse salt fair stocks held. Prices are firm. Further supplies shortly expected. There is but light demand. Fine salt is quiet.

Canned Goods—In vegetables market is still rather unsettled and some very close prices named. Tomatoes rather firmer owing to a somewhat short pack. Fruits are not largely sold at this season. Gallon apples are quite a full stock. Blueberries rather dull. In salmon, but a fair sale. Some pink fish are offered at low prices. Imported sardines are receiving considerable attention at the hands of the trade. Domestic are largely shipped west. Haddies and kippers a fair pack.

Green Fruit—Apples, Nova Scotia stock are lower. It is difficult to get really first class fruit. Several cars of western apples, chiefly Spies, have been received. Full prices are asked. In oranges sales are small, no really good fruit being offered. Lemons are lower, but are only fair quality. Bananas somewhat out of season. In grapes Maagas chiefly sold. Some nice Tokays still seen. Cranberries are high.

Dried Fruit—In raisins, seeded are high. There has been quite a large quantity of freshly seeded imported from New York to supply the demand, also some new New York seeded. These being offered much lower than coast seeded, of which very few have been bought. Our dealers were able to secure but very few Malaga seeded. In loose and layers Malagas supply the market. Valencias are freely sold, they are cheap and good. New currants come to hand slowly. The direct imported are preferred. Prunes and peaches quite high. Apricots, while advancing are lower than last year. Figs are reasonable. Peels quite firmly held. Evaporated apples are higher. Onions are higher.

Sugar—There is a good demand. Price again declined last week. The outlook for the year will be a record of one continued decline. In bag sugar prices are unsettled.

Molasses—There is just a fair business. Stocks of Porto Rico quite large and price quite low, but steady. Barbadoes are not in large supply.

Fish — Fresh fish are not a factor, sale will improve with the cold weather. Variety is, however, small. In dry fish the high prices which have ruled throughout the season continue. They are record prices. Pickled herring are also high. Sales are large at this season. In boneless fish business has been good, while higher than usual prices have not been extreme. Smoked herring which were very low are higher. Finnan haddies firm.

Flour, Feed and Meal—Flour is firm. Supplies come forward very slowly. There is still a wide difference in price between Manitobas and Ontarios. The former have, however, a large sale. Oatmeal is high, costing much higher than Ontario flour. Cornmeal unchanged.

Beans— Are higher and stock small, receipts light owing to delay in getting goods forward. Yellow Eyes low. Stocks quite large.

NEW COMPANIES.

Public Notice is hereby given that under the provisions of an Act respecting the Changing of Names of Incorporated Companies, being the Revised Statutes of Ontario, Chapter 215, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor has been pleased, by an Order-in-Council, dated the 8th day of November, 1905, to change the corporate name of the Canadian Dressed Beef & Abbatoir Co., Limited, to the corporate name of the Levack, Park & Co., Limited.

Provincial charter has been granted to Wilsons, Limited, in the village of Cumberland, to carry on the business of general merchant, the share capital of the company to be $10,000, divided into one hundred shares of one hundred dollars each, the head office of the company to be at the village of Cumberland, and the provisional directors of the company to be Catherine Margaret Edwards, Helena Eliza Perie, Charles William Wilson, Reginald Clarence Wilson, and Norman Frank Wilson.

Provisional charter has been granted to J. J. McLaughlin, Limited, Toronto, to carry on the business of manufacturing chemists, and of importers, manufacturers and dealers in mineral waters, carbonated beverages, fruit juices, syrups, creams and extracts, and all other goods of a like nature, and in soda fountains and all accessories and supplies therefor, the share capital of the company to be $250,000, divided into two thousand five hundred shares of one hundred dollars each; the head office of the company to be at the city of Toronto, and the provisional directors of the company to be John James McLaughlin, Norman Alexander Howie, and James Boniface Wright.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Mr. E. D. Marceau, Montreal, calls buyers special attention to excellent values offered this week in teas and coffees. Reference to his ad in another part of this issue will furnish particulars.

French prunes are in stock with the Eby, Blain Co., Limited. These can be retailed very profitably at 5c. per lb.

Cranberries are bringing the highest price in years in the United States markets, from $9 to $14 per barrel being realized. For import 25 per cent. duty plus freight and profit would make an extremely high price. There are practically no Canadians offering this season.

A SUGAR REPORT.

A report is current in sugar circles of an advance of 10c per 100 lbs. by the New Orleans Refinery Co.

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 16th, 1905.)

BUSINESS continues very active in all departments of the wholesale grocery trade and jobbers have little to complain about. Since the crop began to move there has been a steady improvement in country collections and in this important respect there is not much to complain about at present. It is reported that the number of dealers paying cash and earning their discounts is rapidly increasing this month.

Sugar continues to attract the attention of the trade. A late change bringing sugar down to a basis of $4.95 for Montreal granulated in barrels was reported last week in our telegraphic despatches. Evidently sugar is on the toboggan and, as the trade have no confidence in the stability of the market, they are buying in small quantities. The jobbing trade have stocked Berlin sugar which is quoted 10c. cheaper than the Montreal brands.

Bluestone for spring delivery is quoted at $5.75 per cwt.

Green Rio coffees have been slightly reduced.

New cooking figs are on the market.

Canned Goods — The canned goods market is devoid of new features of interest. We quote prices unchanged as follows:

Mercantilable Power

Reputation is the force—the power that makes sales and creates demand. Now, reputation is not the result of advertising, it is personal trial, actual test by the very last court of appeal—the consumer. An article which sells on its reputation is the very best and most profitable kind to handle; its sale is sure and quick, at good prices.

Lion Brand Pickles have been sold on merit alone for nearly half a century. They have been tried by the consumer, and their reputation is established. They look better, taste better, and are better than any other Canadian Bulk Pickles on the market.

THE LATE MAJOR J. J. STUART,

THE death of Major J. J. Stuart, announced in these columns recently, removes another early friend of The Canadian Grocer. Twenty years ago Major Stuart was the son in the wholesale grocery firm of John Stuart, Son & Company, Hamilton, one of the most reputable concerns in the Canadian trade. A few years later they amalgamated with Harvey & Co., and the firm became known as Stuart, Harvey & Co. This firm was absorbed by the present firm of Balfour & Co., Mr. Harvey going to Winnipeg, where he died recently, and Major Stuart going to Chatham, N.B., to take charge of a big pulp manufacturing company. This was the last business Major Stuart engaged in. He had great difficulty in getting experienced managers and the business was finally abandoned.

He was more of a soldier than a business man and when the war broke out in South Africa he went there as a volunteer at his own expense and his experience and ability soon procured for him an important staff appointment which he held until the end of the war. On his return he joined an exploration party in the Peace River country, until his fatal illness compelled him to return to civilization. He underwent an operation at Edmonton and recovered sufficiently to enable him to return to Toronto, where his family are now living.

Major J. J. Stuart.

Major Stuart was born in Toronto in 1857, and was a son of Mr. John Stuart who recently resigned from the presidency of the Bank of Hamilton, and was educated in Germany, France, Upper Canada College and Toronto University. He always held a leading place in his studies and in the world of sports. Among his fellow students at that time was Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, now Postmaster-General of Canada, who remained always one of his most intimate friends.

Major Stuart served many years in the Canadian militia. In fact he gave the best of his energies to the service of his country. He was for many years adjutant of the 13th Regiment, Hamilton, to the command of which he could have succeeded had he desired. He also was one of the most valuable staff officers during the annual militia trainings. Had he gone into the army he would undoubtedly have become a most brilliant officer.

INTERESTING EGG STATISTICS.

In the poultry section of the annual report of Mr. F. W. Hodson, Live Stock Commissioner, Mr. F. C. Reford, chief of the poultry division, makes an interesting estimate of the probable value of egg production in Canada in 1911. Mr. Reford takes the figures of the 1901 census as the basis for his calculation; they are 11,000,000 laying hens, 84,123,802 dozen eggs, valued at $10,268,159. This is an annual average of 91 eggs per bird. Mr. Reford says: "If the same rate of increase were kept up from 1901 to 1911 as from 1891 to 1901 we should have about 15,000,000 laying hens, at the same average (91 eggs) we should have in 1911 about 110,500,000 dozen, which at the same price (12½ cents per dozen) would bring $13,812,000." Anticipating an improvement of laying powers by proper methods of breeding and selection the chief of the poultry division says: "With the improvement in the laying qualities of the hen that might reasonably be expected from the use of the trap nests the eggs laid in 1911 should be worth at least $22,767,857, an increase of revenue of about $9,000,000. This is calculated on an average lay of 150 eggs per hen per year and the average price of eggs in 1901, which was much less than for 1905."

THE PRICE OF HOGS.

The price of hogs on the Toronto markets had a downward tendency in October. The price paid for "selects" in the early days of the month was $6.25 per 100 lbs., gradually declining till the end of the month, the price at close being $5.62½ per 100 lbs.

A year ago on the Toronto markets the opening price for selects was $5.35, closing at the end of October with $4.80 per 100 lbs.

The large packing houses at Chicago at the end of the month were obtaining all the hogs they needed at an average price of $5 per 100 lbs.

In Manitoba market towns at the close of the month the farmers were selling hogs weighing from 180 to 250 lbs. at $5 per 100 lbs.

The Ontario farmer has no reason to complain; he is still receiving the top prices for select hogs weighing from 160 to 200 lbs.

THE ROBERT GREIG MILL BURNT.

A serious fire broke out Sunday morning about 11 a.m. in the premises of Robert Greig Co., which is occupied by Gold Medal Co. and White Swan Mills. The cereal mill of Robert Greig Co. was completely destroyed, but none of the other departments were damaged, as the cereal mill was located in an annex. The loss is estimated at between $15,000 and $20,000; fully covered by insurance.

Mr. Greig has already all his plans laid for getting under way again. New machinery has been ordered and Mr. Greig promises that, Phoenix like, the cereal department of White Swan Mills will rise from the ashes and be prepared for all orders within a week's time.

DOMINION COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' ASSOCIATION.

SATURDAY evening, 11th inst., a meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association was held for the purpose of receiving nominations for officers for the ensuing year. The president, Mr. J. S. N. Dougall, was in the chair. The following were nominated:

President—Fred L. Cains, W. J. Egan.

Vice-president—E. D. Marceau was elected by acclamation.

Treasurer—Robt. C. Wilkins, by acclamation.

Directors—Ed. S. Bois, R. J. Forman, J. D. Shaw, W. F. Cleghorn, A. Terroux, Jas. S. Thompson, J. B. Giles and G. W. Prescott.

Mr. Dougall's report showed that during the past year 380 new members had been added to the membership, making now a total of over 5,000.

Mr. E. D. Marceau, Montreal, was elected by acclamation as vice-president. The election of Mr. Marceau was anticipated by The Grocer in its report some few weeks ago, and the selection to this important office is but another evidence of the high esteem in which Mr. Marceau is held by his fellow members, and the association is to be congratulated on the selection of a man of Mr. Marceau's standing in the commercial community.

Mr. E. D Marceau.

It was decided that an annual dinner should be held as usual, date and arrangements were left in the hands of a special committee.

The annual meeting will be held on December 16th, at which the result of the election of officers will be given, also the financial statement for the year.

A NEW APPOINTMENT.

Mr. Stuart Watson, 433 Main street, Winnipeg, has been appointed local agent for Holbrook's Limited, makers of the sauce known by that name.

The only business man we ever met who kept busy without advertising was an Arkansas grocer who was afflicted with the seven-year itch and carried a Waterbury watch. When he was not scratching he was winding the watch.

THE FIRST STEP towards success is to be particular in your choice of cereals. You have a right to know whether a product is selling in your town, or in other towns, and if it is likely to increase its sales in the next few years. You can readily satisfy yourself on these points when considering the advisability of ordering

Orange Meat

The sales of Orange Meat have doubled in two years. Grocers everywhere are enthusiastic, and orders are being increased regularly. This is no chance affair. It is the Reward due to Merit, Patronage given to a cereal that has proven its right to stay, stood every test, weathered every criticism. It is the endorsation of Absolute Cleanliness, Reliable Weight, Standard Quality. Orange Meat is the best evidence that the best breakfast food is given the best of treatment. Orange Meat and you! —keep together.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

TORONTO.

PROBABLY the most important feature in the flour and grain market at the present moment is the failure of transport facilities. With export trade this is of serious moment, as it means practically the stoppage of business. Unless prompt shipments can be guaranteed quotations are useless.

From advices from European points it would seem as though there is every prospect of an active export trade. Russia is likely to be unable to take account of her exporting trade on account of political eruptions, which will leave a great amount to be supplied by other countries. Germany is hastening in supplies in view of new protective duties coming in force in March next. So that with good freight facilities on this side an easy foreign market for both flour and grain should be assured.

The export market for flour is dull and lacks life. Landon prices recently made a sudden drop, and for the moment have had a declining effect on this market. At present quotations, equal to 25s. 9d. trade would be interesting and should prove attractive to the European buyers.

The market for grain is in a similar condition. Arrivals, however, from outside points are sufficient to keep local trade going. Prices have eased somewhat since our last issue, but cannot be said to be seriously weakening.

The local trade for flour is reported as being fairly active. Where prompt deliveries can be promised good business is in progress. There has been no material change in prices, although the tendency is a little easier.

Oats are showing a fair average quality, with a ready market for heavy oats for cereal purposes. Peas are reported as short in crop, with a firm market tendency.

PRICE OF FLOUR IN ST. JOHN.

ONTARIO flour again went up in price yesterday. It is now selling at $5.10 per barrel. Last week it advanced from $4.90 to $5. Manitoba flour is still selling at $6. Some dealers, however, are of the opinion that there will be further advances both in the price of Ontario and Manitoba flours before long. Difficulty in securing transportation is said to be making it hard for wholesalers to fill all the orders for flour given them.

WHEAT BY THE ALL-RAIL ROUTE.

The Canadian Pacific Railway will forward 2,000,000 bushels of wheat from Fort William to St. John, N.B., by the all-rail route, and operations on this project have already commenced. There are now being shipped from Fort William 50 cars of wheat a day for the long haul.

It is unusual at this season of the year to take wheat by the all-rail route, but it is being done now by the Canadian Pacific to furnish ballast for the company's trans-Atlantic boats on their first Winter sailings from St. John. Instead of securing cargoes from Chicago, as has been done in the past, the company will forward wheat over the line from Fort William at a low rate, and thus keep the business for Canadians.

AMERICAN RICE EXPORTS.

The United States has entered the list of the world's rice-producing and exporting countries. Figures compiled by the Department of Commerce and Labor through its Bureau of Statistics, show that the exports of rice to Cuba alone in the fiscal year 1905 amounted to 34,976,414 pounds, against 698,983 pounds in the preceding year, the value of rice exported to Cuba being $993,819 in 1905 against $19,985 in 1904. The total value of rice of domestic production shipped out of the country in the fiscal year 1905, including that to the non-contiguous territory of the United States, was $5,361,641, against $667,387 in 1900 and $16,451 in 1895. Meantime the imports of rice have fallen from practically $4,000,000 in 1899 to $2,000,000 in 1905, and for the first time in the history of American commerce the rice exports exceed in value the rice imports. The remarkable change in the movements into and out of the United States is due in part to the large increase in production which has recently developed in Louisiana and Texas and in part to the new relations of the United States with certain rice-consuming communities especially those of Porto Rico, Hawaii and Cuba, the two former through annexation and the latter through the reciprocity treaty. The list of rice-importing countries of the world is much larger than that of rice-exporting countries. Japan, which is usually looked upon as so great a rice producer as to give a large surplus for exportation, in fact imports much more than she exports, and to such an extent was this true during the Russo-Jap war that she was in 1904 the largest rice-importing country of the world, the total imports of rice in that year being 1,964,000,000 pounds.

THE COMPONENT PARTS OF WHEAT.

Each kernel of wheat is a miniature chemical laboratory wherein the elements composing carbon dioxide, ammonia, potash, magnesia, and silica are first separated, then combined with each other and with water in such wise that from substances in themselves unavailable for human food is produced the premier food article of the western world.

A transformation such as this is just as mysterious and wonderful and impressive, when one comes to think of it, as any of the larger, showier phenomena of earth or heaven.

AN ELEVATOR IN DANGER.

The foundation of the elevator operated by the Kelly Milling Company, Regina, is reported to be in a state of collapse, and the structure is a sort of second edition of the leaning tower of Pisa. The northeast cornice is overhanging the main line of the C.P.R. about four feet, and it is liable to topple over at any moment.

About 10,000 bushels of wheat are in store there, and if it collapses there will be an inconvenient spill.

The railway company has been urgently requested to send along cars to relieve the congestion in this elevator, and it is thought that self-interest will compel the company to move in this case.

It will not be easy to remove several thousand bushels of grain from the main line of the railway, along with the wreckage of an elevator, before traffic is interrupted.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Flour.

The flour market is firm and with a good local demand. Export inquiry also is very good. The general undertone of the market is strong and this is keeping prices very firm. COLMAN'S MUSTARD, 100 YEARS OF PROGRESS.

THE use of mustard as a condiment can be traced back to the most remote periods. By the fourteenth century it had become an important article of manufacture in France, while we find our immortal Shakespeare in the "Taming of the Shrew" making Grumio ask of the wayward Katharina, "What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?" To which she replies, "A dish that I do love to feed upon." In mediaeval times the preparation of this condiment was a very primitive affair, consisting of the simple process of crushing the seeds after the manner of peppercorns in the present day.

To the present day mustard, the whole world over, is identified with the name of Colman. It is just a hundred years since the great business of J. & J. Colman, Limited, was founded. To be precise, its beginning was in 1804-5, when Mr. Jeremiah Colman purchased a windmill, and a few years later decided to unite with flour-milling the making of mustard. As the enterprise grew, three nephews of the founder found place in the business. Two of these, Jeremiah and Edward, in due course were sent to London to push the interests of the firm while James remained with his uncle, who by that time had added the manufacture of starch and blue to the flour-milling and mustard-making.

His son, Jeremiah James, had not up till then concerned himself greatly with its affairs. Thenceforward he took up his father's responsibilities with energy and zeal. Of him it may truly be said that he was a merchant prince of the best type and a born captain of industry. It was largely to his skill and initiative, backed up by corresponding qualities in the London partners, that the wonderful subsequent advance of the firm had to be attributed. The late Mr. J. J. Colman attributed much of the success which attended the business efforts of his firm to the fact that it manufactured only the very best and the purest articles that could be produced. In the commercial world "Colman" and quality have in course of time become synonymous terms.

In 1856 the concern was moved to Carrow, just outside Norwich, where the works now cover an area of 32 acres. Such is the reputation of the firm that it is stated on a certain occasion one of the South American Governments showed their confidence in the integrity of Messrs. Colman by allowing packages from them to pass without the usual Customs examination. The farmers show their trust in the firm by frequently sending their mustard seed, leaving it to the company to put their own price upon it.

In 1896 the old firm, for family reasons, was converted into a limited liability company, but no shares were offered for public subscription. The present directors are Mr. Jeremiah Colman, Mr. Russell J. Colman, Mr. F. Gordon Colman, Mr. James Stuart and Mr. Frank A. Bellville.

The employes at the present time number more than three thousand, if the staffs at Carrow, Cannon street and Bethnal Green be included. The enormous growth which the working staff has undergone is in a small degree to be accounted for by the fact that the firm has absorbed from time to time various related industries.

In 1901 it took over the starch-making business of Orlando Jones & Co., of London, and more recently there have come into amalgamation with it the mustard and patent barley business of Messrs. Keen, Robinson & Co., an old-established house which celebrated its own century some fifty years back, but the number of whose employes is not included in the estimate referred to above.

Messrs. Colman have ever been model employers, the comfort and welfare of those engaged in the several departments of their huge industry having always been regarded with special interest, consequently strikes or labor troubles of any kind have been evils unknown throughout these hundred years.

If any further evidence was required of the generous manner in which Colmans regard their servants it was found in connection with the recent Centenary celebrations which were inaugurated by a scheme of holiday and monetary and other gifts to the employes. The works were closed from Friday night, August 4th, to the following Tuesday, and in lieu of the wages which were due to the workpeople for the customary half-day's work that they put in on a Saturday, each married workman or widower received 20s., each unmarried workman 12s. 6d., and each woman and young person as defined by the Factory Act 7s. 6d., while an additional 20s. was given to every workman who had seen fifty years' service or more. The office staff were given the choice of a week's holiday or a week's pay. The heads of departments and travelers each received a silver bowl, a handsome piece of workmanship some 10 inches in diameter, and suitably inscribed. The pensioners were not forgotten. The foreman, including those who are on the retired list, each received a marble clock. The inclusion in this scheme of gifts to the retired foremen and others whose days of service had gone by is typical of the attitude of Carrow towards those who in the past have helped to lay the foundations of its present prosperity.

Whilst the Colmans can claim the right to be regarded as model employers they have never absolved themselves from those civic and philanthropic duties which wealth imposes. In the civic relationship their record is remarkable. The founder, "Old" Jeremiah Colman, as he is still endearingly called at Carrow, was sheriff and mayor of Norwich. James Colman was sheriff of Norwich. Jeremiah James Colman was sheriff, mayor, and for 24 years member for Norwich. Russell James Colman has been sheriff and mayor of Norwich and high sheriff of Norfolk ; and Jeremiah Colman, of Gratton Park, the present chairman of the directors, is a deputy-lieutenant, and has been high sheriff of Surrey. A splendid record of worthy citizenship.

Mustard, of course, comes first with J. & J. Colman ; but starch, blue, cornflour, and self-raising flour are also the products of the humming hive at Carrow, which covers over one million square feet of floors and bristles with ingenious machinery and mighty engines at every turn.

CANADA AND AUSTRALIAN TRADE.

"Canada could become rich through her fish exports alone," declared J. S. Larke, Canadian commercial agent to Australia, in his address to the Windsor Board of Trade Thursday afternoon.

"Australia has a market for $1,000,000 worth of fish—fancy brands with sauces and relishes such as are put up by the manufacturer in the United States.

"No better fish are caught anywhere than off the coast of Nova Scotia, but Canada puts them up in salt, ships them in poor barrels and gets bottom prices, while the Americans dress them in flavors, put them in tins and get the highest prices on the market. That is the difference between American and Canadian enterprise.

"This is true not only of fish but of many other products. Canada always sends out raw material, while the United States furnishes the finished article which brings many times the cost.

Canada ships gypsum to America for almost nothing. Americans combine it with a few other simple substances and ship it to Australia as plaster of paris.

"Canada could do it just as well, and should do it. This is what weakens Canadian trade with Australia."

Mr. Larke also urged that the delay in transportation between Canada and Australian ports be done away with by the establishment of a direct line of Canadian owned vessels which would make the passage without transfer of cargo.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, are receiving weekly shipments of Neufchatel, Eagle, Miniature, and other brands of fancy cream cheese and will be pleased to hear from those wanting this class of goods.

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder Pays a Greater Profit to the Grocer Than any Other Baking Powder He Sells.

Profit means real money in the bank. It does not mean "percentage," which may represent very little actual money. A grocer often has the chance to sell either:

1. A baking powder for 45c. a pound and make a profit of 5c. or 6c., or,
2. A baking powder for 10c. a pound and make "20 per cent profit," which means only 2c. actual money. Which choice should you take?

Royal Baking Powder makes the customer satisfied and pleased, not only with the baking powder, but also with the flour, butter, eggs, etc., which the grocer sells.

This satisfaction of the customer is the foundation of the best and surest profit in business—it is permanent. Do not take the risk of selling a cheap alum baking powder; some day the customer may find out about the alum, and then your best profit in the customer's confidence is gone.

Royal Baking Powder pays greater profits to the grocer than any other baking powder he sells.

THE STORAGE OF APPLES.

APPLE storage has become one of the most important features of the fruit industry. The demand for apples has increased greatly, and to meet the demand large areas have been devoted to orchards in sections where conditions do not favor ease in holding or length of keeping.

The necessity of disposing of this fruit quickly tends to overstock the market in the Fall and early Winter, and frequently to reduce prices far below the limit of profitable handling. Accordingly, the ability to hold part of the crop until the perishable surplus has been disposed of means higher prices, easier sales and better accommodation to the public.

Consumers are also gradually but surely learning discrimination and demanding not only good apples, but an ample supply of them throughout nearly the entire year.

It is possible, by some system of storage, to avoid the glutted market and to hold the crops with little loss for sale late in the season, and make good profits from the practice; but, like all farm and orchard operations of the present time, apple storage must receive careful attention to insure success.

The grower or buyer must learn what varieties are suitable for storage, what conditions must be provided to secure the best and most economical management of the stored fruit, and at what time and under what conditions the different varieties must be put on the market.

Apples are exceedingly variable in length of keeping. Early harvest often becomes too ripe and mealy for choice eating, while still upon the tree, while some varieties in ordinary storage may keep well until midsummer of the next year. They also vary in behavior in storage, some varieties scalding, shrinking, losing flavor and becoming dull colored and unattractive, while others, after six months' keeping, come out smooth, bright, fragrant and crisp.

These variations in behavior are to a great extent varietal characteristics; yet the same variety grown upon sand or upon clay, grown in the north or in the south, grown in a wet season or a dry one, may show very striking differences.

The problem of selecting varieties and storing them properly is therefore a complex one, and requires careful study. The efficiency of the different systems of storage differ greatly with different varieties, but in general storage with low temperature secured by the use of ice extends the keeping period from one to four months beyond the limit in ordinary storage, and chemical cold storage prolongs the life of the variety at least half a month—often much longer—beyond the life under ice.

APPLE PACKING FRAUDS.

The Nova Scotia apple packers who have been fraudulently marking their fruit are in the path of trouble. They will not get much sympathy from any citizen who has paid a No. 1 price for No. 3 fruit. There is no difference except in degree between apple frauds and insurance frauds, or other forms of graft.

POTATOES IN AROOSTOOK COUNTY

THE potato shipments for the three months ending November 1 beat the record in Aroostook County by far. Despite the shortage of Bangor and Aroostook cars—which means the holding up of about 200,000 bushels of potatoes—the October shipments, 937,767 bushels, were over 100,000 bushels ahead of last year, and showed a larger increase than either August or September.

The total is 1,641,587 bushels for the three months, an increase of 261,222 bushels over the same period in 1904. The August increase was 64,344 bushels, September 96,557 bushels and October 100,327 bushels. Had there been a sufficient number of cars to handle all the shipments offered, October's shipments would have far exceeded the figures given.

The price of potatoes is soaring rapidly, despite the larger shipments, and is resulting in the biggest boom that Aroostook ever had. The price Saturday was $1.60 per barrel, the highest of the season. A week ago they brought $1.50. On November 1, 1904, the price was $1.03 per barrel.

The hotels at Presque Isle, Fort Fairfield, Houlton and Caribou are crowded with potato buyers from the entire eastern section of the country, as far south as Baltimore, and they will buy all the potatoes the growers care to sell them for immediate shipment, with orders limited only to the carrying capacity of the Bangor & Aroostook and Canadian Pacific. But the growers are so sure of higher prices within a few days that they are not over anxious about letting all their potatoes go. The average buyer has to do considerable hustling and offer quick cash payments to complete his consignments.

W. A. McKinnon, Canadian Commercial Agent at Bristol, writes that the following are the charges on apples consigned from Montreal to Birmingham via Avonmouth: Ocean freight, 2s 6d per barrel; dock dues, 1¾d per barrel; railway rate, 10½d per barrel; quay rate, 1½d per barrel; total charges, 3s 7¾d per barrel. He states that he is credibly informed that the total charges for the same service on fruit shipped via Liverpool amount to 4s ¼d, a difference of over 4d (8 cents) per barrel in favor of the Avonmouth route.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

MARKETS in green fruits have been slowing down during week under review. The activity which has been manifest for some time has now somewhat abated, with the stopping of domestic arrivals, and closing of the wharf market, it was only to be expected that the trade would settle to a more moderate bulk. Some few arrivals of California grapes continue to come to hand. The apple market has been active for export trade, and good prices have been realized at Liverpool sales. Local trade is steady at quoted prices.

We quote :

Oranges, Jamaica, per barrel	4 50	5 00
Oranges, Florida, per box		3 50
Lemons, new Messinas	3 50	4 00

Almeria grapes, per barrel	6 00	7 50
Apples, barrels	2 00	3 50
Cranberries, late Howes, per bbl.		12 00
" crates		4 00

The local trade has been only moderate in activity. No great interest is manifest. Now that arrivals have practically all come in, prices are remaining firm and without signs of change. Farmers are marketing well up to the demand. The only situation which would tend to make any alteration would be the arrival of heavy frost, which would naturally curtail supplies and harden prices. Our previous quotations remain practically unchanged.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Trade generally is good.

Malaga grapes are selling quite freely from $5.50 to $7 and dealers look for higher prices.

A car of Florida oranges arrived Monday and sold at prices ranging from $3.50 to $4.

Bananas slow sale.

Apples are in good demand for fancy stock, such as Spys, Fameuse and Russets, which are selling from $4 to $4.50. Greenings and other varieties at $3.50.

Grape fruit is in fair demand at prices ranging from $4.75 to $5.50.

Cranberries have advanced and are now quoted from $1.50 to $2 barrel higher than last week and higher prices still are looked for on account of the short crop and the very good demand prevailing. Nova Scotias are selling from $10.50 to $11 per barrel and Cape Cod bringing $14.

The first car of California navel oranges is expected in about three weeks.

The first new Tarragona almonds, ex S.S. Dracona, arrived and are selling from 1½ to 2c advance over first orders placed.

Shell almonds also advanced from 2c to 2½c per lb.

ORANGE GOSSIP

Owing to the high price of apples and dried fruits generally, we will no doubt experience an unusual demand for Oranges, and a word or two re existing conditions will not come amiss.

California Navels The crop last year totalled 28,000 cars, present crop estimated at 26,000 cars. Fruit is coloring nicely, especially Northern California Fruit. Our first car, which by the way the first to reach Canada this season, is due in about a week. We will control several of the very best and most widely known brands—"Bronco," "Golden Flower," "Lily," "Anita," "Triangle."

Floridas The Fruit arriving is excellent—being heavy, thin skinned and sweet. Keeping qualities are excellent, owing to absence of rains during ripening. The crop is a fair-sized one of good quality.

Mexicans Growers have formed a small combine to hold prices, and owing to increased demand for this SWEET cheap orange we do not look for very low prices; in fact, it looks like an advance. Crop is maturing nicely, sizes running to small side. We have three cars in transit.

Valencias Crop reported normal, size good quality—but owing to scarcity of apples on the Continent a strong market is expected.

Our Orange experience is the best. The goods we handle are the pick of the different crops.

Potatoes have continued to hold steady and prices are going up, if anything, from last quotations. It is very likely there will be a shortage before Spring, from all present appearances. Other lines of vegetables are in good supply, with exception of cabbages, which have not been a good yield this season.

Fruit.

Apples are still entirely of local production. None are yet being imported from Washington or Oregon, all fancy stock being from up-river points and from the Okanagan. Prices remain firm for Okanagan at $1.50 to $2 per box, and lower mainland at 75c to $1.25 per box. Winter pears are nearly out, and the supplies of local grapes have ceased to come in. Grapes from California are very plentiful and at fairly low prices.

CLAIMS ARE EASY —— PROOF OFTEN VERY DIFFICULT

Ever since Red Rose Tea was put on the market, the claim has been made that it is good tea.

So good that it will help increase the business of most merchants who sell it.

So good that the large majority of people who use it will find it the best tea they can buy—just the kind of tea they want when they ask you, "Have you any good tea?"

These are claims which have been proved thousands of times, and are easier to prove to-day than ever before. If you are a good judge of tea a sample will be sufficient to satisfy you. A sample case would, however, be better, as you would then have the evidence of your customers.

FRESH AND CURED FISH

THE DOGFISH EVIL—SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

AS a liquor evil to the community, the potato bug to the farmer, so is the dog fish to the fisherman, and it is little wonder that the latter are agitating in Kings County for a reduction plant, wherein the lives of their enemies may be made to yield oil and their carcasses reduced to fertilizer, for the ravages of these wolves of the sea have been grievously destructive and threaten to demoralize an industry that is worth to Prince Edward Island annually over a million dollars and gives employment to over six thousand persons.

Following are some of the more important facts concerning their history, habits, and general characteristics, gleaned from Prof. Prince's report to the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

The name "dogfish" is carelessly applied to a number of fish mostly belonging to the shark tribe; but classified under different names. In structure, appearance and habits they are precisely the same as the large and dreaded shark of the ocean, but are all characterized by their small size, being rarely more than four or five feet in length and frequently two or three feet only.

The most numerous species is the "picked" dogfish, which frequent P.E. I. waters.

Even in the infant age they are pirates and when scarcely six inches long have been observed chasing schools of herring longer than themselves.

They rarely remain in numbers for long upon any particular part of the coast, as a rule moving off after a stay of five or six weeks.

They cannot endure very low temperatures and are abundant in the warmer months and the warmer water.

The "picked" dog-fish produces its young alive, not more than ten or twenty in a season. The young fish are so hardy, well protected and strong, that out of the millions of eggs produced each year by a female cod, fewer survive and reach maturity than result from the limited family of dog fish.

Dog-fish are great enemies of the trawlers, and in some seasons destroy immense numbers of cod after they are hooked and before the line has been hauled in. Hunting as they do in vast schools they inflict enormous damage. They will not only take the bait set for cod, haddock, etc., but tear off the captured fish or render them unsaleable by biting a piece out of the side. They often take bait and hook but are rarely secured, the hook not piercing the jaws for they suck it down as it were, gulping it into their capacious throat so that it becomes fixed fast deep down. Even then they are not caught, for with their sharp, lancet like teeth they bite off the snood and free themselves. The net fishing also suffers, mackerel seines, floating drip nets being rent and torn and the valuable fish destroyed. Their rapacity is such that a "pack of dogs" will literally clean up an area of all marine life and carry away all nets and gear in the vicinity.

Prof. Prince, in concluding his report, made a number of suggestions to the Government for the extermination of the pests. Some of the proposed plans are as follows:

(a) Inoculate a number of dogfish with some fatal or contagious disease thus securing the infection and death of all the dogfish which may hover near, on the principle adopted in reducing the rabbit pest in Australia some years ago.

(b) Dynamite the schools when they appear.

(c) Employ the Government cruisers in capturing the pests, or let the Government employ special vessels for the purpose.

(d) Pay a bounty of 1 cent for every five tails of dogfish ($2 per 1,000) brought to a fishery officer.

(e) Pay a bounty on the basis of weight, or on the total yield of oil.

The bounty of course could be paid in various ways. Some advise limiting it to parties operating reduction works, oil and glue factories, etc., a bonus being granted to companies willing to embark in the utilization of dogfish for oil and glue, fertilizer, food and other purposes.

The most valuable production is the oil yielded by the liver, though the tenacious extract from the gristly skull and skeleton and from the skin makes a most valuable glue, while the entrails and offal are converted into a useful fertilizer.

It usually takes the livers of nine or ten dogfish to produce one gallon of oil, which is worth from 30 to 40 cents a gallon.

Opinions as to the best method of dealing with the nuisance appeared to be so diverse that much difficulty arose in deciding how best the Government could aid in abating the plague.

The payment of a bounty was too expensive an undertaking to be considered even at the rate of $2 per thousand, but the establishment of reduction plants is far more practicable and is the first plan to be tried by the Government. The plant at Canso is now in operation and doing good work, being taxed beyond its capacity. Other plants are contemplated in the Maritime Provinces and Prince Edward Island is certainly entitled to recognition in view of the importance of her fishing industries.

SALMON PRICES.

It is not expected by British Columbia salmon canners that the recent advance of hold-over pack prices by the Pacific American Fisheries Corporation of Anacortes and Bellingham will have any effect on the market price either of Fraser River or northern salmon.

The American packing company recently announced that it had advanced prices on a portion of its pack, the increase being 10 cents a dozen on flats and 5 cents a dozen on talls.

The advance was not made with the expectation of realizing on immediate sales, but rather to stiffen the price of spring sales, a portion of the pack to be held over to next year.

Local canners state that the British Columbia pack has almost reached the highest price it is likely to command, especially in the United Kingdom market, where the demand is almost wholly regulated by the price.

When the price is advanced beyond what the consumers can pay the demand drops off immediately, with the result that there is a large stock remaining on the market to aid in breaking down the prices of the pack the following year.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Mr. S. T. Bastedo, Ontario Superintendent of Fisheries, yesterday received a letter from the Fisheries Commission of the State of Ohio congratulating Ontario upon the efforts it has put forward to put an end to the illegal fishing done by Americans in Canadian waters.

The action of the fishermen, the writer says, will be of assistance to the States in passing more stringent laws. The sole object of the fishermen at present, he says, is to get the last fish out of the lakes.

The system of granting fishing privileges is different in many of the States to that in Ontario. A permit is issued for 50 cents, and the total catch is taxed at 50 cents a ton.

The writer comments that it is a matter of surprise that the fishermen can appear so prosperous on the number of tons they report. "If we had the amount of power that you have to regulate fishing in our waters we would make these pirates sit up and think," concludes the writer.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

GIVE QUALITY FIRST PLACE.

WITH the keen competition for business there has been a development of enterprise and skill in the production of specialties that has brought the product to a high state of perfection. In high-class goods Canada is to-day turning out as handsome and as well-made lines as can be found anywhere.

The public seem willing to pay prices that were not possible a few years ago. Probably the importation of high-priced lines has helped to accomplish this.

In spite of this development there are some concerns who think the object in manufacturing is to market goods as cheaply as possible. There are lines being made by some concerns that are not only below the requirements of the times, but take the place of better and more profitable goods. The grocer who values his trade will do well to take particular care that he is not tempted to lay in a stock of goods merely because of an advantage in price. Quality alone should be the first consideration; on it alone can a reputation be built up.

A CANDY TALK TO GROCERS.

THAT popular, toothsome sweetmeat, candy, which is craved by the youth and liked by everybody in general, finds ready sale in the grocery store, and therefore is one of the most desirable side lines a grocer could carry.

Candy sales, as a rule, net a larger profit than do small goods in other retail lines, for the reason that candy can be made or bought cheaply and sold quickly.

The kinds of candy that a grocer can carry are of great variety, there being practically no end to the grades when it comes to fancy candies; and, as it is always well to have something new to put before customers, a grocer ought not to confine his stock to hard candies, especially before the holidays.

Candy can be bought in bars, sticks, strips, squares, drops, lozenges, bonbons. Some are hard, some soft, some mixed, several different kinds together. It can be bought by the package or in cartons, by the box or by the pail. Package goods are especially attractive; for instance, marshmallows put up in five or ten cent packages are ready sellers; so, also, are caramels, lozenges, licorice drops, chocolate chips. A No. 1 candy can be bought by the pail, twenty to thirty pounds weight, including mixed creams, chocolate sponge, gum drops, caramels, etc.

In candied nuts there is a large offering, some kinds being in bars or strips, as peanut candy, almond candy while walnuts are often used as a "walnut cream," like a bonbon.

Figs, dates, cocoanut, add to the already long list by being used in special candies, as date candy, fig candy, cocoanut candy.

Candies in the shape of tablets, kisses, mints, chips, may be kept in jars or dishes, the same as stick candy or drops.

Licorice is probably made into as many different shapes as any candy, as it can be bought in sticks, tubes, bricks, whips, cigarettes, "pig tails," "Japanese flails," drops; in fact, any shape. Licorice candy, being a sort of hard candy, will keep indefinitely or a very long time.

A few of the many ways in which candy is put up by manufacturers and dealers for the trade is shown in the preceding lines, from which a grocer will readily see that he can buy it well packed in pails, boxes, packages, cartons.

During the holidays there are always special candies or candies pertaining to Christmas, hence the grocer who anticipates handling candy as a side line should at once obtain lists of novelties, as well as regular candies, so as to place his order early, for there will likely be a grand rush for a supply of candy as soon as the cold weather sets in, and the business of the average grocer, being that of a retailer, warrants his getting in line with an order so as to make extra profit by handling candy as a side line.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

TARIFF COMMISSION AND CIGAR AND TOBACCO MANUFACTURERS

At the session of the Tariff Commission held in Montreal last week a number of leading manufacturers of tobacco and cigars attended and in a very convincing manner aired their grievances. One of the principal speakers was Mr. J. Bruce Payne, of Granby, who placed a strong memorial regarding the trade, on the table. The Ministers attended the dispensers of the weed with apparent interest and no doubt such an influential gathering of representatives of so large an industry will bear fruit in the trade.

The deputation consisted of manufacturers whose establishments are in Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Granby and Quebec city.

The Question of Duty.

The main point at stake was the question of duty, the memorial presented stating that the total tax on foreign tobaccos, imported into Canada for the purpose of manufacturing cigars, should not amount to more than $6 per thousand cigars, while at the present it is $8 per thousand cigars.

The memorial which was read by Mr. J. Bruce Payne, of Granby, ex-president of the Dominion Cigar Manufacturers' Association, went on to state that their association represented over 75 per cent. of the cigar production of Canada. The total taxation in the United States was not over $5 per thousand cigars, the consequence being that there was a very large consumption of the domestic product. In Canada the high duties on raw leaf and excise combined had the effect of restricting the output of low priced cigars, in fact, the manufacture of the "cigar of the people" was as dead as Caesar.

To Stimulate Trade.

In the past five years raw materials had advanced almost one hundred per cent. and this made the present high duty extraordinarily burdensome on the cheaper grades of cigars.

The memorial went on to contend that a lowering of the duties on foreign tobaccos to the equivalent of $6 per thousand on cigars would stimulate the trade on the cheaper brands. They considered that there was ample protection against the foreign made cigar and did not wish to disturb this phase of the schedule.

The imported cigars coming into Canada amount to seven millions per annum, while there are manufactured in Canada 185 millions per annum. Of a foreign and Canadian mixture there were five millions made last year.

Bounty on Canadian Leaf.

This brought up a query relative to making cigars of Canadian tobacco. Mr. Michael Hirsch assured the Minister that they as an association were in no way concerned in Canadian leaf, while Mr. H. B. Whitton, of Hamilton, expressed the same opinion. The latter suggested that the bounty might be given Canadian leaf growers, in order to see if a tobacco fit for manufacturing cigars would result.

Reputation of Canadian Cigars.

Hon. Mr. Brodeur was of the opinion that Canadian leaf was not getting a fair show. "Cigars of Canadian tobacco do not give the smoker a fair show," was the comment from one of the deputation.

Asked what cigars made of Canadian tobacco can be purchased for in the market, the reply was two or three for five cents. Eleven dollars a thousand, wholesale, was considered a fair price.

Mr. Fielding wished to know if any of these cigars ever obtained a reputation. To which Mr. J. M. Fortier stated that while he did not make them, that smokes manufactured of "Little Dutch" and "Canadian Zimmer" had quite a sale.

Mr. L. O. Grothe also volunteered the information that there were some smoked under the apprehension that they were made of imported tobacco. This deception was practiced by utilizing a black stamp which was presumed to go to cigars made of imported tobacco only.

Hon. Mr. Fielding took exception to this deception as the public, apparently, bought "five centers" very largely on faith.

A Question of Prejudice.

Hon. Mr. Brodeur was of the opinion that the good old Canadian tobacco was being slandered and that it was more a matter of prejudice than of fact with the manufacturers present.

Mr. Hirsch protested that they would be very willing to use Canadian tobacco if they would make cigars equal to the foreign article.

Mr. J. M. Fortier stated that he was interested in factories which were utilizing Canadian tobacco, factories in which his name did not figure. He had gone into the matter thoroughly, and was of the opinion that good tobacco could be grown in Canada, as good as in the United States.

"It is a wise man who knows what he smokes," said Mr. Fortier, and that gentleman went on to say that a pet joke of his was to make a cigar of all-Canadian tobacco and give it to a friend, to hear it praised as a fine imported weed.

The Pink Stamp.

The question of putting a pink stamp on the cigars made of Canadian tobacco then came up. Mr. Fortier was of the opinion that it condemned the cigar.

"It appears to me," remarked the Minister of Finance, "that acording to the testimony here the cigar condemns itself."

Sir Richard Cartwright suggested that they might make a few tests in the dark.

Mr. Fortier, quite independent of the Canadian Cigar Manufacturers' Association, who allowed their case to rest on the subject of reducing the duty, went on to take up the battle of the Canadian weed. He agreed with the memorial of the association, but wished to go farther on his own accord. He suggested that the Government should take the native tobacco under its wing to the same extent as they do in the United States. There the sale of tobacco until it has been accounted for to the excise authorities is prohibited. Here in Montreal and in other portions of the Province cigars and plug tobacco were being made quite independent of any Government supervision, because the tobacco could be purchased at any market or corner grocery.

Mr. Fortier went on to state that he was convinced that with proper care an excellent tobacco could be grown in the Dominion. The proper supervision of the industry by the Government would bring up the quality. This would mean the proper handling of tobacco from the time it was cut until ready to place upon the market months afterwards.

To Reduce Tax on Canadian Cigars.

Hon. Mr. Paterson, going back to earlier hemarks of the session, asked Mr. Hirsch if the manufacturers would object to the reduction in the tax on Canadian cigars, if a reduction was made in the foreign tobacco as the association had suggested.

Mr. Hirsch stated that he could only voice individual opinion, and not that of the association as a whole, for the question is one which they had not considered, as they took no stock in Canadian tobacco. He would express the individual opinion, however, that there would be no objection to any reduction in the tax on cigars made of Canadian grown tobacco.

Mr. Fortier then asked that the Government reduce the tax on cigarettes to a figure perhaps one-third as great as that now in force.

Personnel of Deputation.

The deputation of cigar manufacturers included the following: Messrs. H. Gagnier, Toronto; M. Lockwell, Quebec; J. Bruce Payne, Granby; H. B. Whitton, Hamilton; A. Bollard, Toronto; Wm. Ward, London; Jos. Nolan, London; J. Mauss, London; Andrew Wilson, Toronto; and the following Montreal gentlemen: Messrs. Michael Hirsch, J. M. Fortier, L. O. Grothe, John Michaels, Louis Lewis, E. N. Cusson, R. Goulet.

Dominion Tobacco Manufacturers.

The deputation next heard was that of the Canadian tobacco manufacturers, represented by Messrs. B. Goldstein and J. Goldstein, of the Dominion Tobacco Co., and O. W. Legault, representing the St. Lawrence Tobacco Co. They desired first the adoption of a uniform stamp for all products and rearrangement of duties; second, the abolition of the sale of free raw leaf., and, third, licorice, glycerine and spirits placed on the free list. The manufacturers here, they said, are a unit in their demands.

A CURE FOR POISONING.

The recent frequency on the continent of cases of poisoning from eating fungi, mistaken for mushrooms, brings to light the fact that there has long been known in France an effective antidote of the simplest kind. It was first used in 1829 by M. Thenery, pharmaceutical chemist to the hospitals of Montpellier, and he kept the Academy of Medicine regularly posted in the practical results of its administration until 1855. The remedy consists of charcoal powdered fine as dust, and taken in a tablespoonful of water every ten minutes until the pain ceases. It is also efficacious against symptoms of poisoning after eating unsound meat, fish or tinned foods. It has been used for many years with the British army in India and Africa as a sure relief, if taken in time, in cases of dysentery.

E. G. Scott, general merchant, Gore Bay, has assigned. The assets are placed at $5,100 and the liabilities at $5,400. Mr. Scott started in business about six months ago with a capital of $1,300, which has been absorbed, together with the deficit of $300. Mr. Osler Wade has been placed in charge, and the stock will be sold on Nov. 17.

PROGRESSIVE RETAILING

THE COUNTRY STOREKEEPER AND COLLECTIONS.

A WHOLESALE merchant was heard to say recently "It is surprising the number of failures among the country traders, and the excuse they each have is that they have so much trusted out that they cannot go along and do business. The trouble is, they do not manage things in the right way. Why, when I kept a country store I trusted everybody I knew. My motto was, 'Trust anybody and everybody, but be sure and look after them,' and when I sold out after a career of fifteen years in that store, I collected in all but about $750, an average loss of only $50, by reason of bad debts."

The Advantage of System.

With the competition among traveling salesmen now-a-days it is an easy matter for a merchant to buy goods as low as his competitors without giving time to study the market reports as he should; and clerks capable of waiting on customers can be engaged in almost any locality at reasonable wages. A merchant, therefore, carrying on business in the country should have his business so systemized that he can devote a part of each day to examining accounts.

The Accounts Should be Watched.

He should learn who, if any, are living beyond their means, if such a condition exists, call a halt on that customer. If such a man has got through working for Mr. Jones learn why he has not been around with part of his wages to pay on his account.

If Mr. Johnson has sold a beef critter find out when he will make a payment on his bill.

If Mr. Smith owes an unusually large bill and has some lambs to sell, go out and buy them, even if he demands a trifle more than the market price.

If there are any accounts that have been standing longer than it seems necessary, he should make a list of them, take his team, go out around them, and in a courteous way encourage them to call and pay something. The merchant should make the affairs of his customers his affairs, and by keeping in close touch with them he will better be prepared to keep pace with them in the matter of doing business with them.

A Serious Problem.

The success of a merchant is not reckoned by the amount of goods he sells, but by the amount of money he receives for them. And that all depends upon the manner in which he looks after his collections.

Many country merchants fret and worry about how they are going to meet their obligations. They are in debt. Their creditors have been patient, but have now become restless, and the outlok of the future seems gloomy. They have no ready funds with which to satisfy accumulating demands, and yet they have a vast amount of money due them from delinquents and careless debtors. A melancholy spirit has asserted itself, and these merchants are in a sense blind to the situation, and the possibilities of their circumstances.

The Remedy.

What is the remedy for such a condition Assign for the benefit of creditors and settle on a percentage basis? No.

Go out of business and call it a commercial failure? No.

What then should be done? Simply give some persistent effort to ascertain the name and residence of each debtor, and make an active collection campaign and the result will be, no matter how poor a lot of accounts they may have, that in a very short time an amount will be secured that will, when divided among the creditors, keep them quiet until a second collection campaign is made, and in that way relief will come.

The trouble with the average merchant is that he lays down without realizing that it is possible for him to settle his own affairs without the assistance of an assignee.

He should make a hustle himself, and when he cannot succeed in getting good results, he then should employ the services of a reliable, active and aggressive collection agency.

Make a new beginning and in future give accounts and collections as much attention as is devoted to the sale of goods. Allow no more stale accounts to accumulate.

The Future.

When a merchant has met with bitter experience by trusting out his goods until his available resources were apparently exhausted, and has had to make an extra effort to collect in his accounts in order to hold himself together, shall he then shut down, and say that he is not going to trust any more? No, if he should do that he could not carry on business.

The trouble has been the merchant gave his attention to the sale of goods and attending to the wants of his patrons, and neglected the collection end of his business.

Almost every country storekeeper is really compelled to trust his patrons. Farmers get trusted from Spring until the crop is gathered. The lumberman gets trusted for his supplies until his logs are landed. And the laborer gets trusted until "pay day."

All are honest and intend to pay. But the merchants get careless, and the customer uses his money to pay instalments on pianos, machinery and fancy and needless rigs.

The Storekeeper's Independence.

The country merchant is the most independent business man in the list, if he gives proper attention to the right branch of his business. He usually has farmers for patrons, and while their accounts usually run from crop to crop, there is no time in the year but what they have produce—butter, beef, wood, honey, wool, fruit or something to carry in on account. Sometimes it becomes necessary, even with the farmers, for the merchant to offer a suggestion about a check on running up large accounts to caution him about getting in debt for farm machinery, and to place him on his guard about giving too many notes to instalment men that infest every rural community. Then it is the successful country merchant who is interested in the welfare of each one of his customers, who drives out among them frequently, who keeps tab on each man's affairs, and who does not leave the collections all to the overworked bookkeeper.

Yes, the merchant that adopts a systematic way of governing the collection branch of his business, and makes himself the main character of the system usually wins out and has money to loan "on farm mortgages."

"PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE."

You like square dealing. You appreciate courteous treatment. When a man tells you a thing is so and you find it to be so, your faith in him begins to grow. If he tells you time after time that things are so and you always find the measure of his promises filled right up to the rim, in time you take his word for its face value—100 cents on the dollar without a question. Now, then, that's the secret of advertising that makes business. Exaggeration and deception in advertising is just as bad for a business as the same mistakes practised behind the counters.

WARNING!

BM&Co. TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Quaker Canned Goods

We have finished packing Corn and Tomatoes for this year. Taking the season altogether it has been the most favorable for quality we have ever experienced, the weather being about perfect all through the season for maturing vegetables in splendid condition. This applies to all lines, commencing with Peas and running right along into Beans, Corn and Tomatoes. With the fine quality of canned goods this season and the moderate prices there should be an enormous increase in the sales over previous years. While the pack has been large it does not exceed in our estimation the pack of two years ago in any line. Of course, we cannot speak for the whole country, but we know this applies to our pack. Judging from this we believe every case of Corn, Tomatoes, Peas and Beans packed will go into consumption before new goods come on the market next year. The fine quality of the goods alone this year over previous years should make an enormous increase in consumption, to say nothing of the much lower price the consumer can buy goods compared to the last two years. We packed thirteen thousand cases of Sugar and Cream Corn. This is a new line for us and is as fine in quality as the name denotes. We expect with this 13,000 cases sprinkled between the two oceans to lay the foundation for a trade in this line that will take the entire capacity of one of our factories next year to cater to.

THE PACKERS OF QUAKER CANNED GOODS

"GINGER BREAD" MOLASSES

It's so much nicer and handier to sell molasses in small tins rather than in bulk—it's a cleaner way and more economical. There's no time wasted in filling. You know for sure what your profit is. "Ginger Bread" Molasses retails at ten cents. It's a better grade than what is usually sold in barrels, and you can show the stock on your shelves. It's up-to-date in every way. Can't do better than try a case for a start. Remember "GINGER BREAD."

STARCH. SALEABILITY

Estimating sales brings up the question of Dollars and Cents—"How much have I cleared?" "How much stock is over?" It may seem a singular thing, but, nevertheless, it is true that vields 60 per cent. profit, or, in other words, gives you an immense margin. If Ivorine Starch didn't sell, however, "profit on paper" would be no inducement to you. The fact is, every year a greater number of people use cold-water starch, and, of course, Ivorine is the cold-water starch.

IVORINE STARCH

(A Cold-Water Starch)

If you haven't, don't you think you should ?

You know that all fruits are scarce this season.

The bumper crops in the West, together with the immense railway and other building operations, mean prosperity.

Consumers this season will not be content to eat dried fruit. They will want the best, i.e., Canned Fruit, packed by

Manufacturing Cost

By H. L. C. Hall

This book is a new departure in the way of a book on "cost accounting." In it you will find treated the principles of the science instead of a description of what some one else has done. Other people's systems do not interest you unless you can apply them to your own uses, hence only those which can be applied to your own needs are touched upon.

The Buyer, The Manager, The Superintendent, The Book-keeper, The Secretary, The Sales Agent and all those interested in knowing "what it costs" should secure a copy. Send for circular

ONTARIO HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION

THE annual Ontario Horticultural Exhibition and Honey Show was held in Massey Hall, Toronto, November 14th to 18th inclusive, and was certainly a great improvement on last year's display and one which was worth seeing for the beautiful display alone.

It is doubtful if such a fine lot of chrysanthemums have ever before been seen in Toronto. The orchid display, which was situated in the orchestra, was unique for the number of varieties and colors. In close proximity were some lovely lilies, primroses, begonias and roses.

The Fruit Display.

An excellent view of the fruit display was obtained from the orchestra, and was most complete, the patriotic steeple of apples in the centre of the hall was an exceedingly fine display of apples, mainly Baldwin and Pippins, the work of the Chatham Fruit Growers' Association, who also displayed two fine stars made of different varieties of apples, the whole surmounted by the national flags.

The St. Catharines Cold Storage Fruit Growers' Association had also an almost faultless pack of fruit, neatly wrapped and displayed.

The experimental stations made good showings. From Ottawa there were upwards of two hundred varieties of fruit almost all seedlings, the object being to show the desirable as opposed to the undesirable varieties.

C. S. Castor, of the experimental station, Craighurst, had on exhibit two pyramids of Wolf River apples measuring 15 to 16 inches in circumference, which attracted a good deal of attention.

A. E. Sherrington, experimental station, Walkerton, had an excellent collection of bottled fruits, preserved for purposes of comparison.

W. H. Demsey, experimental station, Trenton, was showing many varieties of apples, for comparing desirable with undesirable varieties.

H. Jones, St. Lawrence station, Maitland, had a good exhibit of many varieties, the principal being Scarlet Pips, MacIntosh Reds and Fameuse.

A. W. Peart, of Burlington station, had a good display among which were some fine specimens of preserved currants, plums, etc., for growing comparisons.

Next in order came the very useful and excellent display of the Provincial Woman's Institute, showing the most approved methods of canning and preserving, which in the very able hands of Miss Gray and Miss Shuttleworth came as near a demonstration as possible. Many were the inquiries into the means employed to obtain the very excellent results which were in evidence in the samples exhibited, the inquirers going away better instructed on the points in question.

The Fruit Packing Exhibit.

At previous exhibits of this order it has been considered a good showing if five per cent. of the entries were up to the standard. This year, however, all previous records have been surpassed, 78 per cent. of the entries being pronounced as very good.

The number of entries have trebled previous years, and the advancement in packing is most marked. Especially is this the case in box packing.

Problem of Packing.

There are a good many problems before the fruit grower, and not the least is the finding of a suitable package.

The box is now the coming favorite, and the problem is to pack apples of varying sizes, from the small Snow apple up to the bulky Wolf River, into a box of unvarying size, without leaving any blank spaces.

The demonstrations show there are no less than sixty-four different ways of packing a box. The apples may be laid flat or on the edge or alternating in diagonal patterns. This is in itself an important art, which the Dominion Fruit Department, under the direction of Mr. A. McNeill, the chief of staff, and his assistants, are spreading through the country.

The exhibit of properly packed apples and pears was one of the most educative of the whole show, and neither growers nor customers will be satisfied with the slovenly packing that has prevailed in the past. This care goes into the detail of the kind of paper in which the apples are wrapped and to the waxed nails with which the boxes are put together to secure the maximum of strength with the minimum of weight.

The Ontario Horticultural Exhibition—The Main Floor Display of Fruit.

A Few Typical Exhibits.

Among the exhibits there were some which attracted special attention by reason of their very excellent packing.

Chas. W. Challant, Marburg, Ont., had an exceedingly good collection of Spies and Baldwins.

The Chatham Fruit Growers' Association also had a most creditable lot of fruit.

Beggs & Son, Burlington, were also in prehensive showing of very fine fruit.

Elma Lick, Oshawa, had a most comprehensive showing of very fine fruit.

The Forest Fruit Growers' Association were exhibitors of some good growings.

A fine display of pears was shown by the St. Catharines Fruit Growers' Association.

A. H. Harkness; and C. L. Stevens, Orillia, both had very creditable shows, the latter showing some well grown Baxters.

The Judging.

The judging proper was done by Mr. Carey, Dominion Fruit Inspector, in conjunction with Mr. H. W. Dawson of the Dawson Commission Co.

The lines upon which judging was carried out were purely and simply those of commercial perfection, three great essentials being necessary: First, the package, which must be neat, clean, strong and well put up; second, the packing, or manner in which the fruit was packed; third, quality of the fruit, correct quality and uniformity.

In some entries there was great difficulty in deciding, so many showing signs of every possible care, a clear evidence of the results of the demonstrations of the Government inspectors. It was plain from the appearance of the fruit submitted that fruit growers are making efforts to market not only good fruit, but fruit packed in satisfactory and up-to-date styles. Some exhibitors, however, may be disappointed in not obtaining a prize, thinking their fruit the best, but if other points are considered it will be seen that their package was either faulty from a commercial standpoint or that they had not given the necessary care to the packing of the fruit itself.

Samples of Packing.

The Fruit Division of Ottawa had on show a collection of packages, in use all over Canada, both for apples and small fruits. Those from British Columbia, for apples, pears and plums, were considered excellent. Practical demonstrations were constantly given by Mr. A. McNeill, the chief of the Fruit Department, and his two assistants, Mr. Carey and Mr. A. Gifford, who never tired of their work of instruction and explanation.

The Vegetable Exhibit.

There were numerous entries in this class, and much that was commendable was in evidence, especially considering that the season is now late for such exhibits.

The Honey Exhibit.

The honey display had space allotted around the sides of the Main Hall, under the conditions probably the best space which could be arranged, but not by any means an ideal place. The exhibits were in consequence much scattered, and gave little or no prestige to the very admirable exhibits. The exhibitors were to be much commended on the excellent quality of the goods shown.

Ontario Horticultural Exhibition—Corner Showing Packing and Grading.

Hon. Sydney Fisher.

Hon. Sydney Fisher, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, speaking at the annual meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association, said that he was highly pleased with the manner in which the farmers of Ontario had taken advantage of their opportunities to acquire the ability to speak in public. The farmers' institutes and the various association conventions had been training schools in this respect.

He was proud of the manner in which the delegation of farmers had presented their views to the Tariff Commission.

Mr. Fisher thought the danger of the further spreading of the San Jose scale in Canada was not now serious. The Daminion Government had taken steps to prevent its importation into the country through nursery stock, and the Ontario Government had been able to keep its ravages restricted to limited areas. If the farmers would- co-operate with the authorities it was probable the pest would soon be stamped out.

He explained the relation of the Fruit Division to the other branches of work in the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, and informed the fruit growers that their interests were not being slighted, as some had supposed.

The Provincial authorities were responsible for the exucation of the people, while the Federal authorities gave their chief attention to matters of trade and commerce.

When experimental work was carried on by the officers of the Dominion Department of Agriculture they, of course, published the results for the information of the whole people, but did not concern themselves with purely local conditions and local interests.

In speaking more especially of Ontario fruit, he thought that it was highly important for the people of the Province to profit by the examples of California and British Columbia. Ontario farmers and fruit growers must adopt co-operative methods and give more attention to the selection, grading, packing and marketing of their fruit if they hoped to extend their markets or even hold their own.

Fruit growers were too careless in grading their products and did not put them up in attractive packages. The markets of Great Britain and Western Canada were inviting, but their special needs must be studied and the fruit shipped to them in an attractive form.

He promised that the Dominion Department of Agriculture would do everything possible by means of demonstrations or in gathering information that would facilitate the development of the markets for Canadian products.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

A. McNeill, Esq.

The president's address contained many useful and instructive features, which should be of great value to the fruit industries. The following remarks are produced for the interest of our readers:

The Peach Crop.

"The peach growers have had a somewhat remarkable experience that illustrates well the value of fruit stations. It is a matter of record that there has been a most serious loss in peach-growing districts from Winter-killing, dating from the memorable season of 1899. The new plantings have not kept pace with these losses and the increased consumption. This year the owners of good healthy trees have had a full crop, in many cases much above the average, and so reported. Had the general public taken the fruit crop reports both of the Provincial and Dominion Departments of Agriculture, they would have been prepared to pay an increased but not exorbitant price for peaches, and would have taken all the Canadian crop and probably have imported an appreciable quantity. Unfortunately just at a critical time when the market was depressed with the remnants of the comparatively worthless early varieties, a report appeared in one or more of the Toronto papers that was very widely copied, to the effect that peaches were very plentiful and would be cheaper than apples. For want of proper denial and a true statement of the facts, which should perhaps have been made by our association, the public continued to expect cheap peaches, and refused to buy in full quantities when the fruit could have been obtained. This unfortunate report, whether it emanated from designing wholesale buyers or from the pen of a poorly qualified newspaper reporter, is responsible for the fact that many Canadian housewives will not serve peaches this winter on the regular bill of fare, as well as for the fact that peach growers have suffered from a depression of prices much below what was legitimate.

Ontario Fruit Trade.

"The fruit trade of the Province was never in a more healthy condition. Having said so much, I feel it my duty to add that, though the outlook on the whole is excellent, there are very grave problems looming up for solution—problems arising, perhaps for the most part from the very prosperity for which we are thankful. Speaking for a normal condition of things, the local markets are not well supplied. In a few cases it is safe to say that they are frequently much over-supplied, though a partial explanation of this may be in the inefficient methods of marketing.

Improvement of Packing.

"In packages, too, and methods of packing, a radical change must be made. The basket type, the very best for the local market, must give place to the bow type of packages when the fruit is intended for distant markets. This difference in varieties, in the strictness of the grade, in packages, will also correspond to a difference in methods of doing business. A local market, such for instance as that of the city of London, can very properly draw upon small growers, entirely independent of each other, located on all sides of the city and long distances apart, but if Ontario wishes to ship to Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta or even Montreal, Quebec, or the Maritime Provinces, it will not do to take the product of all these small and isolated growers. It will be positively necessary to encourage the growing of these products in large plantations and of concentrating the business at a few points where the growers will undertake to make a specialty of the long distance shipments. It appears to be an almost hopeless task to attempt to assemble the small lots of many different growers who have the local market for their chief outlet.

Long Distance Markets.

"There is no reasonable doubt that with the splendid steamship facilities that are now at the disposal of the fruit grower, we can land peaches in England in the best of condition, if we only have them. It is needless to say that we have not got them this year and may not have them next year, but five or ten years from now there is no reason why the export trade should not form a large proportion of the output of our peach orchards at least. The outlook is not quite so hopeful for plums, but even here fruit growers will have to look at the question in a broad light, and appreciate the fact that the ramification of the trade in canned fruits, jams, and jellies is one in which they, in the interests of their particular business, will have to take a lively interest.

The Need of an Expert.

"Those of you who have intelligently followed the fruit trade will have noticed that in the change which must now take place from the local markets to the long distance markets, there comes a distinct question of the matter of varieties. This is so intertwined with the question of soil, climate and modes of handling, that we have reached the point, I think, when we can fairly ask the Government to bring to our aid an expert who can give us his whole time to the development of the fruit industry of the Province.

"It is a source of gratification to me to remember that 12 years ago Professor Craig, Mr. W. W. Hilborn and myself were appointed a committee to draft an experimental station scheme for the Province. We worked earnestly together with the present secretary of the experiment stations for many months, and the result appears in our report, which is the basis of the present scheme. Since this time I have been a director of the present association, and therefore, of necessity, have had my attention directed officially to the working of these experiment stations. I have also served a term upon the Board of Control, and therefore feel that I am justified in taking my full share of the responsibility for the successes and failures which have attended this scheme. On the whole, I feel that the association may be very strongly congratulated upon the success which has attended the work of these experiment stations. At the same time I should be sorry to assume that they had reached the climax of growth. It was never intended and never thought at any particular stage that the history of these experiment stations would be fixed, but time has very properly been given for the normal development, and we now appear to have reached the point where an onward step must be taken. Up to date the work of these stations has practically been in the hands of private growers who have had business of their own to attend to, who have had little or no training for work of this kind, and who, therefore, claim no special fitness for anything but elementary work. This is the time when professional skill is needed.

Records and Memorials.

"It is still possible to mark the location of fruit trees that have a history not less interesting than that of individuals. The original MacIntosh red apple tree is still standing, and its site should certainly not be left without a memorial. The possibilities of the Baxter are too great not to be worthy of attention, and the Ontario is a most creditable contribution by this Province. I am among the few who can claim to have sat under the original Windsor cherry tree, and can yet locate, I think, within a foot of the exact spot where this tree grew. Many other names and fruits will suggest themselves to the older members of the association. Enough has been said, I think, to indicate the work that can be done, and I commend to you the appointment of a standing committee whose duty it will be from year to year to make compilations, recommend memorials and provide for the care of suitable records in Provincial horticulture."

WESTERN PORK INDUSTRY EXTENDING.

IN the course of an interview last June with The Canadian Grocer, J. Y. Griffin, of Winnipeg, stated emphatically that the principal obstacle retarding the development of the pork packing industry of the west was the lack of hogs, the necessary raw material. Could J. Y. Griffin & Co., Limited, be assured of the necessary supply of hogs they would immediately undertake to double the capacity of their already large plant.

Realizing the necessity of interesting the farmers in hog raising J. Y. Griffin & Co. have been devoting considerable attention to educational work along these lines. During the Winnipeg Exhibition last Summer they distributed thousands of pamphlets among the farmers at the Fair pointing out the profits to be made in raising hogs. They also threw their plant open for inspection at certain hours of the day and thousands of visitors saw for themselves the modern quick and scientific methods of converting the hog into bacon with no loss of by-products. These educational campaigns, continued for several years, are having their effect in the largely increased number of hogs grown by western farmers.

"Hundreds of farmers are now realizing envious profits from pork raising," said Mr. Griffin in a recent interview, "but it is a wonder to me that more are not at it in view of the opportunity for raising pork of the most excellent quality.

"The wheat crop" continued Mr. Griffin, "is an uncertainty till it's in the barn and the door locked, but wind, hail, lightning or rust will not damage the robust porker. He is an unvariable and ready money getter every year and a goodly number of his kind will not only add handsomely to the wheat grower's bank account in the year of a 'bumper crop,' but will tide him over at a profit when Winter finds his granaries not so generously burdened with No. 1 hard. If every farmer would raise a few hogs it would mean a steady sure profit for all, and would establish a means of making profitable use of much under grade grain which is now going to waste."

Large additions are now to be made to the Griffin plant in Winnipeg, additions involving an expenditure of about $150,000. In order to finance these additions and improvements a large block of stock has recently been sold, part of it in the United States, but Mr. Griffin asserts that this will in no wise affect the name, policy or present management of the company.

The additions contemplated will largely increase the capacity of the Griffin plant. The equipment will be the most modern that money and experience can procure, and the object of the entire movement will be to facilitate the handling of live stock in unlimited quantities and to do so at a minimum cost.

Large ice storage houses for the refrigeration of cars loaded with dressed beef will be built. Extensive sheep sheds will be added. In the latter will be installed self-feeding bins and other modern devices which will not only minimize the cost of caring for large numbers, but add greatly to the comfort of the animals.

Large new power houses will be erected, in which will be placed a seventy-five ton refrigerating machine. The other new machinery which will occupy space in these additions will easily treble the present capacity of the company.

Cold storage warehouses and freezers will be put up, the capacity of the cooling and hanging rooms for dressed beef greatly enlarged uuon, and separate, excellently appointed apartments will be arranged for their increasing butter, eggs and cheese business.

A trolley system will be installed in the smoke houses at the Louise Bridge plant. By this means the meats are conveyed from the washing rooms to the smoke houses, hanging rooms or packing floors without being taken from the hook on which they are placed after being prepared for smoking.

Immediately after this work is completed, new beef killing and rendering houses will be added, also new hog houses for hogs and the manufacture of commercial fertilizers will be erected.

The increase of business in Winnipeg has not caused the J. Y. Griffin Company, Limited, to overlook the importance of the western market; an artificial refrigerator plant, storage facilities, smoke houses and greater power equipment are being added to their branch at Calgary, so that general manufacturing and distribution can be carried on direct from the western centre, and immense supplies of fresh products kept at any temperature desired from zero up.

Believing that even more ground room will be required before many years, the company is taking no chances with rapidly increasing land values, and has secured additional property which will be used as yards at present, but broken and built upon as growth of business demands.

A barrel of apples shipped from St. Catharines to Winnipeg recently is on exhibition at the storehouse, brought back from Winnipeg for the sole reason of contradicting the story that apples shipped from Niagara district were inferior. These apples are of splendid quality and when exhibited sufficiently will be sold here.

Receipts of wheat at Port Arthur and Fort William elevators for October total eleven and a half million bushels, compared with six and three-quarter million in the corresponding month last year. Shipments east were ten and a half million against three and three-quarter million last year. The movement of wheat east, therefore, from Port Arthur and Fort William is nearly three times what it was last Fall.

W. D. Stephens, proprietor of the City Grocery, Port Hope, Ont., has added to his up-to-date store a new coffee mill. The machine is run by electric power and coffee is ground "while you wait." It travels at the rate of about fifteen hundred revolutions a minute and will grind sixty pounds of coffee per hour. Owing to the growth in the coffee trade Mr. Stephens found the "Armstrong power" too burdensome and consequently had the machine installed. It has been pronounced a great success by all who have seen it in operation.

The Bode Gum Company has purchased property on Dowd street, off Bleury street, Montreal, and intend to put up one of the most up-to-date chewing gum plants on the continent, plans for which are now being prepared. The building will be five stories high. The business of the company has met with such success in Canada that the present premises on St. George street have been found inadequate to meet the demands of the trade. Mr. Bodenweiser, the proprietor, leaves for New York to purchase the plant, which will be all that is modern and up-to-date in the gum-making line.

The apple shipments from Halifax for London so far this season amount to 126,966 barrels. This is 20,000 barrels less than last year at the corresponding date, and 50,000 less than the year before. The average shipment during the past eleven years has been 233,664 barrels, and the outlook is that this season there will be a considerable falling off. Baldwins, which come along later, are reported a particularly poor crop. Prices in London are reported equal to any realized during the past ten years. By far the greater part of Nova Scotia apple crop for export goes to London. Cable advices to-day report Kings as high as 26 shillings and very few varieties under 20 shillings per barrel.

GOOD CHEESE REPORT.

Estimates to hand place the total make of cheese during the past season of Kingston district at 60,000 boxes, or about 5,100,000 pounds, valued at $530,400.

Napanee district, 65,000 boxes, or 5,525,000 pounds, valued at $580,125.

The farmers in the two districts thus got over $1,110,000 for their products of the dairy.

Some 27,921 boxes of cheese were registered at Kingston Board, and the average price was 10.42c.

The boardings at Napanee were 40,871 and average price 10.48c. The quality of the make during the season was never better.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Nov. 22, 1905.

THE cheese situation remains practically unchanged. Apparently our recent country markets report lower prices. While this is so, it must be taken into consideration that present offerings of cheese are November made goods of more or less faulty quality, and prices realized for these goods are really unusually high. The earlier made September and October cheese, which are of very fine quality, are firmly held at higher prices, but meanwhile the demand for finest cheese is not brisk and the market must be quoted quiet but firm.

At the close of navigation, which also marks the close of the cheese season, the question of stocks is an all-important one to every member of the trade on both sides of the Atlantic.

We have no reliable figures to guide us and the whole is more or less guesswork, but we know that while the make of cheese in Ontario may show an increase over last year, the make in Quebec is decidedly lighter on account of the largely increased production of butter in this Province. On the whole the entire make of cheese will probably show a decrease as compared with last year.

The total exports of cheese from Canada from May 1st, 1904, to May 1st, 1905, were 2,605,844 boxes. Since May 1st, 1905, to date our exports are about 2,100,000 boxes. Taking the above statement of a decreased make into consideration, it would leave us with barely 500,000 boxes cheese in stock, which is very light indeed to start the Winter on. Now, supposing that by extra feeding, induced by the ruling high prices, another 100,000 boxes will be produced from now on, and this is a very full estimate, we would still have only 600,000 boxes in all Canada, about one-half of which are held here for account of houses in the United Kingdom.

The United States have no cheese to spare for export this year, and as the stocks in the various British markets are less than last year, when there was an actual shortage at the beginning of the new season, it is difficult to see that prices should not go higher before the opening of the new season next year.

Prices are higher than last year and this is said to be sure to lead to a decreased consumption, but we have seen higher prices than at present in former years and still people would have some cheese. There is considerably more cheese produced in the United Kingdom than what is imported from Canada and yet our friends across the Atlantic manage to dispose of their goods at a higher price than what they are willing to pay us for our finest goods.

There is still another strong and favorable feature for the future of the cheese market, viz., owing to the high prices prevailing during the entire season, the retailers in Great Britain have lacked confidence to lay in larger supplies and to-day their stocks are merely nominal, so that they will be obliged to draw more heavily on present stocks in importers' hands and this will keep the trade going probably all Winter.

Butter as an article of export is now a thing of the past. Winter-made butter while it is fresh is palatable, but it is not fit for export or holding purposes.

There are sections especially in the Province of Quebec, where fine butter is produced and these sections will probably more and more get to making butter instead of cheese. The farmers are doing well and there are still great chances for them if they will increase their stock.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By Our London, Eng., Correspondent.

Nov. 11, 1905.

THERE is no great change in the butter market to be reported this week. During the past few days there has been a fairly active demand for Canadian butter, but prices have remained unchanged. For choicest parcels 106 and 108 shillings are being asked, while finest brands are fetching six shillings less. Stocks of salted Canadian butter on the spot are being rapidly cleared out, but there is no inclination on the part of buyers to make higher bids. In fact, they are showing a tendency to purchase secondary grades of Australian butter in preference to the equal-priced and even lower-priced Canadian, so that holders are glad to dispose of their Canadian stocks for what they can get. There certainly has not been much money for them in Canadian butter this season, for in spite of general good quality (to which, of course, there have been exceptions) high prices and the peculiarities of the retail demand have shaved their profits almost to vanishing point.

Latest cables from Australia report that as a result of the drought which has prevailed in Queensland and New South Wales, the output of butter from the quarters affected will be somewhat shorter than expected. One has to be very careful how one takes information of this sort, however, and the truth of the statement remains to be seen. It is quite certain that there has been a falling off in the supplies of Australian butter received here as compared with last year, and at the moment of writing the demand for Australian is very active.

Even less is being received from New Zealand this year than last, for the returns show that during October, 1904, this country sent over to us 1,742 cwts. of butter, whereas only 58 cwts. were received during the October just expired and only 54 cwts. during September, 1905.

Siberian supplies are short also. As might be expected, the turmoil and unsettled state of affairs which are disturbing the Russian Empire have had a disastrous effect upon the commercial transactions of that country, and the butter market is feeling the effects in no small degree. There has been a consequent rise of 3 kroner in the Danish official quotation. As far as can be seen at the moment, if the approach of Christmas brings increased activity to the butter market, the demand will have to be met with shorter supplies than last year. However, there are no signs of Christmas activity in this direction yet, and the butter market has been so uncertain and full of surprises lately that it would not be astonishing to find that even Christmas passed without any hustle at all.

Cheese. Advices here this week are to the effect that there has been a most welcome improvement in the demand, and at time of writing general activity prevails. There has been a consequent advance of 1 shilling per cwt. on spot prices, and cables from Montreal state that some further advance must be looked for on c.i.f. quotations. Choicest white Canadian is now realizing 58s, and colored Canadian 59s and even 60s.

The total supplies of cheese received from Canada during the past ten months have been 1,522,968 cwts. From New Zealand during the same period have come 75,855 cwts.; from the Netherlands, 173,104 cwts.; from the United States, 137,713 cwts. The grand total of cheese receipts for this period is 2,004,454 cwts.

Bacon. There is not much change to report for bacon this week. The demand and supply are very evenly balanced, and all arrivals are going steadily into consumption. According to reports on this side, Canadian killings are steadily increasing, and as the future of the market depends very largely upon the supplies coming to hand, it will be for the packers to protect their own interests by seeing that the price of hogs is reduced. The consumptive demand here is not expansive at this time of the year, except at lower prices.

CANADIAN CONSUMPTION OF BUTTER.

Canada's total exports of butter amounted to 16,656,279 pounds in 1901, to 27,889,907 pounds in 1902, and to 34,146,917 pounds in 1903. But Canada produced 141,026,229 pounds of butter in 1901 according to the Dominion census. That is, the quantity of butter consumed in the home market was more than eight times as great as the quantity exported in 1901.

The quantity of butter made in the different Provinces was as follows:

	Pounds.
Ontario	62,938,110
Quebec	42,982,188
Manitoba	10,183,343
Nova Scotia	9,331,142

Eggs—Supplies are not very liberal. Produce houses are paying 23c. per doz. for eggs delivered in Winnipeg.

VANCOUVER, B. C.

Produce—Hams are now quoted half a cent lower, at 15 to 15 1-2c.

Ontario cheese has advanced until it is quoted at 15c. and 15 1-4c., which is an increase of fully 1-2c. over recent rates.

Butter, local, is quoted at 30c. for creamery and 26c. to 28c. for local fresh dairy. Eastern creamery, 26c.; eastern dairy, 19c. to 21c.

Eggs still remain scarce; that is the strictly fresh article. They are quoted as high as 65c. with few offering. This price may remain some time as the production is very small now. The situation, however, may be relieved by importations of case eggs from Washington and Oregon. Eastern case eggs are quoted at 25c. to 26c.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Provisions—In pork prices are higher, particularly American mess. Domestic mess is still in light supply. There has been fair business.

Pure lard still high. Quite large stocks of American held. Price is rather below Canadian. In refined lard price continues low and demand good.

Smoked meats firm.

In fresh beef market continues dull.

Lamb brings full prices. Mutton, owing to the demand from the steamers, is firmer.

Veal little seen.

Poultry, as for some years, are higher. We quote:

Butter—There is but a fair supply. While price is unchanged at quite full figures, really choice quality commands higher prices. We quote:

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 21, 1905.

THE Winter Port business has begun. The outlook is bright. It is expected this will be the most successful season we have had yet.

The Canadian Pacific Railway had a very large quantity of grain in the elevator awaiting the first steamer. In business the big rush is over for the wholesaler.

It is expected the St. John River will be closed this week. The Fall has been unusually mild. The retailers at this season make their stores particularly attractive.

In markets there is little of interest that is out of the ordinary. Prices are generally firm. One thing has been particularly noticed this Fall, the extremely low price of Yellow Eye beans, the lowest figure perhaps ever quoted. They have been below white beans. Fish continues a luxury Oil—In burning oil business is rather more quiet though the quantity moving is still large. Prices are held firmly at the advance.

In lubricating oil demand is quiet, even for this, the quiet season.

Paint oils are dull. Market is quite firm, though linseeds are still low.

Turpentine continues extreme in price.

Cod oil is quite high. There is now a fair supply. There has been quite an export demand.

Salt—The first of the regular Liverpool liners arriving this week brought some salt, both coarse and fine. The steamers coming regularly during the winter makes it easy to have regular supply. There is just fair demand. The heavy business is over for the year. A cargo of Turks Island salt was received this week. In fine salt sales are light at this season..

Canned Goods—Sales are now rather quiet.

In vegetables the cut prices are not so regularly quoted.

In tomatoes the outside situation is firm. There will be no cheap American tomatoes to help out the short pack.

In fruits just a fair business. Prices unchanged.

In fish there is some demand for cheap salmon. General demand not large.

Meats have little sale at even figures.

Oysters are unchanged.

Lobsters very high.

In sardines, imported goods are having better sale than usual the demand being for the higher priced goods. In domestic, a steady sale.

In kippers and haddies just a fair supply.

Dried Fruit—New dates via New York have been received. These cost higher than the direct goods.

In raisins, the very small quantity of seeded which have been bought and the high price is the feature of the market. Malaga loose and Valencia layers are plenty and reasonable. There is practically no sale here for off stalk or selected Valancias.

Prunes are in light supply and firmly held.

A fair stock of apricots and peaches, but this is small business here.

Peels are freely offered.

Figs sell freely and are quite cheap.

Evaporated apples are high. Spot stock small, but quite a few bought to arrive.

Onions are higher.

Currants are slightly higher.

Sugar—The market is weak and stocks are kept as light as possible. Prices are low.

Molasses—There is just a fair business. Prices are quite low. A full stock of Porto Rico is held, but supply of Barbadoes is light.

Fish—Prices are still extreme.

There has been a fair supply of dry cod, but no change in price.

Pickled herring are higher and supply is light. he season of best sale is over.

Smoked herring, which for so long were very low, continue to gain strength and are already higher.

THE ONTARIO HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

THERE probably has never been an Exhibition which attracted more interest proportionately than the one which opened in Toronto on the 14th inst., the Ontario Fruit, Flower and Honey Show.

Canadians have probably not fully realized the important place which these Exhibitions are destined to play in the education of Canadian commercial life.

An Exhibition is not merely a place for the display of merchandise, with a certain accompaniment of entertainment. If it is to be an unqualified success, it must carry with it every feature which will educate and interest the public in general on the points of the subscribing exhibits.

There is no interest or benefit to be gained by ignorance. Let the public have the full light of day on every industry. Let them KNOW what they are buying, and a degree of healthy trade will be stimulated, of untold value to the commercial community.

These points were well maintained in the Fruit and Vegetable Show. Anyone who cared to investigate was made acquainted with all the points which went to make perfect fruit, and the result was an immense amount of interest from all visitors alike.

Nothing could have been more gratifying to Chief Inspector McNeill and his assistants than the interest and inquiry which came not only from the growers themselves but from the general public.

It is, however, a thousand pities that a more suitable building was not forthcoming for so important an Exhibition. Had it been possible to concentrate the whole show on one extended floor space the impressiveness of the show would have been materially added to and its vastness manifest.

The fruit submitted for competition revealed a great deal of care in growth, selection, and packing, and was a speaking tribute to the energies the Government have put forth in the way of educating the fruit growers to the need of care in this regard. It was gathered that seventy-five per cent. of the exhibits passed the standard of "good," as against five per cent. of a year ago.

Ontario has an excellent opportunity to distinguish itself in its fruit production, it can produce fruit suitable for many markets, and it must see to it that its grading, packing and marketing are thoroughly up-to-date and on commercial basis.

LAKE NAVIGATION EXTENDED.

AN unprecedented extension of rates for navigation on the upper lakes has been decided upon by the marine underwriters. The customary date of closing is December 5th, but this year, owing to the extraordinarily large crop of wheat produced in the Northwest, which must be moved to the east, insurance rates have been extended seven days, to December 12th.

The thousands of bushels of grain which are still being delivered daily to the elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur total up a quantity which cannot possibly be handled in the customary time.

Were the insurance rates to close December 5th as usual a very serious state of affairs would result, for most of the grain would in that case have to be hauled by the railways all the way from Fort William. But with the extension of rates the steamers will be able to take the wheat to such points as Depot Harbor, Kingston and Buffalo for distribution.

As is to be expected the rates will increase during the extended period per ratio of the regular increase, December 1st to 5th. Only once in the past (four years ago) have the underwriters granted a similar extension, and at that time the period covered was much shorter than it will be this Fall.

CLOSING OF THE CHEESE SEASON.

THE Canadian cheese market is drawing to a close. Many factories have already shut down for cheese and are now turning their attention to butter.

Probably never before has the market closed in such a satisfactory position as regards the factories. Prices have not only maintained a firm standard but have steadily and persistently advanced, until at the moment of finish cheese is fetching the highest standard reached.

The present season has undoubtedly been a favored one; it opened on a well-nigh depleted market, consequent upon the fact that the standard of cheese-making had generally improved until not only had it SATISFIED the European market, but had CAPTURED it, the demand being increased so enormously that it had drawn on our stocks right up to the supply. An idea of the place which Canadian cheese has secured in the British market will be obtained by noting that for the calendar year of 1904 the total cheese imports of the United Kingdom were 286,081,376 pounds, and of this total Canada supplied 212,862,272 pounds.

The season's trade, however, has not been without its drawbacks. The export demand being good and active at an early stage had the unfortunate effect of hastening sellers, with the certain result that much cheese was sent forward far too quickly, and as the active demand was a genuine one these goods had to be at once used up, creating much dissatisfaction abroad.

Generally speaking, however, quality has been maintained, which accounts for the fact that prices have steadily advanced. It was thought by some dealers that prices would have to drop materially to stimulate export trade. Seeing, however, that the present prices have been reached through an improved estimation of Canadian cheese, combined with a firm and honest demand, it appears scarcely probable that any serious change will occur.

An additional and important feature of strength being that final offerings of cheese on Quebec and Ontario boards have changed hands at one and two points in advance of previous sales. One large buyer of cheese was heard to remark that he would take 1,000 cheese at present board prices if they could be secured.

It is an accepted fact that after the September make prices on the board usually show a slight decline. This year, however, things have reversed themselves, October cheese fetching easily the same standard as September make, whilst that made toward the end of the month and early November have really advanced on September prices.

GROCER INTERESTS AND TARIFF COMMISSION.

THE Tariff Commission, sitting in Toronto, since our going to press last week had under consideration the petition presented by the spice milling industry in Canada. All the spice dealers in Canada were represented by the deputation, headed by Robert Greig. The latter said that the fifty spice milling concerns which employed 1,500 persons found the existing tariff unsatisfactory, as it permitted the importation of many adulterated condiments.

The reading of petition called forth a good deal of discussion, remarks were passed referring to the recent discovery of adulterations, and it was stated that the Government was fully determined to put an end to the objectionable practice. The text of the petition runs as follows :

To the Members of the Tariff Commission, 1905.

Gentlemen,—The undersigned manufacturers beg to submit a statement of the conditions of the spice milling industry in Canada at the present time.

(A) Extent of the Spice Milling Industry—There are about fifty establishments engaged in this business in Canada, employing about 1,500 persons, and representing the investment of a large amount of capital.

(B) General Conditions—Owing largely to the operation of the prevailing Customs Tariff the trade conditions are not as satisfactory as could be desired. Large quantities of very low grade and impure spices are being shipped into Canada by United States manufacturers, who are not subject to the food inspection regulations of the Inland Revenue Department of Canada, and Canadian manufacturers are placed at a distinct disadvantage owing to the tariff, in being unable to offer pure spices at prices that will compete with these low-grade goods. To overcome this it is suggested that (a) a rigorous inspection on all spices be made at the port of entry, or (b) preferably that the duty be readjusted so as to preclude the entry of such goods into Canada.

(C) Raw Materials Used—The raw materials used are imported principally from the West Indies, East Indies, China, Japan, and Zanzibar, and consist largely of :

Pepper, ginger, allspice, cloves, cassia, cinnamon, and chillies, on which the duty is at present 12½ per cent. on whole goods, and 25 per cent. on ground goods.

Nutmegs and mace, the duty on which is 25 per cent. on both whole and ground goods.

Cocoanuts, on which the duty is 50c. per 100 when imported direct to a Canadian port, or $1 per 100 if otherwise shipped. (This represents about 25 per cent. ad valorem at the 50c. rate, or 50 per cent. at the $1 rate.)

Thyme, savory, sage, mint and herbs, the duty on which is 20 per cent on both whole and ground goods.

(D) Rearrangement of Tariff Desired —It is respectfully represented that a re-adjustment in the tariff made as follows would be of inestimable value to those engaged in the business in Canada, as well as to the Canadian public generally, as affording a protection against the entry of impure goods :

1. All whole spices, including pepper, ginger, allspice, cloves, cassia, cinnamon and chillies, to remain at 12½ per cent. ad valorem, as at present.

2. That whole nutmegs, mace, and all edible herbs, including thyme, sage, savory and mint, be placed on a uniform basis with other whole spices, viz., 12½ per cent. ad valorem.

3. A re-arrangement in the duty on all ground spices, including nutmegs and mace, now 25 per cent., and herbs, now 20 per cent., ad valorem, to a mixed rate of 12½ per cent. and 3c. per pound, the weight of the package, when one pound or less, to be included in the weight for duty. This will not increase the general tariff in any way, but will operate entirely to the exclusion of the low-grade goods above referred to.

4. A reduction in the rate on cocoanuts from the present specific duty of 50c. per 100, to an ad valorem rate of 12½ per cent. when imported direct to a Canadian port; when not imported direct the duty to remain as at present, namely, $1 per 100.

(E) Preferential Tariff — The spice manufacturers of Canada desire to express their approval of the provisions and operation of the British Preferential Tariff, in so far as it concerns this particular industry.

Respectfully submitted.

The brush manufacturers of Canada, represented by Mr. Emil C. Boeckh, president of the United Factories, Limited, asked that, instead of 25 per cent. ad valorem, the duty should be 25 cents per dozen on brushes, except those fastened in quills. He complained of the flooding of the Canadian market by American goods and by prison-made goods from various countries. He assured the Commission that there is no combination, association or agreement, and that the change in duty would keep out the cheaper classes of goods. He read a letter from a firm offering to supply prison-made goods.

"You don't need any amendment of the tariff for that," replied Mr. Fielding. "We have a law now against dumping and against importation of prison-made goods, and that firm could be convicted on their own letter."

The letter was handed in for the information of the Customs Department.

The first branch of the Retail Merchants' Association to be heard was the wholesale fruit and vegetable importers. Mr. Fred. C. Higgins pointed out that there were large trade interests involved. There were climatic reasons why Canada could not grow certain fruits, and others could only be grown in a restricted season. He saw no reason why, for instance, there should be any duty on bananas and oranges, on which, he understood, a duty was asked. Mr. Higgins presented a memorandum, asking the following changes in duty :

Cranberries—That the present duty of 25 per cent., amounting at present prices to $3 a barrel, be reduced to $1 per barrel, as the existing duty is prohibitive, and the production in Canada is small.

Grapes—That the present duty of 2 cents per pound be reduced to 1 cent per pound, as there was a great demand for them, and we have to depend on imported goods for a Winter supply. The present duty amounts to $400 per car.

Strawberries—That the present duty of 2 cents a pound is excessive; the importation begins in February and ceases in the latter part of May, and in no sense compete with the home-grown article.

Peaches—That the present duty of one per cent. per pound or $220 per car be reduced to half a cent from December 1 to August 15, and for the balance of the year the duty be unchanged.

Mr. Fisher pointed out that the fruit growers complained that the early imported fruits spoiled the taste of the consumers before the home product came in.

"From my experience as a retailer," Mr. Higgins replied, "I do not think the growers have any reason to complain of the prices received. There is a natural protection in the perishable nature of the commodity, and the expense of bringing it here. The imported fruit is not sold here at very low prices."

For the vegetable dealers, Mr. Frank Simpson presented the following views :

Potatoes—Duty should be reduced from 15 to 10 cents per bushel, as until July there is not sufficient to supply the home market.

Tomatoes—Duty of 25 per cent. is ample. Increase asked by growers to $1.20 per bushel would destroy the trade.

Onions—Duty should be reduced from 25 per cent. to 10 cents a bushel.

Cucumbers — Duty of 25 per cent. should be retained.

In response to a letter of inquiry regarding the progress of the association in the Arnaud district, Wilfrid Ledoux writes The Canadian Grocer as follows:

Arnaud, Man.,
Nov. 14, 1905.

Editor Canadian Grocer,
Winnipeg, Man.:

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your letter of recent date and beg to reply as follows to your questions regarding the association :

You ask how many dealers in this section have adopted the cash programme of the association. In reply I beg to state that out of 28 general merchants in this part of the country 22 have adopted a strictly cash business for the Winter months, and the other six will enforce the same system on December 1st. This delay was caused by the car shortage at some points hindering the marketing of the crops. Money will not be plentiful much before December 1st.

You ask whether in our section we are allowing 30-day accounts to be treated as cash. We do if we are satisfied that the customer will pay promptly, but if a customer is slow in paying, or if we are a little doubtful as to his financial condition, or if he is doubtful himself as to when he will be able to pay, we insist on strictly cash transactions. We are afraid of our customers abusing this privilege. My experience with 30-day accounts is that in many cases they are allowed to stand for several months.

You also ask whether we are meeting with much opposition from our customers in introducing the cash system. No, we are not. On the contrary, we are meeting with much encouragement from the best class of our customers, those who have the money. They are willing to pay cash for everything they buy, as they clearly understand that they are saving money by doing so, and recognize that the cash system is to their benefit.

We are meeting with strong opposition from a small percentage of our customers, those who have always bought their goods on credit and who are not very desirable as customers. Some of them are trying to break what they call the "Combine" by treating, others see a very short life for the "cash store," and still others are talking of the farmers clubbing together and going to Winnipeg to buy their goods direct from the wholesale jobbers; but, of course, this is only talk, which is quite natural at the start.

In this part of the country every merchant seems to have realized that the association is an absolute necessity to protect not only ourselves but the trade generally, and all merchants in this section are anxious to follow the programme adopted by the association.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space in The Canadian Grocer, I am,

Yours truly,
W. LEDOUX.

This letter indicates a very satisfactory state of affairs in Arnaud, and it is only an example of several such letters received at this office during the last fortnight. While advices received by The Canadian Grocer show that in a few sections the trade are not as enthusiastic as might be desired, the vast majority of the communications received (and this office has been in communication with the trade in almost every district where the association has been organized) show that the association is accomplishing effective work in this vexed question of long credits.

Mr. Ledoux is not the only dealer to mention that a few dealers are delaying the inauguration of their cash programme until Dec. 1st, owing to the fact that there have been serious car shortages in a few districts, thus delaying the marketing of the crop. It can readily be understood that in sections where the crop has not yet been marketed it is difficult to enforce the strictly cash system. November 1st was the date selected at the conventions because it was thought that by that date the crops would be pretty well marketed in all sections. But of course the association in convention assembled could not reckon with car shortages, and it may be necessary in some sections to delay the inauguration of the cash system until December 1st.

THE TRADING STAMP ACT.

THE following letter has been received by the editor of The Grocer from the National Cash Register Co., Limited, and has reference to the above Act and their coupon system, which it is claimed by a slight modification is unaffected by the new Act. The two letters speak for themselves :

Editor Canadian Grocer :—Our attention has been called to page 32 of the November 17th issue of The Canadian Grocer, commenting on the question of the Trading Stamp Act. I am forced to bring to your attention where you are in error in some of your statements in this article. You state to all your readers that they should drop at once with the whole business of giving receipts, coupons, premium tickets or any such device, which are redeemable, because you deem the giving of any such discounts as coming under the new Trading Stamp Act. I beg to attach you copy of a letter that has been given to each of our representatives. Please note the one signed by our solicitor.

This makes it clear that any merchant can still give the discount or rebate if on his discount checks they show their face value and they show that they are redeemable at any time and redeemable only at his store where the check was issued, and we are so advising by letter the thousands of merchants in this country who are using our National Cash Registers in connection with their business that issue a printed receipt to each customer for the amount of his purchase that on this receipt he can have his register print something like the following : "This check is good for 5 per cent. of face value in cash or goods, redeemable at any time in my store. $10 worth would entitle you to 50c."

Of course, whether the merchant wants to give 3, 5 or 10 per cent., that comes under his own jurisdiction.

I think by carefully reading the Act you will find that the above comes strictly within same, and I feel that you should certainly correct the impression given, as we have a great many merchants adopting our check printing registers every month, to say nothing of the thousands already using them.

I enclose you a sample check as issued by the register mentioned.

F. E. MUTTON,
Canadian Manager,
National Cash Register Co.

The attached letter to which Mr. Mutton refers is as follows :

National Cash Register Co. : I beg to advise you that the recent amendment to the Criminal Code, being Bill 196 of the last session of Parliament, known as the Trading Stamp Act, does not in any way affect or render liable in the slightest degree any user of your check device cash register.

The Bill was aimed at what are properly known as trading stamps and applies where the premium is redeemable other than by some person other than the vendor of the goods or by the vendor in goods not his property or exclusive property or by the vendor elsewhere than in the premises where he sells the goods.

Therefore the giver of a check under your check register system, where this check shows that it is given in the giver's place of business and redeemable there and shows its value on its face and is redeemed only by the giver at his own place of business, is outside of the operation of this Bill. In other words, the single giver of premiums with purchases, which premiums are given at his own store, is not within the operation of the Act.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Ontario Markets.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Nov. 22, 1905.

BUSINESS reports show considerable improvement since our last issue. Orders from outside points have been freely coming to hand and denote a disposition on the part of buyers to lay in good stocks before the ru'ing of the coming Christmas season.

In canned goods there is no new feature to mention. Orders have been plentiful and with the exception of strawberries, which are practically off the market, there is nothing of interest.

The sugar market has shown considerable strength on the New York and European markets which has had the effect of giving strength to the domestic trade during the current week. Acadian and Berlin sugars have advanced five cents, which now places them within 10 cents of other quotations.

Molasses shows no feature of interest. Syrups have been fairly active with prices continuing firm.

The coffee trade still continues to show moderate activity and a much better discernment is manifested by buyers, clearly showing that coffee is inclined to make headway in public favor.

The local tea trade has been fairly active and is more inclined to move in sympathy with the London reports. Teas which have been offered showing cup qualities have fetched firm prices and have been more easily placed.

Foreign dried fruits continue to show considerable strength, the demand for prunes has had the effect of still further strengthening the market and our prices are revised accordingly. Other lines of Mediterranean and Californian goods are developing interesting features as will be seen from our detailed report.

Rice and tapioca, whilst showing no special feature of development are continuing active in demand with quotations very firm.

Spice is occupying its usual interest at the present season with no distinctive feature of note.

Honey continues to attract a good deal of attention and samples are reported as showing excellent quality.

Beans are reported as difficult to get, it being believed that farmers are holding back supplies in view of probable strengthening markets.

Fish, both dried and fresh, are showing very active trade. Reports of quality are very encouraging and prices are considered to be moderate at present quotations which are ruling extremely firm.

The hide market is settling down to more normal conditions as will be seen by our detailed report.

Canned Goods—The market has continued a steady active demand, with no special feature of interest since our last report. Strawberries are withdrawn from quotation on account of short pack.

Sugar—The domestic market has been slow and uninteresting. The season for bulk trade has practically closed, and stocks have been run pretty low. buyers, however, show no disposition to purchase beyond immediate demand. Whilst it is believed that prices have practically touched bottom, it is not having any strengthening effect on the market. Buyers are disposed to sit tight and await events. The N. Y. market reports the development of considerable strength with a quotable advance and probably in sympathy with it Acadian and Berlin sugar have made an advance of 5c. during the current week.

Syrups and Molasses—Except for confectionery purposes there is very little doing in molasses. In syrups there has been a fair amount of activity manifest. Orders from outside points have been coming freely to hand, having the character of laying in stores in view of the coming Christmas trade. Our previous quotations are well maintained and rule firm. Coffee—Whilst trade has been fairly active, there are no great signs of advancing demand. There is little doubt but that the consumption is increasing, but on a steady progressive basis. Reports from New York denote greater activity and a stronger market for price. Cable advices were received from Santos reporting drought, unfavorable for the growing crops. European markets reported steady. Brazilian markets holding steady and firm.

Tea—The local market for tea has been fairly active and is showing more sympathy with the London market. There appears to be an increased demand for better class teas and more discrimination is being shown by buyers. Good liquoring teas are fairly easily placed and at firmer prices.

Reports from the London market denote a continued activity with offerings of Indian teas heavier than on any one week since January, 1904. There has been more irregularity in values, but generally speaking prices have remained firm. There has been a marked decline in the offerings of fine quality teas, which has consequently had a strengthening effect on quotations.

In Ceylon teas there has been active demand for the finest qualities, but the quality offered has been generally not much beyond medium grade. All medium and better grade teas have maintained a strong market.

There has been an active domestic demand for good quality greens, mainly of China character, during the week under review.

The trade on the street whilst reported as not of exceptional activity, is considered good.

Foreign and Dried Fruits—The domestic trade has developed considerable strength since our last report and prices have stiffened considerably, in many instances having made a distinctive advance. This is particularly so in the case of prunes. Whilst there are still remnants of stock from the past season which are being offered somewhat at parity of previous quotations, all new fruits, however, are showing the strength before mentioned and prices throughout have therefore been revised from 1 to 2 points.

In candied peel our prices will be found to have advanced from 1-4 to 1-2c.

Seeded Valencias are also showing a higher quotation to the extent of 1c.

Walnuts have also strengthened their position in sympathy with reports from primal markets and our quotations will be found from 1 to 2 points advance. Reports from primal markets denote the markets there as developing an unusual degree of strength.

Advices from Smyrna report figs as fetching quotations higher than at any time during the season, whilst layer figs have risen in full sympathy. The market is strong and stocks are reported as nearly depleted.

Prices for Sultana raisins are reported from Smyrna as to be steadily advancing and have reached the highest point during the season, in view of the small quantity which has reached the market and greatly depleted stocks.

Reports from Patras denote strong markets in currants and with every prospect of still further strength developing. It is not expected that there is likely to be any modification of prices.

Reports also denote Amalias and Filiatras as short crops, quite below an ordinary season.

Primal market reports Grenoble walnuts as a very short crop and prices accordingly developing considerable strength, whilst the quality of fruit is good it is reported as probable that the color will not be up to the highest standard on account of the unfavorable weather.

Advices to hand denote the arrival of the first direct shipment at New York so that bulk stocks are expected to arrive in Toronto at an early date. The direct consignment of filberts reached Toronto during the week in review.

GAZELLE BRAND

We are now prepared to receive orders for above brand which covers all our canned goods and a few other lines of exceptional quality.

There are on the market a great variety of good brands, of best brands, but we wanted something different for our customers who appreciate unique goods, who realize that next to quality, looks also help the selling — and we have evolved the GAZELLE brand.

We have had our labels made in the highest type of lithographer's art—each can is wrapped in colored tissue paper—and our embossed label at once stamps the goods as unique both in quality and in looks.

Price, no higher than the best quality sells for.

We have added to our list frozen sea herring at 4 1-2c., the first car of which has been received by F. T. James Co., Limited. Hides—The local market for hides is settling to more normal conditions and it is generally believed that the winter season, whilst expected to maintain somewhat of a higher character, will be more on a natural basis.

Reports from Chicago still denote great eccentricity in that market. Prices are still maintained on a high parity, but have developed a weaker character since our last report, but there is no new feature which is expected to influence the Canadian market. It will be seen that our prices are revised on a basis more according to that ruling, previous to the late fluctuations of the domestic trade.

Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Nov. 23, 1905.

THE general condition of the grocery jobbing trade is reported very satisfactory, business in all lines being good. Travelers' orders are also showing up better in volume and the feeling prevails that until the usual stoppage of heavy buying before the Christmas holidays sets in a good business will continue.

The tea trade is particularly good and sales are numerous and heavy, all lines receiving good attention, with Japans probably showing more inquiry in the past few days than other grades. China greens, both Young Hysons and Gunpowders, are much inquired for. Ceylon blacks and greens are firm and a fair business reported.

The advance of 10 points in sugar on the New York market, as well as the advance in raws abroad, has set the trade thinking that the turn towards higher prices is reached, and it is not unlikely that Canadian refiners will in sympathy with the New York and foreign markets have to advance.

Canned goods are steady and no new features to report, with the exception that some shading under the Canadian canners' prices, equal to 5 per cent. was noted the early part of the week.

Coffees and spices are steady and featureless.

Foreign dried fruits are interesting and special reference is made in the department devoted to Mediterranean fruits.

The fish business is good and improving and dealers are very well satisfied with their turnover.

The provision market is easy and with the exception of the weakness in hams, which set in about a week ago, there is nothing new to report.

Butter is holding very high under strong local demand, while cheese, which has been soaring up since the early part of September, is firm. Export in both these lines is practically concluded.

Flour is in good demand at unchanged prices.

Canned Goods— There are no new features to note in the canned goods situation this week. Business by jobbers is reported to be satisfactory, and deliveries are being made. Some inquiries for tomatoes are already going around, which would indicate that stocks for requirements are light. Some of the independent canners appear to be getting in here at somewhat less prices than quoted by the Canadian Canners, Limited. The Grocer's attention was called to a sale made the early part of the week, at a reduction of 5 per cent. under Canners, Ltd. prices. Canned fish fish, such as salmon, haddies and lobsters are meeting with fair business. We quote:

Sugar—The sugar market shows signs of recovering New York advices on Monday, indicate an advance of 10 points, while foreign raws are quoted 6d. higher. In some quarters it is thought that the turn has set in and that prices are bound to advance. They certainly have been low enough. Inquiry by The Grocer to-day shows a general feeling in the trade of a recovery towards better tone in the sugar market. It is not unlikely that before the week is out an advance will be noted. There has not been as yet, however, any very extensive buying on the part of the trade, but a further advance of 10 to 15 points in the New York market will no doubt see better business here. Syrups and Molasses— Molasses is very quiet and practically nothing doing. Any business going is of a hand to mouth character. The season for shipments by boat is practically closed. There is no change to note in prices, which are as below. Corn syrups are in fair demand. We quote:

Coffee—There are no changes to report in the coffee situation this week. Local business is fair, with prices unchanged. Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre, in their weekly report, under date of 20th, on Brazil coffees, say:

We have buyers who wait for the market to become strong and advancing. Frequently they have to come in at, or near the top, and complain that they do not find their coffee department as profitable as it should be. Our friends who buy freely after a substantial decline, on the other hand, have a smile that wont come off. Such a market is before you to-day.

Santos and Rios are 15 points below even date last year and 115 points below the high point for this crop.

Brazil remains firm and as has been pointed out frequently in these circulars, is receiving 25 per cent. less in their money than even date last year. Stocks in Rio and Santos are 1,868,000 bags against 2,408,000 even date last year and receipts must decrease rapidly from now until end of season.

The much feared liquidation of December contracts is now "a tale that was told," and the fact that prices remain unchanged indicates the natural strength of the article.

Tea—The tea market is in a very satisfactory state. Dealers are receiving good supply of orders and the feeling that prices are likely to go higher is bringing in inquiries from country buyers more freely. There has been quite a noticeable activity in Japans and this is no doubt due to the very great shortage and the fact tha the trade is realizing inability to secure at less figures. Japan siftings and fannings are scarce and considerable inquiry for same prevails. Stocks are very light and those who have any are high in prices. China teas of all kinds are firm and good business going. China blacks are also in fair demand. Ceylon blacks as well as greens are also being turned over in fair sized quantities. Taking it all round the trade in teas is good. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Valencia raisins—There is practically nothing new since our last report, but considerable distribution has taken place since the arrival of the Jacona, which leaves this market not too much stock. Sultanas have gone into consumption freely, the advanced prices not having in any way checked the demand.

Currants—A cable from Patras on Tuesday, advises a further advance of 9d. with a strong market, and higher prices are confidently looked forward to in the near future.

Nuts—New Mayette Grenobles have arrived and quality showing very satisfactory, and although the price is higher than it has been for some years past, the early arrivals have been promptly absorbed. Marbots and Bordeaux walnuts have not yet arrived, but are understood to be close at hand.

The imports of Tarragona almonds have practically ceased and the Jacona shipments have been fairly well distributed leaving stocks in first hands within seasonable comfort. The market abroad has shown an advance since the direct steamer sailed and new imports are bound to cost somewhat higher than direct importation. Shelled almonds have recovered their position, which they temporarily lost a week or two ago, and good brands are held on even higher quotations than those of last month.

Dates—The shipments via New York have reached Canada and have largely been taken up at exceptionally low prices. The quality of the fruit opens up satisfactorily. The first tide shipments via London are not due here until probably the middle of December, but even then a reduction in prices is not looked for, as latest cables advise market very firm, in fact, it would not come as a surprise to see the London fruit fetch even better prices than the early arrivals by New York.

Figs—Smyrna figs have sold very low and there is very little stock remaining in the importers' hands. The quality varies somewhat, some shipments showing excellent value, while others are reported to be somewhat inferior.

California prunes are in very strong position. Stocks have been taken up not only by the home market, but large exports have been made to Europe. Advices from the Coast estimate stocks on hand to exceed four hundred cars. The syndicate last week decided to advance their prices 1-4c., which they thought the position of the small stocks remaining in their hands justified them in doing.

Latest advice says peanuts are likely to turn out as good a grade as in former years and as for prices, it is thought that the opening prices will be the lowest. Rice and Tapioca—The rice market remains steady with trading about as usual. There are no changes to note. Tapioca seems to be getting much stronger, latest advices in New York report a good demand and small supplies and reports from the east would indicate a further advance. Locally no change is reported and business is steady. We quote:

Fish—The demand for all kinds of fish continues active, in fact large quantities of salted and pickled fish are being moved. Stocks are light and prices have been firm with a tendency to advance. Green cod especially is scarce.

In prepared fish there is a scarcity of skinless cod in cases, in fact some dealers have none to offer. A fair stock is still held in some hands and prices have been advanced with every indication that they will go higher.

In fresh fish the continued scarcity of haddock is due to stormy weather along the Atlantic Coast and has had the effect of keeping prices high. This also applies to steak cod.

Quantities of fresh frozen fish are coming into the market, including new frozen herring, large size fish, also frozen B. C. salmon and halibut, as well as light fish, such as dore or pickerel, whitefish and pike so that dealers have a large variety to choose from.

Smoked fish are lower in haddies and kippered herrings with a brisk demand.

Oysters in bulk are selling freely at former quotations.

Malpecques in shells are meeting with ready sale but prices are higher on account of scarcity.

IN MEMORIAM.

A GAP that will not soon be filled was left in the travelers' fraternity Monday last, when Harry Taylor, for 20 years Western Ontario representative of Christie, Brown & Co., passed away at his home in Chatham, Ontario.

Mr. Taylor was a son of the late Captain John Taylor, of the 71st Highlanders, and a brother of the late C. W. Taylor, of the Globe, and of Judge Taylor of the Yukon.

Mr. Taylor was a typical traveler of the old school. In early years he had been in business with the late George Young of Chatham, before going on the road for Christie, Brown & Co. His was a particularly sunny and jovial nature, a generous hearted wholesouled gentleman, who won his way by the openness of his disposition and the straightforwardness of his character.

Mr. Harry Taylor.

His monthly visits to the factory in Toronto were looked forward to with keen pleasure by the office staff, with whom he was as great a favorite as with his customers on the road.

It is significant of the man that since he was overtaken by the illness which for the last couple of years has kept him off his route, and has finally laid him low, the substitute who relieved him has repeatedly been stopped on the streets of the towns and villages throughout Western Ontario by little children who inquired for the health of their jovial traveler friend, Mr. Taylor.

Harry Taylor made a hard fight for life. Only a fortnight ago he was in Toronto at the head office, seemingly improved in health and as cheery as ever. His loss will be deplored and his memory cherished by a host of friends, as well as a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Dr. Rutherford, of Chatham.

TORONTO GROCERS MEET.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association held their monthly meeting on Monday, the 20th inst. A resolution was passed condemning any further duty on imported vegetables on the ground that any move in that direction was distinctly opposed to the best interests of the trade. The position of secretary was held over for further consideration at the next meeting.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, are quoting special prices on figs of all kinds.

Warren Bros. Co. are offering special values in New Orleans and Porto Rico molasses.

Notice the ad in this issue in reference to Golden Rule Sardines. J. W. Windsor, Montreal, selling agent for these goods, reports that they are giving every satisfaction and demand is steadily increasing.

The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, report a very active demand for the French prunes advertised in last week's Grocer. It would be wise to order now as their stock is being rapidly depleted.

White & Co., Limited, received their first car California navels for the season last week, also the first car Mexican oranges.

New shipments of new shelled almonds are in store with the Eby, Blain Co., Limited.

Out-of-season specialties, such as mushrooms, pineapples, tomatoes, cucumbers, fancy California grapes, are always in evidence at White & Co.'s warehouse.

Warren Bros. & Co. report good sales on a line of French prunes to retail at 5 cents.

THEODORE H. ESTABROOKS, ST. JOHN, N.B.

THE grocery trade of Canada as well as the general trader throughout the Dominion and even beyond its confines is familiar with the legend, "Red Rose Tea is good tea." In the daily press of all the larger cities and even in the columns of the larger country weekly papers, on the fences and boardings of almost every city and town of importance as well as along the highways and byways of the land the above comprehensively terse and authoritative sign arrests the attention of the citizen. In the stores the phrase stares one in the face panelled along the shelves and walls, in the theatres the programmes relieve the "entre act" pauses by the suggestion that no matter if the play is indifferent or poor, "Red Rose Tea is good tea." Even at church socials and bazaars in aid of every worthy object pleasant maidens serve what they confidently state is "good tea." And so on ad infinitum goes the song, "Red Rose Tea is good tea."

The Grocer in taking the pleasure of presenting to its readers in this issue a sketch of the career of the man who has not only placed upon the market a tea that he says "is a good tea," but has established himself as one of the stalwart business men in his own Province "down by the sounding sea," desires to pay its tribute to a fellow Canadian business man, and to emphasize the fact that hard work, persistency and a close adherence to an idea is bound to reap its reward, and what Theodore H. Estabrooks has done in his chosen sphere, others imbued with a like energy and pluck can also accomplish. This is not an ad for Red Rose Tea nor for Mr. Estabrooks—neither the one nor the other requires it. The tea is doing its own talking over the counters of hundreds of grocery stores, and the subject of the sketch is not even aware that his photo has been surreptitiously obtained for reproduction in the columns of The Grocer.

Theodore H. Estabrooks, wholesale tea merchant, and one of the most successful of St. John's younger business men, was born at Wicklow, Carleton

T. H. Estabrooks.

County, N.B., on December 28, 1861, and is therefore in his 44th year. He was educated in the public schools and in the grammar school at Sheffield. Having an idea of going into commercial life he took a course in Kerr's Business College in this city and in April, 1884, entered the employ of W. F. Harrison & Co. on Smythe street. He was with the firm for ten years, one year as a junior and the remaining nine years as chief clerk or manager.

On May 1st, 1894, he commenced business for himself on Dock street, dealing chiefly with the import and export trade with the West Indies. The tea trade was at that time of minor importance, but gradually grew until Mr. Estabrooks gave his whole attention to it. He foresaw that a change must come, and that the direct importation and the blending and packing of teas would become a great business in St. John, and also that the teas of India and Ceylon would steadily gain in favor in this territory. His foresight and energy resulted in the development of a business of national extent.

Outgrowing the premises on Dock street he removed to Nos. 11 and 12 North Wharf and these quarters being also found soon to be too small he built for himself on Mill street, occupying in October, 1903, the large and handsome brick block where he is now situated. This building is the largest in Canada devoted exclusively to the tea trade. Views of the building and its various departments have appeared in The Grocer in Mr. Estabrooks' ads.

Mr. Estabrooks now employs about seventy people. He has seventeen travelers, covering practically the whole of Canada, Newfoundland and a portion of the New England States. He has branches in Toronto and Winnipeg. He has in his St. John warehouse a complete modern equipment for blending, weighing, packing and labelling teas, and his establishment is therefore an important local industry.

Mr. Estabrooks is connected with the Board of Trade, New Brunswick Tourist Association and Exhibition Association. He has been a member of the executive boards of these organizations for a number of years, and has always taken an active interest in them. He has been a member of several important delegations to Ottawa on matters of importance to the trade of this port, and was a member of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which this year toured Great Britain and Europe. He is a member of the St. John Taxation Commission appointed last year. He is on the executive of the Protestant Orphan Asylum, Boys' Industrial Home and Associated Charities. He is interested also in a number of industrial enterprises. Though he has never come before the public prominently in politics, he is an active supporter of the Liberal party, and has always taken a lively interest at election time.

At the time of the Riel Rebellion Mr. Estabrooks was a member of the 62nd Fusiliers, and when the troops were called from here he accompanied the detachment. They, however, did not get past Sussex, as the trouble was all over.

Mr. Estabrooks is married, his wife being a daughter of the late Mr. Thos. Crothers, of Upper Gagetown, and five children assist them in enjoying the beverage known as "Red Rose Tea."

B. C. Markets.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 16, 1905.

DELEGATES Elliott and Mackenzie have returned from Toronto, where they went to represent the Vancouver and Victoria shippers in urging upon the Canadian Manufacturers Association the wisdom of withdrawing their request to the C.P.R. to restore the old rule No. 2, by which mixed cars of goods were allowed to be shipped. As a result of the efforts of the delegates they express the belief that the Manufacturers' Association will withdraw their application and reconsider the matter. The delegates interviewed a number of leading manufacturers and shippers in various eastern cities, and they state that they think the large majority of them had paid but little attention to the request, and that it was the work of a comparatively few men, who would be benefitted by the proposed reversion to the old rule.

At a meeting of shippers held last week, it was decided to give the C.P.R. three weeks' extension of time in which to file an answer to the claims of Coast shippers for an equalization of freight rates between Vancouver and Winnipeg to Edmonton, Macleod, Calgary, and common points. The recent reductions by the Canadian Northern, so the C.P.R. claims, compelled them to follow suit, and now Coast merchants demand that the handicap thus made

It is not generally known that a pioneer trail, from Fort St. John on the Peace River, northwestward towards Dawson, is being forced through by a detachment of Northwest Mounted Police, under the veteran Capt. Constantine. He has a commission to make an overland route, and has reported nearly 100 miles of the trail cut from Fort St. John. It is his proposal to have a party working southeast from Dawson next season. This would be an all-Canadian route.

The steamer Moana, which sailed last Friday for Australia, took out 2,000 boxes of apples, most of which were from British Columbia orchards. Dominion Fruit Inspector Maxwell Smith, who examined the consignment, found it in first-class condition, and the fruit of fine quality. A few months ago Tasmanian apples were being imported into Vancouver by the same steamer, as the opposite seasons make such cross shipments possible and profitable.

A striking instance, one of the many which can be quoted, to show the value of agricultural land in this Province, and the big results which may be obtained, is given in the story of Mr. D. Gellatly, of Okanagan. He has a fertile farm on the west shore of the lake not far from Peachland and Kelowna. His specialty is growing tomatoes, and he has made a success of it. A ready market is found in the Northwest and in the Coast cities, and the amazing yield of a crop which was marketed to bring returns of $5,000 per acre is vouched for on excellent authority, that of the shipping records for the season just over.

In order to get into the market with extra early fruit, Mr. Gellatly has now in hand the construction of a vast greenhouse, covering three acres. This will be heated with steam pipes, and the enterprising gardener expects to best out the importations from Mexico and California, which have the market in the off season.

Hay grown in the Far North, by a pioneer ranchman of the Stewart River district, is delivered in the Dawson market. S. Henry reached the northern capital before the river closed with a cargo of hay on a raft. Both hay and raft were from his ranch on a creek flowing into the Stewart River, which itself empties into the Yukon above Dawson. The raft Mr. Henry constructed of logs, and on this he floated his hay crop to the Yukon capital. His hardihood and enterprise were rewarded by a price of $50 to $60 per ton for his hay. Other ranchers have been raising hay on the Stewart River this year. Add this to the vegetable production of the Yukon, as frequently exhibited in well-grown samples brought to this city, and the north is robbed of much of its rigor.

Regulations regarding uniformity of fruit packages are by degrees bringing about the desired result in improved style of boxes and packing. The Dominion regulations decreeing a standard package for apples will go into effect after the first of the new year. The Provincial authorities have announced recently a regulation, which, of course, they can only enforce in B.C., and that is that dealers must burn up or destroy the emptied packages, and in no case use them, or allow them to be used, for re-filling.

Groceries—Condition fairly active for the season. In provisions a rise of 10 cents per bbl. on flour is noted, the ruling price now being $5.80 per bbl.

The Fishery Commission is sitting in New Westminster this week. So far the principal evidence taken has been that supplied by fishermen and farmers on the Fraser River, who combine ranching with fishing. The canners have been backward in presenting their views. The chief object of discussion has been the point on the Fraser River above which fishing will not be allowed. Those interested claim that it will work a great hardship on many ranchers along the Fraser for the 30 odd miles from New Westminster bridge to Mission bridge if the former bridge is made the point at which fishing ceases, instead of the other bridge as formerly.

Winter fishing of halibut is done farther afield than in the Summer months on this Coast. Beginning with the present month the halibut steamers go to Hecate Straits, and even as far north as Coronation Island. This latter point is nearly 100 miles north of Hecate Straits, and is about west of Ketchikan, in the strip of Alaska which comes down the B.C. Coast to Dixon Entrance. The Summer fishing grounds are at Goose Island, off Cape Scott, the northern extremity of Vancouver Island. On the Winter banks, Hecate Straits and Coronation Island banks, much larger catches and much larger fish are averaged.

Cohoes and dog salmon still run well in the Fraser River. The cohoes are fine fish and nearly all those caught are frozen for eastern shipment, though one cannery at New Westminster, the St. Mungo, is canning these fish.

The dog salmon, formerly not valued at all commercially, are now being bought by Japanese and salted for the Japan market, where it finds a ready sale. In reality there is nothing against this fish, its flesh being entirely wholesome, but, of course, not the equal of other varieties in color, flavor or quality. The Japanese buy all that is offered, and as a result now that there is a good run of this variety many fishermen, whites as well as Japanese, are getting good money for their work on the river and gulf.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 23rd, 1905.)

CHRISTMAS trade in many lines of groceries is now becoming quite brisk and it is noticeable that the demand this year is principally for high class and expensive goods. Fancy lines are in active request.

Sugar has been unchanged for more than a week but the trade expect a further decline and seem to have no confidence in the market. The market is undoubtedly weak and further declines will create no surprise. In the meantime, as is usual on a falling market, the trade are buying very carefully and only for present requirements.

New shelled almonds are now on the local market and they are quoted at 30c. per lb.

Table figs are likely to be advanced very shortly as there has been an advance in primary markets of about 25 per cent. on the prices quoted a few weeks ago. Winnipeg houses have considerable supplies on hand and may not advance the price at once as figs are not good stock to hold and they would not want to divert the demand to some other fruit. However, the next supplies they buy will command much higher prices than obtain at present.

New layer and selected Valencias have been in stock a few days and they are going fast. The quality of the new stock is good and the trade are well pleased with it. California raisins are still quoted at high prices and very few muscatels are selling. The price is too high for this market considering the low price of Valencias. Spanish raisins are selling well on account of the high price of Californias.

Canned Goods—New green gage plums are now in stock and quotations will be found below. Asparagus has also been received in stock since the last report in this paper. There is a normal demand for canned goods but there are no new features of note. We quote:

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

TORONTO.

THE aspect of trade is distinctly more encouraging since our last report. Export inquiries have been plentiful and much active business has resulted. The result of the decision of the Freight Commission is anxiously awaited, as to whether it will have any material improvement on the situation. European buyers are now showing anxiety as to deliveries. Up to the present they have manifested a good deal of consideration, knowing the serious proposition that brokers are up against on this side, but now that in many instances deliveries are several weeks in arrears and with no immediate certainty of delivery, buyers at European points are naturally getting more anxious. Otherwise the outlook for export trade is exceedingly good and prices, although showing a disposition of easiness, are being maintained and if it were possible to guarantee early delivery many large orders would be at once secured. Brokers, however, are reluctant to accept orders for any definite date.

The domestic market is still ruling firm and active business is being done. As is to be expected at this time of the year the demand for flour in the Maritime Provinces has been very good. The approach of close of navigation has compelled flour dealers at points reached only by water to secure their Winter supply, which has naturally caused a brisk demand.

Local millers have been buying freely, especially those who are located near the C.P.R., as they can get wheat in more quickly by that road.

The oat market continues firm and there is good demand for heavy oats.

GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT.

HARVESTING was concluded in Ontario and the Eastern Provinces in the opening week of the month, and in Western Canada about 10 days to 2 weeks later.

Threshing was fully under way, and the returns in many localities were found even more satisfactory than had been anticipated, both as regards the quality and the quantity of the yield.

In nearly all sections of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, few localities reported a yield of less than 20 bushels to the acre, and in Manitoba alone the estimate of the Western Grain Dealers' Association placed the total wheat crop at 54,390,000 bushels, valued at $41,000,000, the average yield being 22.8 bushels per acre.

In the Maritime Provinces dry weather in August caused a diminution in the grain crop, and the fruit crop was only fair, though general conditions compared very favorably with last year.

Elsewhere the grain crops were saved with little or no injury, and the root crops, including sugar-beets, gave promise of an excellent yield at the close of the month.

The marketing of the crops was generally under way, having been begun at an unusually early date, and with exceptional activity in Western Canada. Heavy deliveries were reported at Winnipeg, Fort William, and other points of transfer, and the amount of wheat handled showed a large increase, as compared with September, 1904. Large additions to rolling stock were made by railways for the purpose of handling this traffic, and every effort made to expedite deliveries, though a shortage of cars was complained of in some localities.

Very good progress in Fall ploughing was reported, and in some sections of Ontario the seeding of Winter wheat was already completed.

The gathering of the fruit crop made employment in this branch very active, conditions being practically unchanged since August, apples being light in most localities; pears light except in British Columbia; peaches very good and grapes a full crop.

COMMISSION ON SUPPLY OF CARS.

THE Railway Commission, Nov. 16, issued the first order in reference to the car shortage investigation. The order is made to the Grand Trunk Railway Co. of Canada, and its purpose is to prevent discrimination, as was alleged by the Dominion Millers' Association in letters to the board.

The present judgment simply deals with one feature of the car shortage situation, which, in view of the early close of navigation, was taken up first. The inquiry into the complaint of alleged shortage of equipment generally is being prosecuted.

The board orders that if at any time after notice of the order, and before Jan. 31 next, the Grand Trunk Railway fails to furnish at Midland, Collingwood, Meaford, and Point Edward, sufficient empty cars to fill all shipping orders then on file at such point, such cars as are furnished shall be apportioned among such shipping orders which have been filed for more than one day, at such port, in the order of filing, until one car has been allotted to each order.

After which the remaining cars, if any, shall be apportioned, pro rata, among the remainder of such orders which have been so on file for more than one day, and which have not then been filled. This operation shall be repeated from day to day, so long as the supply of cars is less than the requirements.

Provided, always, that the railway company may be allowed to utilize its equipment by departing from the order of filing: (a) So as to furnish loads of suitable weight for cars of capacity of less than 30 tons each, which would otherwise be idle while waiting their turn; (b) to furnish loads for cars so defective as to be unfit for the carriage of grain in bulk; and (c) to clear elevator bins of remnants of grain when such bins are required during open navigation for the immediate reception of grain of another kind or grade, for which other bins are not available, the total of such remnants not to exceed three carloads on any one day from any one bin.

That no shipping order for grain shall be considered to have been properly filed under the foregoing provisions until the grain is in the elevator from which it is to be shipped, or in a ship or vessel then in actual process of unloading into such elevator.

LIVERPOOL AS A MILLING CENTRE.

BUSINESS men of Liverpool, England, have a project detrimental to Minneapolis flour mills. They have conceived the idea that it is better for them to use Canadian wheat than the Minnesota product, and have planned to build a flour manufacturing centre there to outrival Minneapolis, and they will not use Minnesota wheat.

A Minneapolis attorney, who returned from a three months' absence in England, said: "They seem to have just awakened in Liverpool to the possibilities of Western Canada. They believe the wheat acreage in the United States is decreasing, while that of Canada will increase every year, and with tariff walls between the countries, Canadian wheat is bound to go to England. They plan to build immense flour mills there, and think that in the course of time the United States won't have wheat enough for its own consumption and will have to import that grain instead of exporting it. In this way they have figured it out that Liverpool will control the wheat and flour of the world instead of the United States." He found Liverpool men completely captivated by the idea of increasing the flour business of England, and think it wrong to import so much wheat from the United States.

GRAIN AT ELEVATORS.

An official return received by the Trade and Commerce Department from Fort William and Port Arthur elevators shows that during October there was received 11,541,937 bushels of wheat, compared with 6,738,935 bushels in October, 1904. The shipments out of

A LOWER SCHEDULE ON BEANS

THE Board of Railway Commissioners has handed down judgment in the complaint of the Farmers' Association of Ontario, alleging that the railway companies have unreasonably advanced their rates on beans in carloads from shipping points in Western Ontario. After argument and investigation the board orders:

"That the mileage rates published by certain railway companies to be charged on grain, in carloads, immediately prior to May 10th, 1905, and which untill January 1st, 1903, were published to be charged also on beans, in carloads, be again published as the maximum rates to be changed on beans, in carloads, between points in Eastern Canada on any one line of railway subject to the Railway Act, 1903.

"As to tolls, the rate between any station in Western Ontario and Belleville, Ivanhoe or Gravenhurst, or any intermediate point, not to exceed 15 cents per 100 lbs.

"Except that between points west of Toronto and points east of Belleville and Ivanhoe, the rates on beans, in carloads, shall not exceed those now charged on grain, in carloads, with the addition of thirty per cent., and subject to a maximum rate of 20 cents per 100 lbs. to or from Montreal or Ottawa, or intermediate points, the rates at and on each side of Belleville and Ivanhoe to be merged by reduction, if necessary, to be so in conformity with section 252, sub-section 3, of the Act.

"That to points east and south of Montreal to which through rates are made by the railway companies by the addition of so-called arbitraries charged on grain shall be added to the aforesaid rate, or rates, to Montreal, except that the through rates so arrived at shall not be lower than the through rates on grain current at the time of shipment, plus thirty per cent.

"That to points east of the last mentioned arbitrary territory, on the lines of the Canadian Pacific and Intercolonial Railways, the rates shall be those published to apply on grain in the higher or non-competitive tariffs of the initial railways, the points to which the rates are affected by water competition, and which are shown in the lower or competitive tariffs, to be placed for the purposes of this order in the groups into which they would fall if shown in the higher or non-competitive tariffs.

"These rates, and those of the last mentioned arbitrary territory, to be merged by reduction, if necessary to do so in conformity with section 252, subsection 3, of the Act; and the minimum rate to St. John and intermediate points to be, under the present basis of rates, that in force to Intercolonial Railway stations immediately east of St. John.

"Provided that no railway company is to be hereby required to charge less rates on beans than it charges on grain between the same points, as shown in its tariffs now on file with the board."

FRUIT CULTURE IN B. C.

"I BELIEVE British Columbia will within a few years be one of the leading fruitgrowing countries of the world," remarked Mr. R. M. Palmer, secretary of the Bureau of Information of British Columbia, on the floor of the board of trade, Montreal.

Mr. Palmer is now on his way to London, there to superintend an exhibition of British Columbia products at the Colonial Fruit Show, which will be held in the British capital the first week in December.

In speaking of the fruit grown in the far Western Province, Mr. Palmer stated that they did not strive so much for quantity as they did for quality, and in competition last year with all the rest of the world they had managed to carry away from the London show two gold medals, which was better than any other single section had done.

There are now in British Columbia thirteen thousand acres devoted to fruit culture, and the coming season this would be increased to twenty thousand acres.

The area fit for the cultivation of fruit in our Province is relatively small, that is in comparison with the vast acreage of the entire Province, so our people are making the best possible use of their acres, striving, as I said before, not so much for quantity as for quality.

APPLE CO-OPERATION.

Reports received at the Department of Agriculture, Canada, were to the effect that excellent prices had been obtained for this year's apple crop by the different co-operative associations formed for the purpose of handling the fruit crop, the crop having been sold direct to wholesalers for cash.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

TRADE has revived considerably since our last issue, and good business is reported. White & Co., Toronto, report arrival of carload of Californian navel oranges and also one of Mexican oranges. These two cars are the first to arrive in Canada this season, and are really the opening of the season for California fruits. The fruit market reports all denote activity in view of Christmas trade. Some heavy orders have been already placed for future delivery. Jamaica oranges have dropped considerably, being now quoted at $3.75 and $4. Floridas have eased a little, and lemons are showing a decline.

Fruits.

For the first time this season Jap oranges are in the market. It is perhaps a week or ten days earlier than usual. The consignment does not appear to be over well matured.

In local fruits apples are still plentiful and in the main of good quality.

A few winter pears still offering.

Oranges are beginning to reach the market in increasing quantities.

Vegetables.

Potatoes of lower mainland origin are reported not keeping very well, though careful selection and sorting has been done by the growers. Stocks are likely to show heavy reduction from that cause. Prices for lower mainland are still $15 and $16 per ton. Asherofts command $24 and $25 per ton.

Onions of local growth are still selling cheap at $1.25 per sack.

Beets and parsnips, 75c. per sack.

Carrots and turnips, 50c.

Local cabbage is selling at about 1c. per lb.

Celery brings 40c. per dozen.

Greenhouse lettuce, $1.75 to $2.00 per box.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Green Fruits.

It is yet early for Christmas demand.

Some fine Ontario apples, chiefly Spys, are offered. Prices this season high. Some nice Nova Scotia apples offered but sale is light. There have been too many poor apples.

Oranges are still rather poor. Florida and California stock are being offered. Good crops reported.

Lemons are easier and of better quality.

In grapes, Malagas are about the only line offered.

Quinces have been quite plentiful.

Cranberries are very high.

FRESH AND CURED FISH

GOVERNMENT FISHING REPORTS.

IN the Maritime Provinces small catches were reported by fishermen, dogfish appearing off the coast in great numbers and interfering considerably with the industry. The Government exaerimental dogfish reduction works at Canso, N.S., were working to their fullest capacity, which is upwards of 100 tons daily. Oyster fishing opened on the 23rd of the month and gave increased employment. In New Brunswick, also, salmon fishermen reported a profitable month, but mackerel on the north shore was a failure, and the fall run of shad was disappointing. Cod and haddock were plentiful, and sardine fishermen made good catches. Experiments in the Scotch method of curing herring were continued in Nova Scotia.

In British Columbia the sockeye run was continued until an unusually late date. An official return of the pack based on the retort count of the canneries on the Fraser River, numbering 38, was 782,442 cases. Including the canneries on the other rivers, the total pack for the Province is estimated in round numbers at 1,000,000. Good catches of cohoes were also reported during September, the price being fixed by the canneries at 15 cents. Ten and eight cents was paid for sockeyes during the closing days of the run. A heavy output of fry was reported from the hatchery at Seaton Lake.

The Commission appointed by the Dominion Government to inquire into means for the preservation and improvement of the fishing resources of British Columbia held a number of meetings during September.

A large number of lobsters were successfully transferred from the waters of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, Canada.

The earnings of fishermen on the Fraser during the sockeye season of the present year were estimated to average from $350 to $400, as compared with $150 and $200 last year. About 6,000 fishermen were employed, 3,000 of whom were Japanese, 1,000 Indians and the balance whites. Last year about 4,000 men were employed.

REVOLUTION IN SEA FISHING.

WAS the new steam trawler Spray, launched at Quincy Point this week, the first of a fleet that is to revolutionize sea fishing? is a question much debated by the seafaring men in the vicinity. Opinion seems evenly divided. The trawler will be ready for the service of the Bay State Fish Company early next month, is a steel craft of 260 tons register, 126 feet 8 inches long, 22 feet beam, moulded, and 12 feet depth of hold. Her cost was $60,000, or about six times as much as the ordinary fishing schooner. Sixteen men will be sufficient to man her and look after the trawls, and they will work on salary, instead of on a division of the profits. Two nets will gather in the unwary fish along the coast, each 10 feet deep and 8 feet wide, one operating on the starboard bow and the other on the quarter. While one is being emptied of its catch, the other will be down scooping in the fish. One hundred tons can be carried on a trip, and the vessel is so equipped that she can operate either on the Georges or on the Grand Banks. The Spray will have a speed of eleven knots.

The success of the Spray will be watched with much interest by Canadian fishermen. Several large Halifax fish houses are working on similar lines, and as soon as it can be shown that the new fast sailing steam trawlers are a success a change will undoubtedly result in the fishing methods of the Nova Scotia interests.

SALMON STRIPPING.

Salmon stripping, which has been in progress at the Carleton salmon pond for about a fortnight, will probably be finished to-day. The work is under the supervision of W. A. Mott, with Inspector Fred Belyea for assistant, and the average number of fish stripped daily has been from 50 to 100.

The process is of considerable interest, and many persons have availed themselves of the opportunity of watching it. About eighty-five per cent. of the eggs are fertilized through the method now in use.

The eggs have been neatly packed in trays, and will be sent to the hatcheries in Sydney, Ottawa and Grand Falls. All the salmon stripped were found to be of good size.

THE MIGRATION OF FISHES.

All fish are more or less regularly migratory, though the extent and range, as well as the causes of their migrations, remain meanwhile obscure.

It is believed, for instance, that the summer herring fishery comes and goes with the annual ebb and flow of the great Atlantic inflow which sweeps round the north of Scotland, grows in intensity through the winter until early spring and then subsides until plaice move quickly. Heincke records two, which traveled about 88 miles in 28 days, or an average of not less than three miles a day.

Dr. Fulton has observed that adult plaice, swimming leisurely in the large spawning ponds at the Aberdeen laboratory, may move 100 to 140 feet per minute, or considerably over a mile an hour.

Many of the fishes perform considerable migrations from and toward the areas where they are normally most abundant. Thus whitches and megrims appear to migrate southward and coastward to the shallower waters in winter, withdrawing again before the spawning season.

It is interesting to note that the turbot is one of the most prolific of sea fishes. The number of eggs in five specimens examined by Mr. Fulton varied from 5,612,000 to 10,115,000. The heaviest of the specimens weighed only 21 pounds.

THE SCOTCH FISH EXPERTS.

Prof. Prince, speaking of the arrival of J. J. Cowie, the Scottish expert, at Nanaimo, says that the results should be to greatly improve the curing of the Pacific coast fish. Mr. Cowie, he says, selected his very best assistants to accompany him, and in addition to these he has also brought a trained cooper.

The Scottish women who came out with Mr. Cowie are Misses Campbell, Wood and Gault.

Prof. Prince says that one of the greatest obstacles which has to be overcome in introducing the improved methods of curing is the antagonism of the curers now in the business to adopting new methods.

With an abundance of fish on the coast it is to be desired that the improved methods should be adopted with correspondingly increased prices for the product.

P. E. I. FISH HATCHERY.

Alex. Finlayson, Dominion Inspector of Fish Hatcheries, has been at Charlottetown, P.E.I., opening a fish hatchery at Southport, near Charlottetown, and has placed 800,000 salmon eggs therein. This is the first hatchery that has been operated on Prince Edward Island for years.

LAKE HURON FISHING CLOSED.

The fishing season on Lake Huron has closed and the lake shore fishermen report the result of the year's operations very disappointing, the average take being given as not more than one-third of that of an old time good season. In the spring the weather conditions were not good, there having been too much south wind.

The pickerel catch was small and very few sturgeon were taken.

The herring seem to have deserted the shore.

Trout and white fish have for a long time been an unknown quantity in the lower waters of the lake.

Just what is the reason for the scarcity of fish nobody seems to know, but all interested in the business are agreed that fishing is growing poorer season by season, until now there do not seem to be any fish in the lake.

Not until a hatchery is established at Point Edward, do fishermen look for much improvement in the conditions.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

UTILITY OF WRAPPERS.

CLEANLINESS and attractiveness is the order of the day, and it has had its influence on the confectionery trade also. It is as certain as daylight following night that the attractive manner with which a certain biscuit concern has wrapped up its goods, has been the main factor of its unparalleled success. This lesson has not been lost on the progressive confectioner, and now we find that a good many of the products of the confectioner are wrapped in attractive wrappers.

The general public certainly appreciates such care in the handling and selling of an important article of daily consumption, and no one who wraps up his confections has ever had any reason to complain of decreasing sales. Waxed or parchment paper is especially adapted for such a purpose.

MOULDY BREAD AND CAKES.

MUCH has, and much remains, to be written as to the source and cause of bread and cake mould, i.e., fungi. By chemists posted on bread and cake it is, we believe, generally conceded that it is caused by forms of organisms, parasites, etc., germinated by spors or sporules, which are proof against the heat of baking.

Some say they are in the flour (particularly in poor and improperly stored flour,) others in the yeast, others in milk, potatoes, and other ingredients used in bread and cake making.

Scientists say there are upward of 32,000 forms of fungi, those of bread and cake belonging to the bread family.

Bread made from good flour and properly made and baked dough does not mould readily, generally not at all, even after long keeping under favorable conditions.

We do not know that any specific cure for a preventative of mould in bread and cake has yet been discovered. The best aids in those directions are, good and properly stored flour, fresh, healthy yeast, well and properly made dough, as much salt as the dough will carry, absolute cleanliness, full but not over baking, baking in as hot a heat as possible, so it cooks without over-coloring; not packing and allowing the bread to steam in a mass, keeping it in a cool place, free from damp drafts.

CLEANLINESS.

IN days that are now but a memory—days when the farmer used to load up his wheat and go to the grist mill, as it was then called, to have his wheat ground into flour to supply his family, I once stood in the door of such a mill while the good old miller loaded into the wagon of one of his customers the flour he had ground for him.

After the farmer drove away the miller stood at the door, seemingly forgetting my presence and his duties. At last he said, in a sort of dreamy way: "I would like to board at that man's home."

The question raised in my mind was, "Why such a desire?" and, boy like, I did not hesitate to ask him. His reply was, "Did you notice the sacks in which his flour was put?"

I had not noticed them, and so told him. "Well, said the miller, he has been coming here to mill for nearly twenty years, and whenever he comes the sacks containing his wheat have always been clean, and he always brings clean sacks to put his flour in. He will allow me to put the bran and shorts into the sacks which contained the wheat, but always I have the clean, bright sacks, that he brings here empty, to put his flour into."

As I went away, and as I have in later years thought of the old miller's observation, I have had in my mind's eye the kitchen of that good housewife, whose attention to the "Details of Cleanliness" were so marked as to attract the attention of the old miller, and I confess I would desire to board at such a place, if my good wife were not almost the equal of this woman of my story. I would ask you at this point, "Are you not a trifle hungry yourself."

You and I, and everybody else, relish our food in proportion to the degree its preparation meets our ideals. Whether at home or abroad, if you feel that a due care to the question of cleanliness has not been observed in the preparation of the food offered, your appetite fails; and if you say nothing, what you desired to say would not be a quotation from the Holy Writ, and the publishers of Sunday school literature will not hunt you up and offer you a large or small sum for a resume of what passed through your mind.

INTERESTING BREAD NOTES.

A LOAF of bread at least four thousand years old, a portion of which was in such a state of preservation that it was possible to identify barley as the grain of which it was made, was lately found in Egypt. From records and monuments in that ancient land we learn that the grain for bread was broken by pounding, and that it was probably baked upon or between hot stones. The children of Israel ate leavened bread of Egypt, and it is known that the Chinese had used leavened bread long before the time of Moses and the exodus from Egypt. So far as we can learn, only unleavened cakes—no loaf bread—were made in Abraham's day.

The French are by most people conceded to be the premier bread bakers of the world. They have many varieties, and most of these, except the very fine fancy rolls, are leavened. The ovens are always of brick, and are usually heated with pine wood. These two facts have much to do with the fine flavor of the finished product. The French bread is almost invariably sold by weight, and has a much thicker crust than ours. It is said that the average Frenchman consumes 300 pounds of bread yearly, while his neighbor John Bull disposes of 450 pounds.

The great fault with the Canadian baker has been the national one of haste. Good bread, of whatever variety, requires time and care in its manipulation. There is no reason why we should not have as great variety as well as perfection as the German or the Frenchman. Indeed, in these days conditions are such as to permit of our reaching an even higher grade of excellence.

Some interesting experiments have been carried out on the moisture contained in bread by a French chemist named Lindett. He holds it is a well-established fact that the moisture travels from the interior of a loaf outwards to the crust, and on analyzing the crust and crumb of some quartern loaves, he finds that the moisture in the crust rose from 11 per cent. one hour after being taken from the oven, to about 20 per cent. after forty-eight hours. The water in the crumb sank in the same time from 46 per cent. to a little under 45 per cent. The amount of dextrin when calculated on the dry matter of the crust remained practically stationary at about 17 per cent. of the dry matter, but another surprising result was also found that the dextrin of the crumb sank from 11 per cent. to 2 per cent. Lindett therefore concludes that there appeared to be a retrogression towards starch, or a reversion from soluble dextrinous products (originally derived from starch) to insoluble substances resembling starch; and this change he ascribed to amylodextrin.

THE EGGS WE EAT.

The total export of eggs from Canada amounted to 11,363,914 dozen in 1901, to 11,639,755 dozen in 1902, and 7,415,148 dozen in 1903. But according to statements made by Canadian farmers to the Dominion Government census enumerators, their hens laid 84,132,802 dozen eggs in the year 1901. Thus the home market took more than seven times as many eggs as were exported. The egg production of the different Provinces in 1901 was as follows:

	Doz.
Ontario	49,779,845
Quebec	15,502,415
Manitoba	5,038,062
Nova Scotia	4,419,239
New Brunswick	3,120,012
Prince Edward Island	2,426,251
Northwest Territories	2,197,237
British Columbia	1,651,741
Total for Dominion	84,134,802

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS COCOA

THE BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

THE production of beet sugar, with a measure of success, dates back to about 1820 A.D. As far back as 1836-37, Germany, the leading beet sugar country, produced 1,500 tons of sugar from beets which yield 3½ per cent. only of raw sugar per ton of beets. To-day Germany has 400 beet sugar factories, France 333, and the whole continent of Europe not less than 1,400.

Up to 1880 A.D. the average percentage of raw sugar obtained from a ton of beets did not exceed 7 per cent. To-day the average ranges from 12 to 15 per cent., the increase being due to increased knowledge of the industry and improved machinery; hence the success of the industry is fully assured.

In 1840 A.D. 5 per cent. only of all the sugar used in the world was manufactured from the sugar beet; to-day over 70 per cent. of the world's sugar is beet sugar, and over 80 per cent. of all the sugar consumed in Canada is from the beet

The establishment of another great agricultural industry in Ontario is a matter of national import. Manitoba and the western plains seem destined to become the chief granary of the world, so the oldest Provinces must achieve success in other lines of farm produce, such as dairying, hog raising, and the production of the sugar beet.

Michigan is the centre of the beet sugar industry in the United States. Six years ago the first factory was constructed in Bay County. Its success was so marked that capital flowed into the new industry, and now Michigan has a total of twenty-one. The dividends paid yearly have averaged about 30 per cent.

Notwithstanding that the United States and Canada have built upwards of forty-nine sugar factories in a few years, the output of sugar therefrom has not kept pace with the increase in consumption. This would indicate that satisfactory dividends can be permanently relied upon.

Will Ontario farmers provide the beets? is a question frequently asked. According to a Government report on sugar beet industry in Ontario, one farmer in Waterloo County received for the beets of five acres no less a sum than $477.19, and that at $4 a ton only. His net profit was over $70 an acre. What other crop would yield half that profit? Carefully compiled data prove that $40 an acre is but an ordinary net profit. This in itself should be sufficient to induce the Canadian farmer to extensively cultivate the sugar beet.

Both the Dominion and Ontario Governments are wisely fostering the industry—the former by the surtax on German sugars and by the admission of machinery without charge of duty, and the latter by a bounty of $75,000 per annum for three years, and by tests in several localities and valuable information distributed.

Recent discoveries and inventions indicate that the by-products of beet sugar factories will soon be very valuable. The residue molasses can now be converted into alcohol for mechanical purposes, and vinegar, and are at present saleable at $4.50 or $5 a ton. The pulp, it is said, can also be converted into alcohol, a certain valuable acid, glue, and a grade of charcoal, and will sell for several dollars a ton. Certain it is that sugar beet pulp is most valuable for fattening cattle. The mineral deposits a German scientist declares to be a superior fertilizer and worth a good price.

Improvements in machinery and in necessary field implements have also of late been rapid.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

INJUSTICE TO CIGAR MANUFACTURERS.

THE Grocer recently had a very striking illustration brought to its notice of a flagrant injustice that is being done to cigar manufacturers by certain restaurant dealers in Montreal. While the case in question transpired in the city in question it is no doubt a fact that similar occurrences can be found in other cities and towns.

In company with the representative of the Geo. E. Tuckett Cigar Co., Mr. MacKenzie, lunch was partaken of in a leading restaurant. After the conclusion of the meal Marguerite cigars were ordered. The waiter was distinctly informed to bring Marguerites. When the cigars were brought The Grocer noticed that they were not Marguerites and called Mr. MacKenzie's attention to the matter, at the same time telling the waiter to go back and bring the brand ordered. The waiter insisted that they were Marguerites. Now, anyone who has ever smoked Marguerites will at once know the goods, their shape and peculiar point in itself being a well-known characteristic, to say nothing of the absence of the band, the cigars offered by the way not having any band whatever, and having a point like a needle and a highly polished cheap wrapper.

Talk about an angry cigar salesman! Mr. MacKenzie, who is proverbially dignified and calm, informed the waiter to go and get the proprietor, and at the same time his coat as his job was open for another man. The waiter apparently realized that the game wouldn't work in this case, and with an apology went and brought the genuine Marguerites.

The point in the foregoing is this: The manufacturers of the Marguerite were deliberately being defrauded; they are spending thousands upon thousands of dollars annually in advertising their particular brand of cigar, and take pride in the reputation the mark has secured among smokers. Supposing the case that the purchasers of the cigars had not been so familiar with the brand but had heard of it and desired to test them, now in trying the tendered cigars and finding them what they undoubtedly were, a very ordinary five cent line, strong and rank, they would have forever condemned the Marguerite. It is in this that not only a temporary loss was made by the manufacturers but a future heavier loss.

The foregoing case while applicable to the particular brand mentioned no doubt occurs with the special advertised lines of other cigar manufacturers, and it would seem that a penalty should be attached to such flagrant misrepresentations and frauds. That such actions on the part of the help are allowed to go on shows that proprietors are not watching the interests of their patrons closely enough. The regular cigar dealers would not stoop to any such deception, but that a restaurant of more than local fame should be the scene of such bare-faced deception will kill its good trade is only too probable. It certainly has lost the confidence of two patrons.

FINE CANADIAN LEAF.

THAT fine tobacco can be grown in certain parts of Canada has long been conceded, but it remained for British Columbia to win the laurels for the whole country as a tobacco garden and plantation of remarkable fertility. One of these valleys situated not far from the Kootenay district is now famous—so famous that the owners are hanging on to it with a strong grip and are nosing around to see if there are any more spots just like it. Why? Well, on this plot, only a few acres, 30,000 lbs. of leaf were grown and it was of such excellence that the purchasers, a big Montreal manufacturing house, took every pound and would give a good deal for a duplicate lot of the weed. It is, said a member of this firm, admirably adapted for cigars; no connoisseur could tell where it came from.

The leaves are small, black and of fine flavor. All the rubbish talked about it not being usable may be crossed off the map. It is the finest ever grown in Canada. Think, too, that it can be laid down in Montreal at 13 cents. With no duty, such tobacco will be considered a bargain at 25 cents a pound. Who, then, is prepared to stand before the Tariff Commission or any other commission and say that the Canadian product is not a most important factor in manufacturing?

Without taking any special sides in the matter of protection it is certainly gratifying to know that British Columbia has climatic soil and enterprise sufficient to make a hit in the market in the production of a high grade of tobacco.

These goods will be manufactured and sold right on the same market with the Cuban made Havana goods and the famous statement of Mr. Fortier that "it is a wise man who knows what he is smoking" will be brought home more forcibly every day.

CANADA'S TOBACCO FARMS.

The exports of Canadian tobacco leaf amounted to 39,352 pounds in 1901, but were only 6,985 pounds in 1902, and 37,509 pounds in 1903, while according to the Dominion census 11,266,732 pounds of tobacco leaf were produced on Canadian farms in 1901. The Province of Quebec alone produced 194 times as much tobacco leaf as was exported from the whole of Canada. The tobacco production of the different Provinces was as follows:

THE MANUFACTURE OF MUSTARD.

THE use of mustard as a condiment, and probably as a salad, too, was known to the ancient world, and it was a favorite spice at the dinner tables of the Middle Ages. By the fourteenth century it had become so important an article of manufacture in Burgundy that Phillip the Bold granted to the city of Dijon armoral bearings, in whose motto a punning reference to mustard may be traced. The Englishman of the Elizabethan age could no more eat his roast beef without mustard that the Englishman of to-day.

Thus it was that, in "The Taming of the Shrew," when Grumio asked the question: "What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?" the immortal wayward Katharina replied: "A dish that I do love to feed upon." In those days (says a writer in "Britain At Work"), it would seem, mustard was prepared by the simple process of crushing the seed, as peppercorns are still. But in 1720 a Mrs. Clements, of Durham, devised a method of pounding the seed and then separating the flour from the husk, and the result was so agreeable to the palate of George the First that the new condiment, promptly called the Royal Flower of Mustard Seed, was largely advertised in the newspapers of the day, and from that hour to this mustard has been one of the serious industries of Britain.

The mustrad plant is a member of the genus Brassica, to which we owe our cabbages and broccoli, our turnips and Brussels sprouts. Its two forms, black and white, grow best upon the rich loams of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, Cambridge and Essex; and, although it is also cultivated in Alsace, Holland, Italy, and other European lands, the British manufacturer does not find it necessary to supplement his own crops to any serious extent, so that mustard may be classed as a British product in a more complete sense than any other table condiment.

The seed is sown annually, the crop is harvested with a sickle, as if it were a vetch, and the tiny pods are threshed upon the farm with a flail. The seeds, of which fifty weigh a grain, are conveyed in sacks to the factory, where they are stored in readiness for the long process of manufacture.

How Great Business Men Keep Well.

(THE WORLD MAGAZINE.)

Amid the strenuous conditions which prevail to-day in the business world, the great captains of industry find their only safety in an increased leisure and the pursuit of healthful pastimes. The greater the business and the greater the wear and tear of the responsibility, the greater the need for an enforced leisure. That is why millionaire business men pay their thousands and thousands of dollars for outdoor recreation.

WHAT means do rich business men take to preserve their health? They have a system to which, almost without exception, they each and all conform. This system is founded on one remedy. One New York man pursues it at the cost of $500,000 a year; another, equally devoted to it, has it without cost. These two men are about equally rich and powerful.

It is enlightening to all the world to know this system, so costly and so cheap and so efficacious for these great men of affairs are healthy men. They are marvels of success in finance and in health.

To triumph in the strenuous life requires more than genius and wealth. It means endurance and force. Health is the great business man's greatest asset. A Rockefeller ailing in the height of his daring career would give a million dollars "for a new stomach." Schwab to recover from the impairment of his giant strength spends in two years a fortune that would buy the town in which he was born.

One millionaire in New York employs a physician at $10,000 a year to attend him—because he did not follow the system. Another, during a painful illness two years ago, contracted with a doctor to serve him exclusively for five years. Lately, conforming to the system by this same doctor's advice and the example of his associates, he paid the doctor a large lump sum to end the contract.

But the physicians testify that the millionaire men of affairs are poor customers of theirs. Their system of health-keeping is not medical.

Fresh air and a change of scene, developed to a science and a system, is the New York multi-millionaire's panacea for all his ills.

WINDOW AND INTERIOR DISPLAYS

THE SUCCESSFUL TEA STORE.

IN a grocer's window tea should always be given a prominent position, especially if neatly sealed up in handsome packages. Dummies may be conveniently used for the purpose with good effect, but they should be perfectly fresh and clean; in fact, every package exhibited should be carefully examined and made as inviting as possible.

Avoid Loose Tea Display.

It is not prudent, however, to make too copious a display of loose tea, as it collects dust and absorbs moisture in addition to the loss resulting from deterioration in strength and flavor; its appearance is offensive to the customers, who are apt to reflect that they must become the consumers of the article removed from the window.

Glass Covers or Bowls.

Again, nothing can look worse than a window in Summer sprinkled over with flies—dead or alive—or in Winter than a heap of damp and discolored teas, so that all loose teas should invariably be scrupulously covered over with well-polished glass shades or invitingly displayed in small sample bowls appropriately labeled.

The colors also should harmonize in order that the window will look well, attract customers' attention and gain favorable criticism. Care should also be taken that the teas be not kept too near the gas, heat or sun, or exposed to these influences, as they are often irretrievably ruined thereby.

Art in Window Dressing.

There is a great art in dressing a window well with teas; some dealers have a natural talent for it. The art, however, has a very important bearing in the sale of teas, and is certainly worth careful study on the part of the dealer, as a well.dressed arrangement of teas in a window is sure to attract attention and admiration from the passers-by, people turning again to look at and admire it. So that a tea window dresser should possess good natural taste as well as be a good designer and systematic arranger of the goods.

Attractive Show Cards.

All labels and show cards should always be neat, clean and bright, that is, removed often, and when prices are affixed they should be reasonable, neither too high nor too low, as the best customers like moderation, but teas that are exceptionally cheap and plentiful should always be marked in plain figures.

Cleanliness.

Cleanliness goes a long way in selling teas, as in all things people want to eat and drink, and a clean store is a customer's delight, so that dusting and sweeping are among the most important functions of a well-kept store. These duties should be performed every day, or oftener, and should be done under the best conditions possible, as all dust is destructive to tea. and all losses thus entailed must be kept down as far as possible.

Specialty in Window Display.

Do not attempt to place too many varieties or grades in the window at the same time, as such a display serves only to confuse the mind and weary the eyes of spectators; neither aim at quantity. A good plan for the dealer is first to consider what teas are most in demand or most likely to be in request in his neighborhood, and not simply what he has most of. Then, making out a list of what he decides to show, he should map out in his mind the best manner of arranging the same.

VALUE OF A STORE WINDOW.

EVERY American thinks he knows all about Sir Thomas Lipton. Most of them think he made his "pile" in the wholesale tea business. But they are very far out in their surmises.

Now, if you go to Glasgow, Scotland, where Sir Thomas made the fortune he has so deftly handled since, you will find the common people (the patrons whose hard-earned coin put him on the road to wealth) still know him as Tommy Lipton, the retail grocer.

All this great business in tea plantations and worldwide trading is a late growth of that masterly mercantile genius. In the early eighties Thomas Lipton was running a retail grocery store in Glasgow.

And Sir Thomas owes his immense success to his advanced methods of manipulating show window displays.

He showed himself great in making record-breaking window displays to attract patrons to his store. At Christmas time for several years he got the confectioners of Great Britain to compete in bidding on the largest cake ever made, and that cake went into the Lipton show window. Each year the cake got larger till the limit was reached.

Those gargantuan cakes brought Grocer Lipton much free advertising. The monster cake on exhibition gathered great crowds always for several weeks around the Lipton shop. But when the cutting up of the cake came off, what a patronage he drew! You see, he gave a slice to every customer, and there were some presents hidden away in that cake and every one hoped to become the lucky recipient of a piece of jewelry, a gold or silver thimble, or some one of the buried treasures.

But "Tommy" Lipton, as his Glasgow patrons called him familiarly, was not satisfied with a single great show window display each year. In the Fall he would have a record breaker cheese in his show-front. He contracted several years for the largest cheese English producers could furnish. Then he got bigger ones from America. At last an enterprising Yankee made Lipton a cheese so big he had to have his large show window reconstructed to make room for it.

"Tommy" Lipton, you may be sure, was the talk of Glasgow town in those days, and the people remembered how a few years before he was but a young shop-boy, sleeping under the counter o' nights!

Shrewd Master Tommy was not only building up a local but a world-wide reputation in those days. For stories of his monster exhibits were copied from one newspaper to the other till every country in Christendom had heard of the freak alimentary shows. And over and beyond the celebrity achieved the embryo knight made these costly show window displays repay him amply from attendant sales.

But with the accumulated wealth of the retail grocery business he went into the wholesale business, and later became his own importer. At the present day Sir Thomas Lipton's rolling stock in America alone amounts to a hundred or so of freight cars. His "canning" interests are enormous, his bacon and ham holdings in the United States are sometimes so large they command the market.

His gigantic tea business, supplying the world from his own plantations, is so well known to every reader as not to require extended mention here.

Question moral—What are YOU doing with your display window?

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

The Royal Baking Powder Company have recently completed agency arrangements in the Dominion, which will operate much to the advantage of retail merchants. Jobbers will hereafter charge for these popular sizes (and for other sizes in proportion) as follows, f.o.b.:

Regular size, 6 oz., per dozen $1.95
Regular size, 6 oz., 10 case lots.... 1.90
Regular size, 12 oz., per dozen..... 3.85
Regular size, 12 oz., 10 case lots.... 3.75

Consumers are glad to get these sizes at 20 cents and 40 cents, and at these prices a handsome profit is assured to the grocer, equaling $1 or more on one dozen tins. Probably no other powder on the market will put $1 in the bank on the sale of a dozen cans.

Royal Baking Powder is a pure cream of tartar powder, of highest strength and quality, and a favorite with all housekeepers. It is a credit to the shopkeeper to sell goods of this character; besides, he insures himself from complaints against flour, butter and eggs, which have to bear a part of the blame when the cake is spoiled from the use of an inferior baking powder.

The Only Spice of Life for Horses, Cattle and Poultry

IS Myers'

It is not a Stock Food, but a condiment to be used with food, and contains no corn, middlings, etc. Why pay ten cents per pound for what costs only one cent? If you desire bulk for your money take 100 pounds of middlings, or such like, and mix with 100 pounds Myers' Spice, you will then get a much superior article than most advertised Stock Foods, and it will cost you only $5.50 per 100 pounds. A saving of $4.50 on 100 pounds is an item not to be lost sight of. Is not this true economy?

The trade is respectfully invited to write the

and see just what "The Fairbank Plan" is. While we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year advertising the six great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

Criticism of T. A. Rowat & Co.'s Newspaper Advertising

Praiseworthy Advertisements.

R. J. DONAGHY, of T. A. Rowat & Co., London, Ont., forwards for review what is perhaps the finest series of retail adevrtisements it has been my privilege to pass judgment on.

Three Typical Ads.

There are nine specimens in all. The three reproduced are representative, but were chosen as much for the dissimilarity of subject as for their preponderance of typographical excellences and superior arrangement. Any of the other six were worthy of reproduction.

Thought, Study and Application.

What is to be especially commended about Rowat's Store News is the fact that it is distinctively Rowat's News. The advertisements are not mediocre, a tribute which unfortunately cannot be paid to a number of retail advertisements running in Canadian papers. Rowat's Store News is indicative of thought and study and application, and the result of a splendid conception of retail publicity.

Individuality.

Mr. Donaghy says that Rowat's advertisements appear in one paper on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and in another paper on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. He also says that he furnishes different details for each insertion, which undoubtedly accounts for the individuality and timeliness of the advertisements.

A Forceful Heading.

The columnar advertisement given on this page could properly be styled a tea and coffee triumph for the Rowat store. The reader is first attracted to the announcement by a forceful heading, the attention is held by a little "Reason Why," and then come the details in methodical order.

Suitable Sub-Heads.

The black-face type tells its own story in each case—not too much, not too little—and when the end is reached the reader knows at least the prices of tea and coffee—at one particular store.

Appeal Quickly.

"Don't spoil your pickles" appeals quickly to the eye, and the argument that follows, though necessarily brief, is pointed and convincing. The prices are given due prominence. Making mention of snow-white cauliflowers, etc., after the vinegar talk, is what might be called advertising diplomacy.

The Prune Ad.

Prunes are a class of goods rather difficult to advertise, but the advertisement here given is a very successful attempt. The points likely to influence sales are touched on and reasons are adduced why the sales should be made at Rowat's store, which, of course, is the purpose of the advertisement.

Phraseology.

The wording in this specimen is in the main creditable, but I don't care much for the partial expression, "being the most cleanly." I like "cleanly" as an adverb, not as an adjective, though usage sanctions the latter. "Cleanest" is more general and strikes me as being more euphonious.

In General.

Mr. Donaghy's work, in toto, is praiseworthy. He has ideas of his own, but he never allows them to lead him into generalities, nor to mar the main theme. He has certainly placed the advertising of T. A. Rowat & Co. on a systematic basis and pruned it of all that is commonplace. The blemishes of confused sentence-structure and detail-arrangement in one or two cases should be easily overcome in the future. And I might just note here that one newspaper is giving T. A. Rowat & Co. far better results in typography than the other.

Plans, Etc.

Mr. Donaghy might write and tell me just how he goes about his advertising—how he decides upon the goods to advertise, how and when he prepares his copy, and to what extent he is influenced by competitors. Such a letter ought to prove interesting reading to fellow-grocers. I should also like to know if Mr. Donaghy has prepared any booklets, etc., for his employer.

A DIFFERENCE

Some Grocers unthinkingly class Golden Russet Vinegar with "other vinegars." As most other vinegars contain noxious acids, comparison is out of the question.

GOLDEN RUSSET BRAND

is in a class by itself.

The Wilson Process is the pioneer of new methods. It is an absolute secret. There are lots of imitations, but only one Golden Russet Vinegar—the one made by Wilson, the one you should order.

Quaker Canned Goods

We have finished packing Corn and Tomatoes for this year. Taking the season altogether it has been the most favorable for quality we have ever experienced, the weather being about perfect all through the season for maturing vegetables in splendid condition. This applies to all lines, commencing with Peas and running right along into Beans, Corn and Tomatoes. With the fine quality of canned goods this season and the moderate prices there should be an enormous increase in the sales over previous years. While the pack has been large it does not exceed in our estimation the pack of two years ago in any line. Of course, we cannot speak for the whole country, but we know this applies to our pack. Judging from this we believe every case of Corn, Tomatoes, Peas and Beans packed will go into consumption before new goods come on the market next year. The fine quality of the goods alone this year over previous years should make an enormous increase in consumption, to say nothing of the much lower price the consumer can buy goods compared to the last two years. We packed thirteen thousand cases of Sugar and Cream Corn. This is a new line for us and is as fine in quality as the name denotes. We expect with this 13,000 cases sprinkled between the two oceans to lay the foundation for a trade in this line that will take the entire capacity of one of our factories next year to cater to.

THE PACKERS OF QUAKER CANNED GOODS

For Absolute Purity

You can bank on our spices. There is nothing surer, because we grind them at our own mill, and that's what puts us in a position to back up what we're telling you. The government inspectors are watching you closely, so you can't afford to take any chances. Don't be always looking for bargains in spices, but buy something good.

JOHN SLOAN & CO. - TORONTO and BELLEVILLE

The bumper crops in the West, together with the immense railway and other building operations, mean prosperity.

CEYLON Tea Talks

No. 1

Are you alive to your responsibilities

Your whole success depends upon your being awake.

Your customers look to you for advice.

They have really very little knowledge of the many things they purchase.

Greater need therefore for you to be fully awake and instructed.

You are the local authority.

Tea is the Grocer's great staple.

TEA is the all important item on your list. What do you know about it?

Many dealers buy hurriedly and do not give to TEA the discrimination it should have.

If your customer asked for information—a little beyond the ordinary—could YOU give it?

We will give you a few pointers:

First and Foremost stands the fact that,

Ceylon Tea—(Green and Black) is the Tea—the only Tea—upon which you should rely for reputation.

It gives uniform results, and is a perfect "self tea" requiring no blending with other growths to complete its virtue.

PURE FOOD SHOW AT MONTREAL

THE inaugural opening of W. H. Scroggie Co., Limited, Montreal, was more than merely an event in the history of one of Canada's leading departmental stores. Aside from the fact that the 22nd and 23rd November are red-letter days in the history of this enterprising Montreal firm, in that it marked the completion of the enlarged premises and another step forward in the direction of public confidence in the company as up-to-date purveyors, the occasion was one that did much to introduce the consuming public to one of the best conducted and managed "Pure Food Exhibitions" held in Canada. It is with this feature of the inaugural that The Grocer purposes briefly to deal, feeling that the interests of dealers in pure foods and grocery products will be conserved.

Before referring to the various exhibits mention may be made of the general scheme of decoration and arrangement of the building, store and flats. The exterior of the great building, which covers the block on St. Catherine street, between University and Victoria avenues, was covered with a net work of electrical illuminations in various colored lights, the dome in the centre bearing the store's motto, "The Store of Satisfaction," in a large framework of electric lights, and the thousands of lights made a brilliant display and advertisement during the evening hours.

The interior of the store was decorated with flags and variegated bunting, while the aisles on every floor were bordered with graceful palms and flowers. Two orchestras of eight pieces each discoursed music during the hours of business, which had for the occasion been extended to 10 o'clock in the evening.

Tobler's Chocolate.

On the main floor, in the centre, the Tobler's chocolate booth was the first attractive display of interest to grocers and confectioners. This booth was tastefully arranged, and the salesladies were kept busy declaiming on the merits of these Swiss confections and attending to sales.

At the western entrance Chase & Sanborn's Seal brand coffees were served to visitors, and the crowds were always large around the tastefully arranged booth, the association of the firm's name with coffee guaranteeing satisfaction to visitors.

John Taylor & Co., Limited.

At the eastern entrance, opposite the elevator, was what The Grocer judged one of the finest and best arranged booths in the building. This was the display of John Taylor & Co., Toronto, of Violet Toilet Water and Infants' Delight Soap and Perfumes, special prominence being given to the Infants' Delight Soap. The booth was draped in violet and white, bordered with bunches of violets, and the effect was strikingly beautiful and in thorough keeping with the lines shown. This booth was designed, arranged and under the supervision of Mr. McL. Brophy, Montreal and Quebec representative, and who, as a soap salesman, has more than a local reputation.

Lever Bros., Limited.

On the second floor the display of Lever Bros., Limited, Sunlight, Lifebuoy, and other specialties in the toilet and laundry soap line, occupied the largest booth, and a staff of salesmen and ladies were busy catering to the visitors and distributing pamphlets and samples to patrons.

Sovereign Mfg. Co., Limited.

The display of the Sovereign Mfg. Co. of perfumes and toilet soaps on the ground floor, though not as large as some of the others, was attractive and interesting, and the company's lines tastefully displayed.

The Cowan Co., Limited.

On the third floor the Cowan Co., Limited, booth was the centre of much attraction and custom, and Mr. Ed. Cowan, the eastern representative, personally saw to the effective work of his assistants, and as the display was next to the lunch room, was situated most advantageously from an advertising point of view. Cowan's Cocoa was served to the guests at the restaurant.

Shredded Wheat.

A feature of the restaurant, other than the tastefully arranged tables, palms and flowers, and the excellent menu served luncheon, was the souvenir menu card provided by the Natural Pure Food Co., Niagara Falls, N.Y. This card was a most artistic and handsome card in lithographed colors, and embossed, showing on its front cover the well-known Shredded Wheat and Triscuit preparations, and a view of the immense factory on the back cover. The menu itself was a dainty one, consisting of :

Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit with Cream
Creamed Smoked Beef on S.W. Toast Olives Pickles
MacLaren's Cheese
Buttered Toasted Triscuit
S.W. Sliced Peaches and Cream
Strathcona Coffee served with Jersey Cream
Strathcona 5 O'clock Tea.
Served with Jersey Cream
Cowan's Cocoa, served with Jersey Cream

As an advertisement this menu was in keeping with this company's up-to-date ideas. Besides the attention paid to guests of the restaurant the Shredded Wheat was also in evidence at a stand by the main stairway, where numerous orders were left by visitors, as was shown The Grocer representative.

The basement, however, was the Mecca of the public. Here, where the grocery department is located, a veritable "Kirmess" was in progress, a "Kirmess," however, only of food products. The grocery department of W. H. Scroggie Co., Limited, is one of the features of the great establishment, taking up as it does the greater portion of the west and south ends of the basement. Under the general supervision of Mr. Geo. Lloyd, manager of the department, two aisles were arranged in the form of an L, and here the exhibitors' booths were placed.

Frontenac Cereal Co.

The first booth was occupied by the Frontenac Cereal Co., Limited, Kingston, Ont., where Orange Meat, that well-known breakfast food, was served. The display was a most creditable one, and was in charge of Mr. Lyndon and a staff of assistants, who were kept more than busy in catering.

Truro Condensed Milk.

The second booth was devoted to the Truro Condensed Milk & Canning Co.'s, Limited, Truro, N.S., Jersey Cream and Condensed Milk, and under the charge of Mr. H. Woodley an active educational campaign, tending to the use of sterilized milk products, was conducted. Reindeer Condensed Coffee and Cocoa were also demonstrated.

Canada Flakes.

The Peterborough Cereal Co.'s, Peterborough, Ont., Canada Flakes, a breakfast food known to all grocers, was in charge of their local agent, Mr. W. S. Silcocks, and a good patronage was accorded this line. The booth was well arranged, and banked by hundreds of packages of Canada Flakes.

Beta Pie Filler.

The next exhibit in line was that of the Beta Pie Filler, of the Neilson-Robinson Chemical Co., Limited, Peterborough, Ont. This company occupied two very strikingly designed and well-decorated booths, in one of which samples of their Beta Pie Filling were distributed to visitors. In the other pieces of pie prepared with the filling were served out. This Beta Pie Filling, as explained by Mr. J. S. Hulett, of the company, who was present in person, and the young lady assistants, is made entirely of true fruit and vegetable products, and it put up in such convenient form that piles of the different flavors—lemon, chocolate, cherry and maple cream—can be prepared by any housewife in three minutes. As explained by Mr. Hulett to The Grocer representative, there are no chemicals used in the preparation of the Beta Pie Filling, and it is an article that will commend itself to every housewife. Since its introduction on the market it has met with the greatest success. Mr. Hulett's success in demonstrating the qualities of the article at the Toronto Exhibition has spread the fame of the Beta Pie Filler abroad, and the W. H. Scroggie Co.'s exhibition will undoubtedly secure an increased demand in this city and district.

Kkovah Specialties.

Next in order was Sutcliffe & Bingham, Limited, Manchester, Eng., who, in a purple and white booth, demonstrated the qualities of Kkovah table jellies, blanc mange, powders, and plum puddings. Mr. Bradwell, of the Montreal agency, was assiduous in his attentions and demonstrations, assisted by a competent staff of demonstrators. This booth was one of the most popular in the exhibit, and to The Grocer Mr. Bradwell stated that over 6,000 servings had been made on the first day, and many orders taken.

Bovril.

The exhibit of Bovril, Limited, under the supervision of Mr. D. F. Henderson, was located in a position on the corner of the L, and from an advertising point of view most aptly located. The demonstrations of Bovril in its various forms were an object lesson to many a housewife, and no doubt good ideas were carried away. Pamphlets and recipes of value were distributed judiciously.

St. Charles Condensed Milk.

The end exhibit, and in a measure one of the most effective, was that of the St. Charles Condensing Co., Limited, Ingersoll, Ont. In this booth, arranged by Mr. W. H. Halford, of S. H. Ewing & Sons, the Montreal agents, the St. Charles Evaporated Cream was served, and the young ladies in charge were more than busy in actively demonstrating the qualities of the goods. As enthusiastic and hard working demonstrators, this booth's attendants were hard to excel, and the numerous sales effected showed the appreciation of the visitors to the booth.

Taking the entire Pure Food Fair as an advertising medium, the results must be beneficial for not only the W. H. Scroggie Co., Limited, but every exhibitor and participant. It would be uncomplimentary to close the report of the Fair without according due praise to the heads of the firm, but in the grocery line, a field of direct interest to our readers, a special need of praise must be accorded Mr. Geo. Lloyd, than whom no better posted, energetic and experienced grocer ever donned an apron or managed a department—and his whole energies were thrown into making this Pure Food Show the success it undoubtedly was.

In the opinion of The Grocer such exhibits as the above should be encouraged, and if properly conducted will be of undoubted value to manufacturers, jobbers, and retail grocers alike.

True Value of Cheese Cure

It Dissipates Hunger, but not Disease.

"I have had much experience in curing cheese, but none of the value of cheese for curing anything else but hunger. For this, however, it is a very efficient remedy."

In these words, Dr. Francis Bond, M.D., medical officer of health for the Gloucester district, summed up his opinion to a London Express representative on the much discussed question of cheese being a cure for disease.

Dr. Bond is probably one of the greatest authorities in England on this subject, as he was the founder, and for some years honorary director, under the county council, of the Gloucester Dairy School, the first school in the country in which cheesemaking was scientifically taught.

"Tho cheese is no use, so far as my experience goes," continued Dr Bond, "to cure disease, as an article of diet there is no other food which contains so much nutriment. Meat—even the best sirloin or rump steak—cannot compare in nutritive qualities with an equal weight of well-made, whole-milk cheese.

"If practising doctors would only give their patients who need abundant nutrition cheese instead of delusive patent foods, they would find that they would put on flesh in half the time. The fact is that cheese is such a concentrated nutriment that, in eating it, there is great danger lest one should eat too much.

"The remedy for this evil is to 'dilute' a small quantity of cheese with a large quantity of some farinaceous foodstuff, such as bread, or, better still, biscuits or toast, which by stimulating the flow of saliva, facilitates mastication and promotes digestion.

"All pressed cheeses, such as the ordinary American, Cheddar, Dutch, Gruyere, and others of the same type, are indigestible, tho very satisfying to a robust stomach.

"All moulded cheeses, such as Stilton, Roquefort and Gorgonzola, are very indigestible in their ripe stage. The green moulds which characterize them effect changes in the constituente of the cheese, especially in the fatty matter, which create products of a highly sapid nature, and act very prejudicially on digestion.

"But, if cheese of this type can be obtained in its half-ripened condition, when the curd has been thoroly peptonized by the curing process, it is not only one of the most nutritious, but also one of the most digestible of foods."

The food value of cheese is also summed up in the following statement by Otto Hehner, the famous analytical chemist and food expert - "A proper mixture of SOFT RIPE CHEESE and bread and water contain everything which a human being requires in the way of food. Weight for weight, it is at least twice as nourishing as good meat, while it is far easier to eat too much meat than too much cheese."

In view of the character and quality of our product, Prof. Hehner's remarks simply mean that MacLaren's Imperial Cheese and bread and water, contain everything which a human being requires in the way of food.

MR. J. J. SHALLCROSS AND B. C. TRADE PROSPECTS.

MR. J. J. SHALLCROSS, of Shallcross, Macaulay & Co., Victoria and Vancouver, B.C., was a caller at the Montreal offices of The Canadian Grocer this week. Mr. Shallcross, in an interview with the representative of The Grocer, reports the conditions of trade in B. C. as most satisfactory. One of the features touched upon in the interview was the cultivation of hops. In the opinion of Mr. Shallcross, and other competent judges, these B. C. hops have proved themselves to be of the very highest quality, and, if properly cultivated and the industry expanded, will prove a strong competitor to even the very finest Golden Kent hops. A sample shipment made to a prominent British brewer elicited the remark that they were, in his opinion, equal to the finest Kentish hops. The fishing industry of B. C., as reported by Mr. Shallcross, was also most satisfactory, and no doubt with proper exploitation the B. C. herring fisheries will prove a big factor in Canadian trade. Mr. Shallcross reported that there was a splendid opening in the west for all goods of high character and quality, and it was not so much a question of price as of satisfactory goods that would leave a good market for all eastern business. Mr. Shallcross returned west last Monday.

A NEW BAKING POWDER.

The American Pure Food Co., Montreal, have placed upon the market an "Anti-Dyspeptic" baking powder, which, according to all reports, is meeting with most satisfactory success in the trade. The manufacturers, since placing it upon the market, report that the new feature embodied in this baking powder is meeting with good acceptation by dealers and consumers. They will be pleased to mail samples on application. This product, which is put up in 3 oz., quarter pound, half pound and one pound tins, should prove a good seller with all the grocery trade.

THE PROPAGATION OF SALMON

SEIZING the fish by the tail he places her head under his left arm and expresses the eggs by a firm pressure of his hand down the abdomen. The eggs go out into the pan much as shot into a bucket, all being free. After the eggs of two or three females are expressed the pan is taken by a second man who carries it to the workman who is handling the males.

After the milt of the male has been deposited in the same pan, water is added and the eggs are moved gently by hand or by a feather, after which the surplus milt is washed off and the eggs placed in a large pail, in which they are removed to the hatchery.

After taking the eggs from the female she is thrown into a pen where she dies. The male is thrown into the pool and used over again when necessary. If the female is ripe all her eggs are taken at a single operation.

The Indian women living near the hatchery secure the used fish for curing, but this year operations were carried on on such an extensive scale that only a small portion could be used. The balance were then taken in wagons some miles to the lower end of Cayuse Creek, where they were dumped in and carried down the Fraser.

Doing Nature's Work.

After reaching the building the spawn is taken out of the buckets by means of a large dipper. Here care must be exercised, not so much in the matter of avoiding injuring the eggs, as in making a proper record of the number taken. This is done in the following manner: A record is kept of the number of dippers, and all in excess of even dippers full are measured in liquid ounces. In every liquid ounce there are one hundred and ninety sockeye eggs. Consequently when it is known that a dipper holds, say, ten ounces, it is not a difficult task to arrive at the number of eggs it contains. Care, however, is taken to count continuously a four ounce liquid measure full of eggs, for the number to the ounce varies slightly, and an accurate tally is wanted. Unless a close watch is kept the deductions made, and extending over perhaps two months, might be very misleading. For instance at Baker Lake at the head of Skagit River in Washington there have been seasons where there was only 172 or 176 sockeye eggs to the liquid ounce, while at Seton Lake in 1903 and in 1904 212 to the ounce was repeatedly counted.

A curious and unexplained fact in connection with these eggs is their variable size. The same female will deliver eggs of the normal proportions and at the same time furnish eggs little more than half the size of the regular egg.

These prove, however, to be as virile as the larger ones, and once hatched they rapidly overhaul their bigger brothers and sisters and by the time they are ready to go down to the sea there is no appreciable difference in their proportions.

Now comes the fascinating stage in the inhustry, for from the time the eggs are deposited in the hatching pans till they reach the free swimming stage they are under constant supervision. Daily the attendants make their rounds watching that the flow of water is correct, and that the temperature and other conditions are favorable. Here and there an egg will be seen to be turning white. This means that it is dead and it has to be removed. There is also the empty egg which gives no such indication of its uselessness and which may be in the pans for a month before its presence is detected.

For seven or eight hours no trace of development in the egg is noticeable. By that time a cell has formed and these again subdivide, so that in fifteen hours sixteen of these cells have developed and in a day a spherical mass like a berry has resulted. In less than a week the cells begin spreading over the yolk and soon the embryo forms a disc an eighth of an inch across. A minute rounded lump, the beginning of the future fish's body, extends across the middle of the disc like a ridge. This ridge evolves into a spinal cord and at one end a hollow forms to accommodate the wonderful brain of the sockeye. The eyes follow, and later gills, mouth, and stomach. In twenty days all the organs are in place and from that time till the fifteenth day they develop and expand.

After the egg hatches out it is termed an alevin. It is the almost transparent body of a fish attached to the yoke of an egg. The salmon egg, like the hen's egg, may be said to have two shells—an outer and an inner. The little salmon, like the little chicken, develops in the white of the egg, but unlike the little chicken, the salmon breaks the outer shell as soon as the body is formed between the outer and inner shell, and he issues from the egg attached to the yoke. As the little fish grows he gradually absorbs the yoke, the food sac. As he absorbs this he issues from his prison, and becomes a free swimming fish, known as fry. He is then for the first time master of his own movements.

A Piscatorial Nursery.

Our salmon is now ready for the kindergarten, and Commissioner Babcock thinks that at Seton Lake he has the finest system of nursery pools to be found in connection with any hatchery in the world. For this purpose he employed means which nature had placed at his hand, using the bed of Lake Creek, a fine stream of water, for that purpose. He selected a stretch of the stream about 1,500 feet long, and damming the upper end allowed the branch to exhaust itself. He then went carefully over the creek bed to make sure that in the little pools were no predacious fish. Sculpins, charr and burbot are the enemies of the infant salmon, and good care was taken that none of these remained. Having freed the ground of these enemies the commissioner went over the bed cross ribbing it with rocks to equalize the current, give necessary depth and furnish division walls so that the fry would not crowd together in the quieter pools and possibly smother one another. This done a dam was built at the lower end of the basin, then the full head of water was turned on through a fine screen so that water and water only was permitted to pass through.

Into this delightful preserve, absolutely relieved of all his aquatis foes, the budding sockeye is turned. Not only is he relieved from anxiety so far as his water foes are concerned, but a man patrols the bank to keep away the loons, ospreys and numerous water fowl who dearly love a feast of the tender and succulent fry. After he has learned to swim, to seek nourishment, and otherwise learned the rules of the road from the salmon standpoint, the fry is turned out into his natural element, thenceforward to take his chances from sheldrake. Dolly Varden, or vulgar net, and ultimately to render return for all this care by being encased in a small can with a brilliant label upon it bearing the words "Fraser River Salmon."

Results of the Season.

Such was the character of the work done this Summer at Seton Lake. The resufts of it can be briefly summed up. Where last year not more than five million eggs were taken there were obtained this year no less than 45,000,000. This was on the 18th of October, and they have been fishing every alternate forenoon there since, largely for the purpose of getting Spring salmon.

Of the number mentioned 44,000,000 were sockeye and 640,000 Spring salmon. This number was taken at the Seton Lake hatchery, but the figures do not include those taken at the Dominion Government station, which up to the same date were as follows: Borkenhead, 24,500,000 sockeye; Shuswap, 11,500,000 sockeye; Morris Creek, 6,000,000, and still fishing.

What proportion of these eggs live? The commissioner estimates that at least ninety per cent. will mature, which means that if fishing had terminated on the 18th of October there would have been insured for the run of 1909 from artificial means of propagation alone nearly eighty million salmon.

The above figures take no account of the millions which will spawn in the natural way, and while it is remembered that at Seton Lake the workmen treated about 18,000 females and 36,000 males, they estimate that at least a quarter of a million fish passed on to their own spawning grounds above. It is calculated that ten per cent. of the spawn deposited on the seeding grounds will mature, so that allowing that half of the fish that passed up were females and that each deposited three thousand eggs there should be a return from that source alone of 37,500,000.

Experience has shown how wasteful the natural methods are, just as the natural methods of reproducing cereal crops are extravagant and disappointing. Where a return of ninety per cent. can be depended upon from the hatchery only ten per cent. is the rule from natural methods. In clearing the branch of Lake Creek the workmen found on the rocks and in other places the spawn of the humpback salmon in liberal quantities. Not five per cent. of it, however, was fertilized. Then the predatory fishes which follow the salmon devour the eggs, the alevin and the fry with equal avidity. The result is a wastefulness which will have to be overcome if salmon fishing is to remain a commercial proposition.

Habits of the Young Salmon.

Observation by the officers of the department seem to indicate that the majority of the fry remain in the waters contiguous to the breeding grounds until they are a year old. Their movements seaward began in April and continued throughout May. They traveled in compact schools, preferring to navigate at night and in murky waters, as these probably gave them more immunity from the enemies mentioned in a preceding paragraph. On the riffles, and in swift water they head up stream and allow themselves to be drawn downward in this manner. They probably traveled at the rate of ten or fifteen miles a day. Thus they find their way to the sea. What their movements are thenceforward until four years later they instinctively struggle back to the spawning grounds, has never yet been explained.

PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

THE cheese season is now nearly closed. There is only one more ocean steamer in port, sailing this week, and all the country boards have adjourned until next season. The all-interesting subject for the members of the cheese and butter trade on both sides of the Atlantic now is, what are the stocks and what is the probable future regarding prices?

The shipments of cheese since May 1 to date, not including the last outgoing steamer, are 2,119,920 boxes, against 2,112,398 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Shipments have therefore been slightly in excess of those of a year ago, while the receipts this year have been slightly lower than last year. Taking it this way, it would not appear that there could be a great difference in stocks as compared with this date a year ago.

But it is an undisputed fact that the make of cheese this year has not been as large as last year and the above mentioned figures are not conclusive in arriving at the actual stocks in Canada. We must consider that on account of the very remunerative prices ruling this season the factories have sold their products much closer than usual and stocks back at country points are decidedly less than a year ago, and as last year's supplies were insufficient for the Winter's trade it might be fair to say that we may run short for the demand during the coming Winter months.

Against this we hear some expressions of nervousness on account of present high prices. Conservative merchants fear a considerable falling off in the consumption on this account, but the retailer in Great Britain is actually getting a better profit on cheese this year, as he is now getting 7½ to 8 pence per pound, while last year owing to the large shopkeepers selling their cheese at 5 to 6 pence per pound the ordinary retailer had to keep his price down to 6 to 7 pence.

The consumer may do a little private grumbling at having to pay a penny more for his cheese, but as long as it pays the retailer the consumption is not falling off very materially. This occurs only when the retailer recommends other articles of food which seem cheaper or of better value. If cheese should get too high here the British retailers might not be able to raise their price correspondingly and then there would be danger of a marked decrease in the consumption.

Prices are high and cheese has not reached a low level at any time this season, but we have many times seen prices considerably higher, and judging from present outlook it is quite probable that we will see higher prices before the commencement of the new season next year. At any rate there is no danger signal ahead of declining prices.

In the Spring of 1904 the United States shipped a lot of odds and ends of cheese to the United Kingdom, as they had no home outlet for these goods. This broke the markets in Great Britain and holders of finest goods lost a great deal of money. This is not likely to occur during the next Spring, as the United States are actually short of supplies to fill their own home orders and shipments from there to the United Kingdom will be next to nothing.

The situation on butter shows very little change. Stocks here are light, in fact we have none to spare for export. At the moment we are getting butter of indifferent quality. November make, which seems a shade lower in price, but it is not good enough to suit the best trade and it must be sold promptly, as it would not do to keep it for any length of time. As long as such Winter made goods are received here in fair quantities prices will probably remain without much change, but really choice quality will be held until there is more demand for it, and then prices will undoubtedly be advanced considerably.

It is almost useless to mention the article of dairy butter; there is hardly any of it in the country, and what few packages there are bring extremely high prices.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By Our London, Eng., Correspondent.

November 18, 1905.

ACCORDING to to-day's (November 18) advices the demand for Canadian butter, both of the saltless and salted variety, continues good. Receipts during the past week, however, have been on a small scale, and stocks are consequently gradually becoming lighter. There has been a rise of one shilling in price, and quotations are now 100 to 104 shillings for finest parcels and 106 to 110 shillings for choicest.

The season for Canadian butter is now, as far as this market is concerned, practically at an end. From now onward receipts will become gradually smaller.

When one glances back over the past few months and reviews the volume of business transacted, one is forcibly struck by the great success that Canadian butter has met on this market. The general quality has been so much superior to that of previous seasons and there has been so much more uniformity, that it has established a firmer footing here than ever before.

It must be remembered, however, that, as pointed out in previous correspondence, London is not the chief centre for Canadian butter, for the Dominion produce is somewhat too pale to meet with the approval of all classes. Here butter of a primrose hue is preferred, the paler stuff going chiefly to Liverpool and Manchester.

If during the next few months Canadians, when preparing for the next season, bear in mind the requirements of this market and endeavor to remedy such faults as have from time to time been found with their butter, there can be no doubt that increased business will result.

There is still room for improvement. Of that there can be no doubt. In the early part of the season now about to close there were complaints about mouldy parcels and bad packages, and while it is freely admitted that such complaints were not general, it must be remembered that these unsatisfactory packages, being exposed to the examination of many prospective purchasers, both wholesale and retail, are liable to give the whole of the country's product a bad reputation. There have been suggestions which, if true, are serious causes for complaint, that some Canadian creameries are not kept sufficiently clean; that small splinters of wood find their way into the butter; that the boxes are sometimes of irregular size either below or above the 56-pound standard; that the boxes are liable to fall to pieces, and similar little failures. Apart from the matter of uniformity of quality, these details should receive the most careful attention, for they mean much to importers on this side.

Some Canadian shippers, however, all through the season have been sending across butter of the very finest quality, and only four or five days ago there came before the notice of the trade some saltless Canadian equal to any saltless that has ever been seen heretofore — about perfection. This is saying a good deal, considering the distance it has to come. "Taking the season as a whole," one man commented, "the most noticeable point is the general improvement of quality. There has not been much money for us importers in Canadian butter, it is true, but the volume of business done has been very large."

Canadian creamery butters have quite overshadowed the Irish product and have stood forward to receive the trade which their good quality merits. Siberian butter has in like manner been hitting the Irish factory-made butter very hard.

Denmark has not been able to give fullest attention to the demands of this market, owing to the fact that she has been busy catering to the German market. Many are of opinion that this will continue to be the state of affairs, and it will thus afford greater opportunities for Canadian butters to fill the gap. There has been plenty of money in the handling of French butter.

To revert to present position of the market, Australian butters are going into consumption immediately upon arrival, and business is generally reported brisk. There is no accumulation of stocks.

There has been a good demand all through the week for Canadian cheese, and prices have advanced on the spot one shilling, being now 57 to 58 shillings for finest and 59 to 60 shillings for choicest. From 9th to 15th November 30,510 boxes of Canadian cheese were received and at time of writing there are in warehouse 171,075 boxes.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Provisions—Local trade continues fairly active. Buyers are in evidence, but not for large bulk orders. Arrivals come to hand pretty freely, but quality is not over good. There has also been a little easing of prices, long clear bacon being now quoted at 10 1-2c., whilst smoked bacon has dropped to 14c. and short cut has fallen $1.00 per barrel. Dressed hogs are commanding a high range of prices. We quote:

Butter—Trade has been slow during week under review. The closing of cheese making has not yet shown any improvement in the butter market. It is expected, however, that the coming of creamery made butters will give a better tone to the market. Dairy rolls are showing inclination to strengthen.

Eggs—There have been practically no arrivals of new laid eggs, since our last issue, prices, therefore, for these are only nominal. We quote:

New laid eggs, per doz		0 25
Fresh " "		0 23
Pickled " "		0 21

Cheese—The market shows a slight tendency to easiness, but no quotable change on previous prices. Sales have been fairly active, but there is little disposition on the part of buyers to move on present high prices. Export trade has been very slow, and at slightly lower prices.

MONTREAL.

Provisions— The provision market shows little change. Country dressed hogs are coming in more freely, but not until the weather hardens permanently will supplies be plentiful. Prices country dressed, $7.50 to $7.75; fresh killed abattoir stock is worth $8.25 to $8.50. Hams and bacon are in fair demand. Lard steady. We quote:

Cheese—The cheese market is dull. Exporting has ceased with the last boat leaving on the 30th ult. Quotations locally are high. Quebecs, fancy, 12c. to 12 1-4c.; Townships, 12 1-8c. to 12 1-4c.; Ontarios, 12 1-4c. to 12 3-8c. November make 1-4c. less. Holders are firm despite the close of export trade. We quote:

Finest Quebecs	0 12	0 12½
Townships	0 12½	0 12½
Ontarios	0 12½	0 12½

Butter—The market shows no change. Prices are firm. Export demand has ceased, while local business is good. Fine creamery, 23 1-4c.; choice, 23 1-2c., and fancy, 23 3-4c. to 24c. Western dairy steady at 20c. to 21c., and rolls 21 1-2c. The total shipments for the season reached 554,041 packages, or 68,533 more than last year. We quote:

Fancy Townships	0 22½	0 22½
Finest creamery	0 22½	0 22½
Fine	0 21	0 21½
Medium	0 20	0 21½
Fresh dairy tubs	0 18½	0 19

Poultry—The market is firmer and the cold weather which set in at the beginning of the week has had a strengthening effect on prices. Supplies are not heavy yet. Turkeys generally 14c., though for fancy stock 15c. to 16c. has been paid. Ducks are firmer, also quoted at 13c. to 14c.; chickens, 10c. to 11c. and choice 12c.; geese, 10 to 11c. and fowl 8c. to 9c.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Provisions—In pork there has been a very fair business this Fall. Prices are held firm at full figures, particularly for mess pork.

Barrel beef, while quite firm, has but a fair sale.

Smoked meats are high.

American pure lard is still a large factor in the market. Prices are high. Refined lard sells freely and is still low.

In fresh meats this has been a dull Fall. Beef is still very low.

Lamb, which has held at quite full figures, is rather easier.

Mutton very low.

Veal little seen.

Pork is the one firm line holding at full figures. We quote:

Mess pork, per bbl	$19 00	$21 00
Clear pork, "	18 00	21 00
Plate beef, "	13 00	15 00

" " pails, "	0 11½	0 12
Refined lard, tubs	0 08	0 08½

Butter—Stocks are small. There is even little poor butter, which is usually much in evidence. Full prices rule. We quote:

Creamery butter	0 25	0 26
Best dairy butter	0 20	0 23
Good dairy tubs	0 18	0 20
Fair "	0 16	0 18

Eggs—Prices are firmly held. Stocks light. For what are called hennery eggs, fancy prices are asked. Often it is only a matter of name. We quote:

Eggs, hennery	0 24	0 26
" case stock	0 20	0 21

Cheese—Market seems firmer, though price is unchanged. Twins are demanded here.

Social Dollar Tea

Are you selling it?

Social 40c., 50c., 60c., $1.00 Teas are the best values in Packet Teas in Canada.

When ordering goods from our salesmen order a 10-lb. lot of Social Dollar Tea. It is the most wholesome Tea in the world, full, rich, thick and creamy. There is nothing too good for you. Use it in your own home.

SOCIAL TEA CO.

Lumsden Bros., Proprietors. Hamilton, Ont.

IS YOUR TEA TRADE GROWING?

I venture to say it is, if you are selling Red Rose Tea. My sales books show that a very large proportion of the merchants who sell Red Rose Tea are selling more this year than ever before.

They will sell more next year than they have this, simply because it is worth the price—the full price. Those who use it soon find this out for themselves, and they tell their friends.

If you use Red Rose Tea in your own home I believe you are fully satisfied that there is more real value in it than in any tea you have ever used. If you don't use it, don't you think it is worth trying? Tea that will satisfy you, will satisfy your customers, and satisfaction in your tea trade is worth a lot in your general business. If you can secure new customers for tea they will soon buy other goods from you.

Red Rose Tea is the tea that will help increase your business. Will you write now for particulars and samples?

Windsor Salt

must not be confounded with ordinary Salt. In quality, it is as high above the common Salt of trade as can be imagined. It won't cake—it is pure, white, dry. There is no impurity in it because of the care taken in manufacturing. It is sifted, not ground. Every particle of it is a separate Salt Crystal. It pays to sell Windsor Table Salt, because it is so good, clean, pure—

it is all Salt.

OPPOSITION TO QUEBEC TAX.

IF anything were needed to prove the folly and shortsighted policy exercised in passing the three hundred dollar tax on non-resident commercial travelers for foreign houses, in the Province of Quebec, it would be found in the almost universal opposition it has aroused, not only in Canada but also in the United States and the Mother Country itself.

Not the least serious of the difficulties involved is the fact that the motive and extent of the tax will probably be misunderstood by those who have not had an opportunity of studying it. Indeed, cases of this description have already arisen, the Canadian commercial agent at Leeds reporting that the operation of this tax is causing him no end of trouble with the Yorkshire exporting firms, and is having a very retarding effect upon Canadian trade.

Naturally enough, the average exporter does not readily grasp the difference between a Provincial and a Dominion tax. Laboring under the impression that this tax is imposed by the central governing body, he asks why Canada puts a duty on his goods, and, at the same time, taxes his travelers. He claims that this treatment is unfair and in direct violation of the principle involved in the British Preferential Tariff.

Another difficulty is brought up by British exporters who have resident agents in the Province of Quebec, but have been in the habit of making occasional trips to this country and assisting their agents. These houses pay their agents either salary or commission, and they consider it a great hardship that the heads of their firms, in making these customary trips, would be liable to a large fine.

This subject was taken up at the Autumnal meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, recently held in Liege, Belgium. A strong resolution was passed, deploring the action of the Quebec Legislature, and urging His Majesty's Government to lodge a protest with the Quebec Legislature in particular, and with all the colonial Governments, against this practice of taxing British commercial representatives in the colonies.

The British Board of Trade has also put itself on record as being opposed to the tax, claiming that the Quebec tax of three hundred dollars is more onerous than the commercial tax levied by any other country. Norway and Sweden have, indeed, higher taxes per annum, but, as they are payable monthly, they do not prove such a hardship as the Quebec impost, which must be paid in a lump. All the leading countries of Europe welcome foreign commercial travelers.

Canadian boards of trade are also cooperating to secure the abolition of the tax, and the powerful Canadian Manufacturers' Association has passed resolutions condemning it.

In the face of so much opposition, and the approval of but a few selfish firms who are benefited by the exclusion of competition, it would seem that the only popular step open for the Quebec Legislature is to gracefully withdraw the bill.

THE TARIFF INQUIRY.

ONE of the best features in connection with the sittings of the Tariff Commission in various parts of Canada is their publicity. The doors are wide open for manufacturers, workingmen, farmers, and faddists, to appear and present their views to the Commissioners. The whole country is made aware—if it cares to follow the evidence—of the reasons for tariff legislation which will ultimately affect the Government. If the Government are in reality affected by any other reasons, then they are not playing fair with the people. This is supposed to be the "brief" upon which they act; and we are all permitted to sit beside them and listen to the making of the "brief." Publicity—where genuine—is a great protector of public interest.

The framing of a "scientific tariff" on, at least, semi-protective lines, is a task of much delicacy and labor. It is impossible to lay down a straight-edged theory and then hew away carelessly to that line. The actual condition of affairs in the country must be studied, and the various items fixed with a full knowledge of how they will affect all interests concerned. A tariff item is apt to be a double-edged sword. It may cut two ways. While protecting one industry, it is very likely to increase the expense of another. Consequently, the Government are pursuing the right course in endeavoring to collect all the information they can elicit before sitting down to the complicated and vitally important task of writing a new tariff.

THE C. N. R. IN EDMONTON.

FRIDAY, November 24, saw the celebration of an event of national importance, for on that day the first C.N.R. train arrived in Edmonton from Winnipeg, having made the trip in 27 hours. On the afternoon of the same day, with ceremonies and speech-making befitting an occasion so important, the "last spike" was driven by Lieut.-Gov. Bulyea and the road was formally declared open for traffic.

The occasion was an epoch-making one in the history of Canada, for it marked an important stage in the building of a transcontinental road about which the majority of the Canadian people have heard very little. All Canada was in an uproar when the Canadian Pacific was built, and considering the importance of the undertaking and how little was then known of the possibilities of the country it was only natural that the project should command the attention of the entire country. The building of the G.T.P. has also been heralded by the beating of drums and the blowing of political trumpets, and the country has been in a ferment of discussion and political strife because of it. All Canada has known of the project and has appreciated its importance. The G.T.P. has often been referred to as the second of the Canadian transcontinentals, but this, of course, is a mistake. Since 1895 the Canadian Northern interests have been working steadily at the building of the second transcontinental and although their work has attracted very little attention and aroused very little interest in Eastern Canada they have nevertheless been accomplishing great things in a quiet and unostentatious way. A little more than a year ago the good people of Toronto sat up and rubbed their eyes in astonishment when they read in their papers one morning that the C.N. R. management had secured an option on the proposed new union station site about which the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk were disputing. It was a bold stroke that advertised effectively the fact that another transcontinental was being built.

It may surprise many people to know that the C.N.R. have now almost 2,500 miles of track west of Lake Superior. Nine years ago they had only 100 miles in the Dauphin district of Manitoba, but the work has been carried on steadily and systematically in the intervening years. So well has the work been planned that every section of the road has been made self-supporting as soon as it has been turned over to the operating department. The accomplishment of this object has been steadily kept in view by Mackenzie & Mann when deciding on new extensions.

The completion of the road to Edmonton marks an epoch in the history of Western Canada and means a great deal for that city. The distance from Winnipeg and the east has been shortened by several hundred miles and the future of Alberta's capital as a jobbing centre seems to be assured.

CANADA'S TRADE WITH MEXICO.

MR. BRYAN E. TOMBLIN, of Cordoba, Mexico, has been taking a trip in Canada to consider the possibilities of trade between the two countries. During the past few months a direct steamboat service has been getting under way between Montreal and Vera Cruz under a subsidy from both Governments, and although to a large extent only in its experimental stage has revealed signs of great success.

The two industries with which Mr. Tomblin is more directly interested are coffee and tobacco growing and he was very enthusiastic upon the future prospects which he saw in store for these two industries in Canada.

Canada is, of a necessity, at the present time seriously concerned about her own internal development, yet it would undoubtedly pay the Government to open their eyes as to what are the possibilities for export trade. Mr. Tomblin laid great stress on the fact that Mexico had a large market for various lines of produce which Canada can easily supply. He mentioned particularly, butter, potatoes and cheese. The market for this, in Mexico, is sadly deficient and would form a fine field for exploiting Canadian trade.

The politic developments of Mexico have undergone a material change during the last few months. One important move of the Government was the guaranteeing of the rate of exchange which has given great stability to the financial aspect. So much so that abundant capital from foreign parts has been flocking into the country to develop its resources. The Mexican dollar now stands on a firm basis and is on a parity with the Canada fifty cent piece, so that the financial world now knows exactly what it is doing. This has had a marked effect in stimulating confidence in its commerce. Vera Cruz is now only ten days distant from Halifax for the Winter months, and is, therefore, an easily get-at-able distance.

The resources of hard wood and dye woods are practically unlimited in Mexico and could form an additional cargo to coffee and tobacco, the latter of which is already of a substantial character.

Mr. Tomblin advocated very strongly that Canadians should go to the trouble of taking a tour of Mexico and see for themselves its great business possibilities, which he described as fully equal to the possibilities of Canada herself. The trip by rail from Canada via St. Louis could be done in about three days and, in addition to being a splendid outing for a Winter trip, would amply repay any business connections which could be established with that country.

QUESTION OF QUANTITY BUYING.

"SHOULD not one combination be allowed to get a given quantity of goods as cheaply as another combination of men?"

These words uttered by Mr. Fielding, sitting on the Tariff Commission at Hamilton, are really pregnant with meaning and strike at the root of the whole question. It is always well to bear in mind there are two sides to every question.

As an illustration of the importance to a manufacturer of regulating the selling price and terms on goods of his manufacture, an instance is known of a manufacturer a short time ago having sold a block of goods to a departmental store, the argument advanced by the buyer of the departmental store being that in view of the quantity purchased they expected the very lowest price. The manufacturer sold at his lowest price and shortly after that the departmental store was advertising the line of goods in question at less than the manufacturer's wholesale price.

The result was, that when afterwards the manufacturer called upon the wholesale and retail trade with a view to securing business, he was met with the answer that it was no use him expecting to make sales to the wholesale and retail trade at the prices he was asking when the departmental store in question was offering the goods at less than the manufacturer's price. This line of goods was used as an advertising medium to attract buyers by the cheapness of a staple article upon which every householder knew the price, while, at the same time the departmental store could probably secure other business from an intending buyer that would net him a very large profit, completely ruining the retailer's trade for the season.

There are many cases of this kind, and unless proper protection and regard were given by the manufacturers to the different classes of trade, the sale of goods to the consumers would soon be entirely in the hands of three or four departmental stores or their branches throughout the country. So many lines of groceries being staple, and the prices being well known to consumers, departmental stores frequently use such lines for advertising purposes, with the result that their action is calculated to ruin the trade of the retail grocer, unless he is properly protected by the manufacturer and wholesaler.

SUDDEN DEATH OF TRAVELER.

THE trade will learn with regret of the very sad and sudden demise of Mr. Thos. Dowswell, representative of F. W. Humphrey, wholesale grocer, Toronto, in the Georgian Bay district. Mr. Dowswell left Toronto Monday night apparently in good health and spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Orillia and surrounding district. Late Wednesday night a message was received to the effect that while going upstairs to retire at the Daly House, Orillia, about 11 o'clock, the unfortunate traveler was stricken with heart failure and expired immediately.

The deceased was a man of between 55 and 60 years of age, was well known to the trade and generally popular. He had learned the grocery business with Kinnear & Lang in the early days, and then started in business for himself near the old market. He was at one time on the road for a couple of years for the Empire Tobacco Co., and later was in business as a retail grocer at the corner of Wellesley and Ontario streets. He had been with F. W. Humphrey about 3 years at the time of his death. There are left a wife and several brothers in addition to a wide circle of friends, who will mourn this untimely cutting off.

HE COMPELLED SUCCESS.

FARMER, fruitgrower, nurseryman, wholesaler, manufacturer, Member of Parliament, are some of the functions that go to make up the busy life of Mr. E. D. Smith, Member of Parliament for Wentworth, who alone of the opposition candidates weathered the bye-election gales of November 22 and will represent his native constituency at Ottawa for the remainder of the present Canadian Parliament.

As a good fellow personally, and one closely connected with the grocery trade, the readers of The Grocer, irrespective of political affiliations, will join in congratulating Mr. Smith on his success—success that his record well warrants.

Indeed, Mr. Smith's life has been a succession of successes. Difficulties have been to him only so many things to be overcome. The effectiveness of hard work and persistency has seldom been better exemplified than by the subject of this sketch, who might well be taken for a model by the youth of this country who have their fortunes to make.

Mr. Smith was educated at the high school in Hamilton, intending to follow the profession of a civil engineer. He was a bright student and had secured the Gilchrist scholarship when his eyesight was affected by over-study and he was compelled to give up all thought of further pursuing the course to his intended profession.

Such a disappointment would have discouraged many a young man, but E. D. Smith was made of sterner stuff.

There was the old homestead and farm back in Saltfleet Township under the mountain, a hundred and seventy acres of good Ontario land that might well employ the best thought and energy of any ambitious young man, and the future M.P. was not without ambition.

It did not take long for the fact to be borne home that the prospect for rapid advancement in ordinary farming was not overly encouraging. New paths had to be blazed, new sources of wealth unearthed.

The young man showed such aptitude and steadiness that at 25 his father gave him half the homestead and sold to him the other half for $5,000, and E. D. Smith set to work to win his fortune and pay off the debt on the farm.

Fruit-growing seemed to the young man to offer good prospects, although at the outset a costly affair entailing heavy expenditures with little or no income; and he bent his whole energies in this direction. It required grit and faith, but in time the orchards began to bear fruit and the tide of fortune to turn.

But the fruit business was not without its drawbacks. When the crops were heavy the markets were overloaded. Every fruit-grower seemed to think it necessary to send his fruit to the few large centres. Gluts were the consequence, with prices below a profitable level. The situation required a mind of executive capacity. Mr. Smith had a theory that by developing the smaller towns and villages throughout Canada he would have a regular market for his fruit without the demoralizing conditions that prevailed at times in the old centres. The theory was soon shown to be correct. Mr. Smith found he could not only readily dispose of his own fruit at profitable figures but that the demand was such as to make it necessary for him to buy fruit to fill his orders. Thus came the development from a fruit-grower to a wholesale distributor.

In 1886 Mr. Smith added to the 170 acres that formed the homestead, the farm at the foot of the mountain on which he now resides. As his business of fruit-growing and fruit-buying gradually increased other farms were secured until now Mr. Smith has under cultivation 750 acres, 200 of which, however, are rented. The rest is owned in fee simple.

It must not be thought that in his fruit-growing and allied occupations old line farming was neglected. Mr. Smith is still the proud owner of 25 head of fine cows and raises sufficient hay and oats to winter his stock and to provide provender for his stable of horses, a large number being required on the estate.

Success is the result of building on foundations already well and truly laid rather than in launching into enterprises concerning the requirements of which we are uninformed.

About fifteen years ago the fact began to loom up very largely before Mr.

E. D. Smith, M.P.

Smith's vision that we were importing very large quantities of nursery stock from the United States. Why not grow our own? seemed a pertinent question to which no satisfactory answer could be given. The conditions in the Grimsby district were all favorable, and the requirements of the fruit men known. Mr. Smith began raising nursery stock. The venture was a success from the beginning and for some years past Mr. Smith has been among the two or three largest nurserymen in Canada.

At present, of the 750 acres of land managed by Mr. Smith 250 acres are in fruit, about 250 in nursery stock and the balance in ordinary farm crops, a portion of which being land in preparation for nursery stock.

The most recent phase of the fruit business upon which Mr. Smith has entered is that of manufacturing. In connection with his fruit shipping business, which for a number of years past has amounted to between 300 and 400 cars per annum, the possibilities of a jam and canning factory became apparent. It looked like a good investment and so a little over a year ago Mr. Smith erected a factory for manufacturing jam and canned fruit, the building for which cost about $15,000.

Here again Mr. Smith's genius for being just a little different from anyone else made itself manifest. There were many concerns putting up jams and jellies and canned fruits in tins. Mr. Smith figured it out this way: Canada is growing richer and richer; the consuming public are becoming more able and willing every day to buy a first class article and pay the price for it. At the present time we are importing some million pounds of high class pure jams and jellies from England and Scotland. It is only reasonable to suppose that these can be made in Canada of equally good quality and at less price, particularly if the factory is located right in the midst of the orchard where the fruit can be secured freshly picked and direct from the trees.

Mr. Smith regarded this venture much in the light of an experiment, knowing how difficult it is to sell goods at a high price when apparently similar goods are on the market at a lower figure, and did not anticipate a large sale the first season.

He was agreeably disappointed. He placed his goods on the market in an attractive shape and advertised them on the ground of purity and quality, and has already found a large class of people who are willing to give his products a trial and on trial become regular customers.

It is interesting to note despite the variety of Mr. Smith's interests how well they work in together. He grows fruit trees. The big rush in handling these is in the Spring when not busy with anything else. He grows fruit in considerable quantities, which enables him to keep in close touch with the probable quantities which are likely to come upon the market at a given time. If he finds on his trees a very heavy crop of a certain variety of plums, grapes or peaches, he can pretty surely surmise that his neighbor will have a similar crop at about the same time, and can arrange for his market accordingly. Finally, if in shipping the fruit he finds there is an over-supply of peaches or any other fruit, such as likely to depress the market, he can turn the surplus into his factory, where it will reappear in the form of jam or preserved fruit to meet the demand which comes into play later during the Fall or Winter.

The fact that Mr. Smith's factory is located on his farm and communicates with the city only by means of the telephone and radial railway is significant. Indeed, it is no rash hazard to predict that with the development of radial railways and power lines throughout older Ontario similar industries will spring up all through the country and the centralizing movement that has been noticed for so long be checked.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Ontario Markets.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Nov. 30, 1905.

SINCE our last report there has been considerable shrinkage in volume of trade reported. There is every indication that buyers from outside points have completed their stock arrangements for the coming season. Orders, therefore, during the week under review have been mainly in the nature of immediate requirements or completion of previous orders.

On the street, trade has been dull and uninteresting, wholesale buyers showing no great inclination to place orders at the present moment.

In canned goods there has been the usual activity but with no material feature of interest to note. We quote this week new pack apples which are now on offer.

Red raspberries are reported as being short in stock and prices are, therefore, more of a nominal character.

In sugar there has been no new feature of interest. Trade has continued steady for immediate demands, with no indication of any material change in the near future.

Syrups and molasses are uninteresting.

In coffee there has been a fair domestic demand and better and milder grades are receiving more attention.. It is evident that coffee is now attracting much more attention than has previously been the case.

In tea the local market has been dull and samples which have arrived at recent date are reported as not up to the standard of earlier arrivals, a fact which probably accounts for smaller volume of trade.

In dried fruits there is more activity manifest and prices generally are ruling extremely firm with an upward tendency.

In prunes prices have manifested still further strength as will be noticed in our detailed report.

Citron peel is advanced somewhat.

In Sultanas, reports from primal points denote a much firmer market and quotations have materially stiffened. Local prices have advanced.

California muscatels have made an upward tendency and are now quoted at 7 1-2c. to 9c.

Domestic evaporated apples, in sympathy with the strong situation, are now quoted at 10c., an advance of 2c. on previous prices.

Walnuts continue to maintain the strength spoken of in our previous report and there is every indication of a short market with still further advancement in prices.

The demand for rice continues good with prices of a distinctly upward tendency, but no quotable change.

Spices are uninteresting.

The bean situation is very strong and previous quotations are well maintained. Whilst it is believed that the crop will prove a very short one the quality is considerably above the average.

The fish market continues very active and arrivals are coming to hand in every way satisfactory.

The hide market, whilst being reported as continuing steady on previous basis, is not considered to be by any means satisfactory. Arrivals are still only sufficient to meet the present demand. The present season is not a favorable one for quality. It is, therefore, expected that the present condition of the market will make a movement at an early date. At the same time, as the stock is likely to depreciate, it will not be a favorable moment for dealers to lay in supplies.

Canned Goods—An ordinary degree of activity has been manifest, with no special feature to report. New pack apples are now being quoted and our prices will be found corrected accordingly. There are still small stocks of 1904 pack on hand at old prices. Through misprint green gage plums were quoted at $3.17 1-2, it should have read $3.47 1-2. Raspberries are reported as short in stocks and prices firming up. We quote:

Sugar—Local demand for sugar continues uninteresting. The unsettled condition of the market gives such uncertainty to the position that buyers hesitate to buy anything but for immediate requirements. The U. S. markets report a somewhat stronger position, but up to the time of going to press it has not had any material change on the domestic market. It would appear as though the universal opinion is that bottom has been reached, in fact that prices have really declined too far and that a slight reaction has taken place. How far this reaction may extend before the normal condition is restored remains to be seen. At all events the demand is not likely to be of such a nature as would warrant any immediate upward movement. Should, however, any further strength be manifest on foreign markets there is little doubt but that domestic sugars would move in sympathy. We quote:

Syrups and Molasses—The domestic trade has been of little interest, only a very ordinary demand being in evidence. From foreign points arrivals are reported as small and spot stocks low. The N. Y. reports denote the tone of the market as firm, there being a good demand for all offerings of desirable grades, baking interests being free buyers, and dealers were making moderate purchases to obtain supplies to cover their current wants. The market was unchanged and firm. Offerings of spot supplies continued practically nil due to the absence of spot stocks in dealers' hands, most of their supplies being sold previous to arrival. Coffee—The domestic trade has been showing continued interest, and in better and milder grades fair business is reported. From foreign points reports denote a much stronger position and prices ruling firm. The latest information from N. Y. denotes trading in the market fairly active and the tone firmer. At the opening, prices were five points higher. During the day there was a moderate amount of buying and as offerings were limited, prices made an additional gain. The close was firm at a net advance for the day of five to fifteen points.

The advices received from Brazil report a light interior movement of coffee. The weather conditions in the interior have not been favorable for the growing crop, more rain being needed.

The existing stocks of coffee at Rio and Santos, it is pointed out, are considerably smaller than last year. European stocks also are limited, and it is expected that Europe will have to continue in the market as a steady buyer during the balance of the season to prevent a material further reduction in her existing stocks.

The consuming trade in Europe, it is maintained, is poorly supplied and it is also understood that the stocks in the hands of the consuming trade are light, as buyers as a rule have been reported operating on a hand-to-mouth basis for some time past.

With a revival of confidence which is expected to show itself in the near future, an improved condition of trade is believed will develop, and this, with probable steadily decreasing stocks during the balance of the present crop year, it is believed, will have a favorable effect upon values.

The Brazil market was reported firm.

Tea—The domestic market has been dull and inactive. No great energy has been manifest. Buyers have expressed disappointment at recent samples coming to hand, quality not coming up to earlier supplies. The London market reports in Indians, that offerings were again too heavy for the requirements of the trade. This resulted in a further slight weakening of the market, which was specially noticeable in common descriptions. Duty payments are proceeding very satisfactorily, and appear to indicate that the duty paid stock in the country is below normal. The total quantity of tea shipped from Northern India to all places to the end of September was about 4,000,000 pounds below the same period last year.

In Ceylons the more limited supplies of really good tea just now coming forward met with strong support at hardening rates. On the other hand, where quality was off, quotations eased back accordingly. Quality is showing some signs of falling off, as generally occurs at this season of the year.

Foreign and Dried Fruits— Domestic trade has continued active in view of Christmas trade, and several lines are developing considerable strength.

New prunes are developing further strength and prices have been again advanced.

Californian muscatels have advanced materially, being now quoted at 7 1-2c. and 9c.

Domestic evaporated apples have advanced in sympathy with the apple market.

Walnuts are reported as advancing materially owing to continued reports of short crops.

New Brazil nuts have also stiffened considerably. Foreign reports all denote considerable strength and trade as good, both in Californian and Mediterean points.

Hides—Local markets continue firm, and active, all arrivals being easily placed and no prospect of any accumulation of stocks. It is generally thought that the market must soon find a more stable basis. Winter arrivals do not generally show good quality and will not, therefore, be so readily placed. The U. S. markets are showing distinct weakening, although still on a parity with this market. Wool is slow and unprofitable, many would-be buyers holding off to see result of coming London reports. Quebec Markets.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Nov. 30th, 1905.

IN grocery jobbing circles trade is reported as only fair. Now that navigation has closed jobbers expect a somewhat easier business. Country orders are turning more in the way of requirements for the approaching holiday trade and as is usual at this time of the year, not much attention is given to heavy buying.

Fruits, nuts and all kinds of seasonable necessities are the principal sellers.

In teas the market remains quiet though firm and no special features are reported. All lines seem under fair demand. As regards the matter of inspection of teas that have been rejected on the New York market, it is reported that several lots have passed the customs, which should not have been allowed under the standards to have been marketed. The fact that the jobbing trade and importers of teas are still without standards, despite the fact that requisition has been made on the Government at Ottawa, is causing a good deal of uncertainty and dissatisfaction here.

Sugars are unchanged with only a fair demand and as remarked in special department devoted to sugar, the agitation in the west, before the Tariff Commission, on sugars is arousing a good deal of interest among the jobbing trade and divers opinions are expressed on the subject.

Syrups and molasses are quiet, with business only fair.

Coffees and spices are locally dull and little trade done.

In canned goods things are very quiet.

The commencement of Advent, December 1, has stimulated the fish trade and dealers report splendid business for all lines and this is expected to keep up until Christmas. Country buyers are also buying more freely.

In dried fruits there has been some activity during the past week, but no changes are reported. Evaporated apples and beans are extremely high, in fact the former have dropped off in demand owing to the high price asked by evaporators.

Maple and honey products show an improved demand.

The flour market is reported as being in good condition and millers all report being busy.

Bran is fair and in good demand, as also is seed of all kinds.

Cheese and butter, owing to the close of navigation and the shortness of stocks here were expected to get easier, but prices are still firm and the local demand sufficient to maintain the high prices prevailing.

Eggs are also scarce and becoming practically a luxury to the customer, as high as 40c. being asked for strictly fresh eggs over the counter.

Provisions are steady, with a quiet demand for all lines.

Canned Goods—There has been some little activity in the canned goods situation due largely to the closing of navigation, buyers in all parts availing themselves of the privilege of last shipments. The advance in freight rates has also stimulated orders from country buyers. There are no special features to note among jobbers as to any particular lines of canned goods. Salmon is in fairly good demand and as Advent is here the consumption of fish products of all kinds will naturally be reflected in larger orders in canned fish of all descriptions. We quote:

Sugar—Since the advance of 10c. noted last week there is no change to date in the sugar market. Business is reported quiet by jobbers and no interest is noted, with the exception of the agitation in Toronto and Hamilton in matters relating to sugars that has been brought out at the sessions of the Tariff Commission. This subject seems to be of vital interest to many in the trade, but no strong opinions are expressed for publication. The outcome of the agitation in the west is looked forward to, as is but natural, with a good deal of interest by the grocery trade. We quote:

Coffee—There is no change of importance to note in the local coffee market, which is on the quiet side, with prices unchanged and steady. Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre in their report of the 29th ult. say: "Receipts at Rio and Santos are falling off rapidly. It is important to note that while as usual the U. S. have taken the larger part of the Brazil crop their visible is only about 500,000 bags greater than at even date last year. To-day New York practically controls the world's coffee and their very large stocks have been accumulated without advancing prices. As the greater part of this accumulation is owned by two interests and as they have been successful in covering their requirements they will soon be looking for profits. We quote:

Tea—The local tea market continues firm and steady with a volume of business limited. Brokers report inquiries none too plentiful as the policy of the trade seems, momentarily, to be to buy cautiously. Ceylon greens and blacks are reported firm and Japan teas also are under fair inquiry, although the trading is not heavy. China Ping Sueys are still inquired for at somewhat firmer prices. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Business in all lines of dried fruits has been very active. There is, however, nothing new to report as regards Valencia raisins this week. Currants are maintaining the advance previously reported. Comadre figs are scarce. Dates are going into consumption freely at reasonable prices. Shelled walnuts are very scarce and new supplies are anxiously awaited for the Christmas trade. Shippers abroad advise that notwithstanding the high prices ruling, they are crowded with orders. Walnuts, 1905 crop, of all kinds are now in buyers' hands and are being rapidly distributed to the country trade. We quote:

Rice and Tapioca—There are no changes to report in the situation of the rice market. A fair amount of business is turning. Tapioca is reported stronger and will cost to-day from 1-2c. to 1c. per lb. more to lay down than former quotations. Jobbers are still quoting, however, at 4 1-2c. to 5c.

Beans—The bean market continues very firm with a strong upward tendency. Higher prices are anticipated by shippers' agents and the trade generally is of the opinion that an advance is likely to come. The general run of prices this week has been from $1.65 to $1.70 gor 3-pound pickers. The close of navigation has seen shipments for foreign ports and one consignment of several hundred bags was noted for Russia and further shipments for that country have been booked, naturally now that navigation is closed, via New York. We quote:

Choice prime beans	1 75 1 80
Lower grades	1 65 1 75

Evaporated Apples—Owing to the high prices that are being asked by western evaporators the demand has somewhat fallen off. Despite the fact that California evaporated prunes are high this year, it is argued that if evaporated apples reach approximately the same price as California fruits the average consumer will turn to the California fruit. The consumption, naturally, at the high prices prevailing will be curtailed. From 8 1-2c. to 9c. is quoted as the ruling prices for Winter variety.

Maple Products—There has been a slight improvement in the demand for maple products. One large sugar dealer reports that fancy stocks and even good fine maple sugar is hard to secure. The demand for maple syrup is growing, owing to the advent of colder weather. We quote:

Honey—There has been a better demand during the week for honey of all descriptions. White clover is firm at 7 1-2c. to 8c., with new comb at 12c. to 14c., according to quality. Buckwheat in round lots is quoted at 5 1-2c. to 5 3-4c., though 6c. in a jobbing way is the price. We quote:

White clover, extracted tins		0 08

Fish—The demand for fish of all kinds is exceptionally brisk at present and will continue so. Advent commences on Dec. 1 and buyers generally throughout the country are preparing to meet the demand for fish. It is to the interest of all fish dealers and grocers to stock up now as a good sale can always be depended on from now till Christmas. There is a ready sale especially for fresh and frozen fish. Green cod continues scarce and prices are higher than usual with prospects of further advance in the near future. Salt herrings are also good sellers. New frozen herring are now on the market, also salmon and halibut, as well as lake fish, while haddock are more plentiful, with prices lower than our previous quotations. In smoked fish there is a good demand for haddies and kippers. The demand for bulk oysters is also much better and it will increase during December, which is one of the heavy months for these goods. Mr. Wm. Dobie, general manager of E. W. Gillett Co., returned from a business trip to New York a few days ago.

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 29, 1905.

THE weather has continued very mild, in fact, except a few days we have not had it at all cold. Dealers have been very busy but the rush is over. In Winter port business, the first steamers have come and gone. In markets there is nothing of particular interest. The general tone is firm and in many lines prices are high.

Evaporated apples have shown a sharp advance.

Fresh meats are very low this Fall.

One feature of the week was the receipt of some small shipments of Malaga seeded raisins. These were never imported till two years ago, in fact, had never before been put up in Malaga. That year the appearance of the goods was unsatisfactory, though in other ways the goods were bright. Last season owing to the low price of California seeded none were imported. In the early season this year buyers were offish, fearing the quality would not be right. When they found the extreme price of California seeded, they tried to buy but found the shipper oversold to other markets. The shipments now to hand are very satisfactory and the success of Malaga packers in this line is assured.

LAST MINUTE PROVISION MARKETS.

Montreal, Thursday, Nov. 30, 12.30 p.m.

BUTTER—Market slightly easier. Fancy Townships sold 23½c. or ½c. lower. Fine Creamery, 23c. Ontario Dairies, 20c. to 21c. Rolls, 21½c.

CHEESE—Market dull, little doing. Ontarios, October makes, 12½c. Easterns, 12c. to 12½c. November selling ½c. under these.

EGGS—Market steady, firm undertone. Selected, 25c. No. 1 Candled, 20c and Montreal limed, 21c.

PROVISIONS—Steady market, no change. Dressed hogs firmer and higher. Smoked meats, good demand.

Oil—In burning oil business has been very large. Prices show no further advance. Lubricating oils rather quiet. In paint oils some contracts for linseeds have been made. Prices are somewhat unsettled. While figures quoted are low, it is doubtful if the extreme low prices of last year will be again seen. Turpentine seems also unsettled, but continues high. There have been quite large receipts of cod oil this week. Prices continue higher than was generally expected and demand from New York has greatly helped in strengthening the market.

Salt—This is the off season. A fair stock of Liverpool coarse salt is held here. Prices are firm. In fine salt demand is light.

Canned Goods—Owing to open prices among the dealers here this Fall, particularly in vegetables, and a tendency to cut prices, this has not been a satisfactory line. The situation is somewhat better. Tomatoes are firmer. In fruits prices show little change. Just fair business. Salmon is dull. Prices this year are well below last. Lobsters continue extreme. There is quite a full stock of gallon apples held. In domestic fish, prices unchanged. Sardines a full pack. Scallops very scarce.

Dried Fruits—The first direct shipments of California seeded raisins have been received. While showing nice quality, price is too high for business and quantity imported is very light. Practically no California loose raisins here. Market is well supplied with Malaga loose and Valencia layers. For table fruit, Malagas are sold. Some Malaga seeded have been received. Both price and quality satisfactory, but owing to demand from other markets and the fact that our people delayed buying, only a small quantity was secured. Prunes have a steady sale and stocks are light. Prices firmer. Apricots and peaches firm. New dates here. The early fruit quite high. Figs this season, low. Evaporated apples have somewhat surprised the trade. Prices showing quite rapid advance. Onions rather higher. This is the season of large sale for nuts.

Sugar—Market is still weak and unsettled. Dealers are carrying but very light stocks, in fact, buying from hand to mouth.

Molasses—In Barbadoes molasses prices are firmer. The stock is not large. In Porto Rico quite full stock held. Values somewhat unsettled, but for fancy, prices held quite firm.

Fish—Weather continues too mild for frozen fish. There is little variety in fresh stock, chiefly cod and haddock being offered. In dry fish prices are still very high. Pickled herring are just fair supply. High prices asked. Rippling herring are the best grade offered. It has been a good season for boneless fish, prices of which have been relatively low. Smoked herring firmer. There is steady western demand for haddies.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

MR. W. A. SINCLAIR, who has been representing R. Herron & Co., wholesale spices and coffees, Montreal, in the Maritime Provinces, is meeting with splendid success. Mr. Sinclair is young, ambitious and energetic, and his firm report good business from his district.

Mr. T. C. Fleming of the Fleming-Hutton Co., Limited, has again resumed his connection as traveler with Gowans, Kent & Co., with which firm he was so long connected. This well known combination will no doubt as of yore boom crockery interests throughout his territory.

W. B. Stringer & Co., fruit brokers, of Toronto, have opened a branch of their business in Montreal at 209 Commissioners street, under the management of Mr. Thos. Smith, a thoroughly capable man of many years' experience in the fruit business. The firm have made rapid progress since their advent a couple of years ago and The Grocer sincerely wishes them every success with their Montreal branch.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION AT HAMILTON

POINTS OF INTEREST TO THE GROCER.

FIRST DAY.

THERE was one marked discord in the higher tariff symphony presented by over a score of manufacturers at the sessions of the Tariff Commission sitting at Hamilton. Some twenty-two demands had been heard for increased tariff protection for Canadian industries when there suddenly came a rift in the lute. H. W. Zealand, representing the Grocers' Wholesale Company of Hamilton, asked for the removal of the duty on sugar, starch, canned vegetables, canned meats, canned fruits, and other articles in general use handled in the grocery business. The grounds for this novel request were that it was the only way to overcome a combine of the wholesale grocers of Canada, who, through their guild, formed practically a close corporation in control of the buying and selling of groceries.

Mr. Zealand appeared on behalf of the Grocers' Wholesale Company, Limited, a Hamilton company, with $100,000 capital, and read the following memorandum:

The Combine Indicted.

"Grocers' Wholesale Company, Limited, with head office at Hamilton, was incorporated by letters patent, under the Ontario Companies Act, on the third day of July, 1901, to carry on business as wholesale grocers.

"Upon applying to the Redpath Sugar Refinery for sugar that company replied that it would be pleased to do business with the Grocers' Wholesale Company, Limited, but that its output was controlled by the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and that it could not sell sugar to any firm or company that was not a member of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and that it would be necessary for this company to join the association.

Changed Their Minds.

"Since the incorporation of this company, and after some three years of cash dealing with starch manufacturers, canners of vegetables and others, the Wholesale Grocers' Guild demanded that the starch manufacturers, canners of vegetables and some others should absolutely decline any business from this company, and such starch manufacturers, canners of vegetables and others were compelled to remove the name of this company from their selling list, and in every instance it was stated that the matter was one of regret to the person or firm that was thus obliged to refuse to do business with this company.

"This company therefore makes application to the honorable members of the Commission to be permitted to import all such articles free of duty."

Could Not Enter Combine.

"What articles ?" asked Mr. Brodeur when Mr. Zealand had finished reading.

"Sugar, starch, canned vegetables, canned meat, canned fruits," was the reply.

"You are a wholesale grocer ?"

"Yes; we have been doing business for three years."

"Did you become members of that association ?" asked Mr. Fielding, taking a hand.

"No. Afterwards we endeavored to and they declined us."

"You applied for admission ?"

"After about a year's business we applied, and were refused admission." Mr. Zealand said he had correspondence on that question, and promised Mr. Brodeur to bring the documents before the Commission the next morning.

"You have since applied for quotations ?" Mr. Brodeur asked.

"Yes, less than a year ago."

"Was any different reason given—any question of finances ?"

"No question of finances; we are in business on a cash system. We have entered an action against the Guild, which is now pending."

A Wide-reaching Combine.

This concluded Mr. Zealand's statement. Seen subsequently by a press representative he gave the following particulars of his experience with the other interests referred to in his memorandum:

"The canners had done business with the Grocers' Wholesale Company to their entire satisfaction, and said they would be glad to do the business again this year, and I was assured they would leave our name on their list of wholesale buyers; but after an interview with the Grocers' Guild they felt themselves compelled to remove the name.

"We had been buying canned meats from William Clark, Montreal, but we got a letter from his representative stating that a list had been furnished him of the firms that he would be permitted to continue selling to, and he regretted to say that our name was not on that list.

Competition Restrained.

"In regard to sugar, we made an application lately to the Acadia Refining Company of Halifax, and they said in their letter that while they were with us in sympathy, yet the Montreal refiners left such matters in that district to them, and that they did not like to interfere in the districts of the Montreal refiners.

"As to starch, the manager of a starch factory told me that a letter he wrote to us was as strong as he thought he should put it but that privately between ourselves he was absolutely forced to do what he did—to refuse our business."

SECOND DAY.

The first move against combines in Hamilton in the nature of criminal prosecution was begun yesterday, when County Crown Attorney Washington went after the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild. The office of the Canada Grocers, Limited, in the Spectator building, was searched under a warrant for books and other documents believed to be of use in connection with criminal proceedings, and everything in sight that might answer a useful purpose was seized by Crown Attorney Washington and Sheriff's Officer Stewart. Books and documents in possession of Mr. H. C. Beckett, of the wholesale firm of W. H. Gillard & Co., believed to be used in connection with the Grocers' Guild, were also seized, though Mr. Beckett stated he had nothing of importance in that line.

Follows Tariff Revelations.

This action was the outcome of the revelations made before the Tariff Commission on Friday, when Mr. H. W. Zealand, Manager of the Wholesale Grocers' Company, petitioned the commissioners for permission to import goods free from other countries that could not be purchased from manufacturers in Canada, because the company was not in the Dominion Guild or combine. It was alleged that the Redpath Sugar Refinery refused to sell sugar to the Wholesale Grocers' Company because it was not a member of the guild, and that starch manufacturers, canners of vegetables, and some others declined business from the company for the same reason. Mr. George E. Bristol (Lucas, Steele & Bristol) is president of the Canada Grocers, Limited, and one of the chief officers of the Dominion Guild. Harry C. Beckett (W. H. Gillard & Co.) is vice-president of the Dominion Grocers' Guild, and a member of the Price Commission thereof. The information laid is as follows:—

The Charge Laid.

"That George E. Bristol and H. C. Beckett, with others, combined to keep up prices of sugar, starch, and other commodities, to prevent competition in the same."

The turn taken before the Tariff Commission on Saturday in relation to the grocers' combine was unexpected. At the opening Mr. H. W. Zealand, who had brought up the question by his complaint on Friday, appeared, with counsel, Messrs. J. W. Nesbitt, K.C., and J. P. Gauld. They hesitated about placing their correspondence before the public, in view of their pending action against the guild, and were given time to consider the matter. Later the representatives of the guild made an effort to explain the charges and the sitting ended with Mr. Nesbitt's announcement that they had now decided not to produce their correspondence, in view of criminal proceedings being instituted against the guild by the Crown.

The Guild's Story Told.

The representatives of the guild who appeared were Messrs. Geo. E. Bristol, president of the guild, and H. C. Beckett and H. N. Kittson, of the W. H. Gillard Co., wholesale grocers, Hamilton. The principal statement was made by Mr. Bristol, who in a most cheery, doubt-dispelling manner, made a reply to Mr. Zealand. He said the latter's memorandum was so full of misstatements that in justice to the wholesale grocery trade of the Dominion he desired to put the matter in a proper light before the Commission. As reported in the Globe, the grocers' wholesale company claimed to be a wholesale grocery company. He denied that; they were a combination of retailers, who divided their profits not in proportion to the percentage earned on the whole business, but on the profit earned on each individual article by the person buying it. "In that they differ from any wholesale grocery company, because they make their money and divide it among their stockholders or partners. They say they have been kept from buying sugar and other goods from the different manufacturers and that it is due to the Wholesale Grocers' Guild. If they were wholesale grocers in the ordinary acceptance of the term—it is the policy of the guild that everyone who is a wholesale grocer is admitted to the guild, but it is not the policy that a combination of retailers shall join together and injure their brother retailers by buying at less than they can buy."

Some Outside the Combine.

Mr. Bristol said the company's prospectus would show their objects are different altogether from those of a wholesale grocers' company. Sugar could be bought by others than members of the guild. There was a firm in Hamilton who had bought sugar—all the manufacturers in the Dominion were not members of the guild—there were two wholesale grocers' houses in Toronto, Lumbers' and Eckardt's; one firm in Kingston. Geo. Robertson & Son, and others in Canada not members of the guild. Therefore, Mr. Zealand's claim for a reduction of the duties was foundationless because of misstatements. No wholesale grocer had yet been refused admission to the guild.

Mr. Fielding then asked a few questions. "I do not think we are very much concerned as to whom you admit to your society. The question is, are these commodities still open to the public in the market?"

"They are."

"Anything that would tend to prevent different persons from purchasing on equal terms would be a matter that might be properly considered by us. Except in that I do not see that we have anything to do with it."

"They are available to anybody who wants to buy them."

"On even terms?"

"It is done like the railroad business: a man who buys a carload gets a better rate than a man who wants only a small quantity."

"A larger or smaller quantity?"

"That is the whole difference."

Is There Discrimination?

"But for given quantities—since the question has been put—can any man who wants to buy sugar from the refiners get the same rate for the same quantity and at the same terms as any other man?"

"Provided he is a wholesaler."

"If he is buying in big quantities that makes him a wholesaler."

"Supposing he was a retailer and bought it for, say, in Hamilton, to ruin the trade of every other retailer."

"Well, there may be phases of that that are difficult to deal with, but, generally speaking, the man who wants to buy the same quantity and pay his money ought to have it on the same terms," said Mr. Fielding, decisively.

"I do not think that phase has ever come up in that way exactly. In the grocery trade at least there is a retail and wholesale trade. The manufacturer would sell to us as wholesalers where he would not sell to the retailers at the same price, because that would be interfering with the other retail customers."

Agreement With Refiners.

"What is your agreement with the refiners with regard to the prices? Is there any price fixed between the guild and the refiners?"

"The guild fixes the prices, but it is available to everybody."

"The guild don't fix prices," interposed Mr. Beckett, correcting his associate.

"What is the nature of the arrangement between the refiners and the Grocers' Guild?" asked Mr. Brodeur.

"There is no written agreement," Mr. Beckett answered, "but there is an understanding that the refiners will recognize a system known as the equalized rate system of selling sugar. It is rather an elaborate thing; it would take too much time to go into the details of it."

"It is just as well to have it, since the question has been brought up, to clear the atmosphere."

"It is a system of selling sugar to enable the wholesaler and those handling sugar at present to make a profit, as they have been making, of four per cent. on the sales. This is what the system originated for, and it is arranged by working on the ruling price in Montreal. For instance, if sugar today in Montreal is $4.40, the trade have what they call an equalized rates book, that gives the name of every town in the provinces, and opposite these names are certain figures. These figures added to the list price in Montreal gives the selling price laid down at any point in Canada. These figures simply are sufficient to cover the cost of freight charges, and the wholesale grocer gets what he has earned in the shape of a refund or rebate that the refiners give for three months at 4 per cent."

"On what condition is that rebate given?"

"On the condition that the price has been adhered to, if they have not sold it at less than the list price, plus the equalized rate. We have not got to buy unless we want this rebate; that is, we volunteer to buy."

Done to Get a Profit.

"Can you buy from the States or other refiners?"

"No, we suggested that idea to the refiners. Prior to the sugar arrangement we were importing sugar and buying sugar from the refiners and selling it for absolute cost. We were not making any money, and finally, after a good many discussions, the thing came to a basis that was being worked in the States, and has been for years, that enabled us to sell the goods and make a small margin of profit. Anybody that wants sugar can buy it. They don't refuse it."

"So that Mr. Zealand's statement that he had been refused would not be correct?"

"No, it would not be correct. They don't refuse anybody, but they decline to give the four per cent. to anybody but those who are wholesale grocers."

"It comes about to the same."

"For instance, say, a person would go to the refiners representing half a dozen retail men, and wanted to buy two cars of sugar. The refiners don't think they are justified in selling to those retail men, who sell the sugar direct to the consumer, on the same basis as they would to the wholesale people. The wholesale people require a certain measure of protection."

Mr. Fielding returned to the discussion with a few more questions. "There are goods which are sold in similar quantities by the refiner to different firms. Why not on the same terms?"

"They don't buy for the same purpose," Mr. Beckett replied; "one is a wholesaler and the other a retailer."

"I quite realize that a man might want to sell to the wholesale trade on better terms than he would sell a smaller quantity. I do not think that is so serious. It is the quantity that governs the transaction if he sells another carload at the same price."

"If he sold a carload to a retailer made up of half a dozen retailers."

Should Have Equal Rates.

"Should not one combination be allowed to get a given quantity of goods as cheaply as another combination of men?"

"It has always been a recognized principle in the grocery business that wholesale discounts were to wholesale houses."

"Wholesale discounts to people who buy in wholesale quantities," suggested Mr. Fielding.

"The company of which I am a member," Mr. Beckett replied, "buys about $2,000,000 worth of sugar a year. In justice to other wholesale houses who are not doing as large a business we never ask for any concession with regard to quantities, because we don't want to have any attempt to get any preference over wholesalers who are doing a legitimate wholesale business. It was a case of treating everybody on the same basis, giving a discount to strictly wholesale houses and protecting wholesale houses to that extent by not selling to retailers on the basis of wholesale prices."

The Guild's Exclusiveness.

Replying to Mr. Brodeur, Mr. Beckett said wholesalers outside the guild can buy from the refiners and get the rebate. As to Mr. Zealand's firm's having been refused admission to the guild, Mr. Beckett said the form of application had been sent them and they could not sign it because they were doing a business that was not wholesale and they were not eligible for membership and thereby admitted they were not. Their prospectus had represented that wholesale grocers were a kind of a burden on the retail man. They, therefore, decided to buy their stuff from the manufacturers and divide it between them at cost price less the expense of doing the business.

"When the retailers get together like that with a view of putting wholesale grocers out of business it is natural that the wholesale grocers should do what they can to protect their interests by impressing upon manufacturers the matter of only giving their wholesale discounts to the wholesalers," said Mr. Beckett.

Mr. Brodeur secured from Mr. Beckett the statement that all the Canadian sugar refiners were under the arrangement with the guild, except one, that at Wallaceburg. The guild did not sell the Wallaceburg sugar because the latter sold it to the retail men at the same price as to the guild. Replying to Mr. Paterson, Mr. Beckett said the guild courted inquiry. They were getting a profit of 4 per cent. on what cost 8½ or 9 cents to run. "We have been abused for several years and heard a lot of misstatements and want to stop them right there. We are prepared to answer them at any time."

What the People Will Think.

"I think," responded Mr. Fielding, "there will be a great many people who will take the ground that the manufacturer of an article should sell it on even terms to anybody, whether he calls himself by one name or another. I think the public generally would rather take that view, because the retailer, as a rule, does not want to buy in lots of a carload or fifty carloads. He buys in smaller quantities."

DOMINION VICE-PRESIDENT EXPRESSES HIS VIEWS.

Interviewed by a reporter, Mr. Beckett said :

"The Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild is not a combine, as has been stated, but is an association comprised of wholesale grocers throughout Canada, having for its objects the promotion of the general interests of the grocery trade. Its functions might fairly be described as closely analogous to those performed by the retail associations throughout the country, which have been created to improve the conditions among the retail trade, and which could not be effected by independent action. Unification of terms of sale, the equalization of freight rates, insurance rates, losses on bad debts, tariff legislation and all questions which directly or indirectly affect the wholesale grocery trade from time to time are duly considered and discussed by the Guild.

"There are no agreements as to prices, written or otherwise, between the manufacturers and the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and statements to the effect that the Guild or its officers arrange selling prices of sugar and other commodities, are made either from a lack of knowledge or a desire to convey a wrong impression to the public.

"The relations between the wholesale grocery trade and manufacturers have been grossly misrepresented and great injustice and injury to the trade is being wrought by such misrepresentations. The Wholesale Grocers' Guild and its members court the closest investigation. The Guild has not combined, directly or indirectly, with any manufacturers in Canada, either to restrict production or advance prices.

"Manufacturers realize that the most economical distribution of goods is through the medium of the wholesale trade, and it means ultimately a saving in cost to the consumer.

"It would be absurd for any one to imagine a manufacturer doing business through the wholesale jobber and expect that jobber to sell such goods without a profit. The manufacturer further realizes that in order to stimulate the sale of his goods he must regulate the selling price and terms of his product, so as to insure a profit to those handling same, either wholesale or retail.

"In the case of sugar, the variation in prices of refined goods always has had relation to the fluctuation in the price of raw sugars. The Canadian market is controlled entirely by the price of raw in foreign markets. The protection afforded the Canadian refiners is so small that any attempt on their part to secure more than a bare profit would find this country flooded with foreign refined sugars.

"Since the first of January this year the price of sugar has gradually declined with the falling of values of raw sugar, so that to-day sugars are one cent per pound less than they were in January last. Further evidence is presented by the fact that to-day different refiners in Canada are quoting different prices for standard granulated sugar.

"The equalized rates system of selling sugar is a system of equalizing freight rates to enable wholesalers to quote delivered prices to retailers at all railway and boat points in the Dominion. This arrangement has proved of great value and convenience to the retailers. These equalized rates are arrived at by combining the carload rate from the refineries to distributing points, and adding the local rate of freight from distributing points to places of destination.

"Wholesalers sell at refiners' prices, add the equalized rates to points of shipment and pay all freight charges. To arrive at the cost laid down at any point the equalized rate is added to the refiners' list price of the day.

"Refiners allow wholesalers a trade discount of 5 per cent., but allow them no cash discount. Wholesalers allow the retailers a cash discount of 1 per cent. or sell to retailers on 30 days' time, and in carload lots a further reduction of 5 or 10 cents per 100 lbs. is made. Refiners' terms to wholesalers are 14 days net cash. The profit to the wholesaler is therefore a fraction less than 4 per cent. The actual cost of selling sugar is substantially more than the gross profit made by the wholesalers.

"The wholesale grocery trade is animated by a desire to, as far as possible, promote the interests of the retailers, believing that the interests of both wholesaler and retailer are identical.

"Press reports regarding the Canada Grocers, Limited, and its relations to the Wholesale Grocers' Guild and manufacturers are very incorrect and misleading. No books of the Canada Grocers, Limited, or any other wholesale grocery firm have been seized by the Crown Attorney. There are no guild agreements or documents of an incriminating nature, there never have been.

"The Canada Grocers, Limited, are not members of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, but the different branches comprising the Canada Grocers, Limited, are individually members of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and stand with regard to it in precisely the same relation as any other wholesale grocer in Canada."

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 30th, 1905.)

ACTIVITY marks the wholesale grocery trade in most lines, there being a strong demand for Christmas supplies from all parts of the west. In some parts of the west, particularly in Saskatchewan, collections are slow, the reason being that there is a blockade of wheat and the farmers are not able to market their crop as early or as quickly as was hoped for. Since it has become evident that the elevators and railways at Midland and Depot Harbor are not in a position to handle the grain promptly, the railways in the west seem to have relaxed their efforts and there are now many complaints of car shortages. However, there is no doubt that the trade in the country is in a healthy condition and a better state of affairs may be looked for as soon as a considerable proportion of the crop is marketed.

Values are steady and there are few changes to record this week. The B. C. refinery has reduced the price of sugar in sacks (100 lbs.) 5c. below the price in barrels. This change applies in all Manitoba points.

Evaporated apples are now selling at 10c. per lb. in 50-lb. cases and at an advance of one half cent in the 25-lb. cases. The new dried apples are selling at 8 1-4c. to 8 1-2c. per lb.

Canned Goods—The canned goods market is absolutely without features of interest this week. Prices are steady at former quotations, which were:

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

TORONTO.

December 1, 1905.

DEMAND for flour during the week under review has been in every way satisfactory. The local trade have been fairly large buyers, and our previous quotations remain unchanged.

The export trade has also been manifesting a good deal of activity by way of inquiries, the difficulty still being the lack of facility for execution of orders. Dealers are still considerably in arrears with their deliveries and a good deal of friction is passing on the export market on that account. Prices are ruling firm on the European markets and there is every prospect of good trade being done.

The grain market continues in about the same condition as at our last report and there is no new feature of interest.

In breakfast foods trade is considered to be about normal as compared with previous seasons.

NOVEMBER CROP REPORT.

THE following statement regarding crop conditions on the 1st of November, based on reports of six hundred correspondents, has been issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Fall Wheat.

While a majority of correspondents describe Fall wheat as being of good quality, some speak of the grain as being rather shrunken and light in weight. All the cereals suffered more or less from a few days of exceedingly hot weather during the ripening stage, but most of the injury came from heavy rains during the latter part of harvesting. Rust in Fall wheat was complained of by some correspondents, but very little harm to the crop was reported from Hessian fly or other insects.

Spring Wheat.

This class of wheat is not so widely grown as the Fall varieties, but the quality of this season's crop is rated by correspondents as from medium to very good, and there are no complaints of the grain being under weight.

The New Fall Wheat.

The area of new Fall wheat is larger than that of last year, taking the province over, although a few counties may show a decrease. Sowing ranged from the last week of August to the first week of October, but the bulk of the crop was got in between the 8th and 19th of September. The ground was in good condition at seeding, and timely rains gave the crop a splendid start. The appearance of the young wheat when correspondents reported about the beginning of November, was most favorable, although fears were expressed by some that there had been almost too vigorous growth, giving the crop rather too much head. Scattering reports were made of the presence of the Hessian fly, white grub, and wire-worm, but not to a serious extent. Dawson's Golden Chaff is still the most popular Fall wheat sown, but some correspondents complain of this variety as having a tendency to smut.

Barley.

This crop may be considered as above the average in both yield and quality. Some fields were more or less injured by rain, but most of the grain was of good color. It was relatively the best cereal crop of the year.

Oats.

Oats, ripening later than either wheat or barley, suffered more than these from rain. There was consequently a good deal of lodging, and a considerable amount of rust was also reported. While the yield per acre is a large one, some of the grain is reported to be light in weight, although other correspondents speak of the quality as excellent. It must be admitted, however, that the general condition of the crop at the time of cutting was hardly up to the high expectations of the August returns.

Rye.

Correspondents had even less than usual to say about rye, but the crop where grown turned out fairly well.

Peas.

In both yield and quality peas are well up to the average. There was comparatively little injury from the weevil, or "bug," which for some years past has wrought havoc in the province. The crop suffered more from rain than any other cause.

OATMEAL INDUSTRY.

The Sarnia Cereal Co., which is largely a local company, has been spending several thousand dollars in fitting up the Hill Mill with the latest machinery for the manufacture of rolled oats, oatmeal, etc.

The new company have already commenced buying local oats at the highest market price, and in a few days will begin milling on a modern scale.

Orders sufficient to keep the mill busy for some months have been received from Ontario and the Maritime Provinces and England, and the Sarnia Cereal Co. will be one of Sarnia's busiest concerns.

The mill's equipment includes the most modern machinery which could be secured, and no detail has been omitted in the fitting up of the plant.

ALBERTA WHEAT FOR VANCOUVER.

The Alberta Pacific Elevator Co. have received an order from Vancouver for 30 carloads of Alberta red wheat for the new distillery, which is starting at the coast. This order, which was secured through the influence of the C.P.R., means that a good local market is about to be opened at our doors for Alberta Winter wheat.

DELIVERIES OF GRAIN.

The grain inspector's report for the months of September and October shows that the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern railways have hauled from the west to their terminals at Fort William and Port Arthur almost 20,000,000 bushels of grain.

This Fall the C.P.R. has handled here 12,485 cars or a total of nearly fourteen million bushels.

For the same period last year 5,843 cars or over six million bushels increase over last year.

The C.N.R. at Port Arthur have handled five thousand cars or over six million bushels this Fall.

A RECORD CARGO.

The steamer Sahara of Buffalo, Capt. Maltby, cleared from Port Arthur with the largest cargo of wheat ever loaded at the head of the lakes.

She had 310,000 bushels, and only for the shallow water at Limekilns would have taken 400,000.

This cargo amounts to 9,000 gross tons.

The grain is for Buffalo.

CANADIAN FLOUR FOR JAPAN.

The staff at the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. at Portage la Prairie is preparing a large shipment of flour for Japan.

This order, which comprises 2,000 bags, leaves Vancouver, Dec. 16, for Kobe, Japan.

Another order has also been received for a considerable quantity, which will leave the coast Jan. 15.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

The flour market remains firm on prices as quoted under. NOVEMBER CROP REPORT.

THE following statement regarding crop conditions on November 1, based on reports of six hundred correspondents, has been issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Corn.

Notwithstanding the set back the crop received at the time of planting, owing to the cold and wet weather then prevailing, mid-Summer conditions were so favorable that corn picked up in a wonderful way. While some poor fields are reported, most of the returns show about an average yield. Although the season for the maturing of corn was later than usual, but little injury from frost was sustained, and most of the corn put into silos was in excellent condition. A number of correspondents also speak of the plant as being well cobbed.

Beans.

Early sown beans did much better than those planted later. Reports regarding yields vary from "light" to "good." In most cases, however, the sample is said to be of good quality.

Buckwheat.

This crop is not a popular one with progressive farmers, but where grown it did well this season, both as regards yield and quality of the grain. The greatest injury to buckwheat came from rainstorms beating down the rather too rank growth.

Clover Seed.

In most instances the rank growth of clover, and the presence of the midge, prevented a large yield of seed, although a few correspondents speak enthusiastically of results. Pastured fields gave more clover seed than those cut for hay. Red clover did better than either alsike or lucerne, the latter having suffered badly from grasshoppers in places. The catch of new clover this season has been all that could be desired.

Potatoes.

Almost up to the time of digging, an immense yield of potatoes was promised, but rot set in and many correspondents report losses from this cause, in both pit and cellar, ranging from 10 to 75 per cent. Reports of freedom from rot have been the exceptions, and the most favorable accounts come from the newer northern districts. A number of correspondents used Bordeaux mixture for blight or rot with good results, but on low-lying lands even this remedy could not prevent loss. Potatoes had been stored as correspondents wrote.

Turnips.

This crop may be classed as a comparative failure. The aphis, popularly known as the turnip louse, appeared in greater force than for years, and hindered the development of the bulbs, which several correspondents describe as being small and rooty. The cabbage worm, or an insect closely resembling it, also attacked the plant in different parts of the province. Favorable reports regarding the crop were rare. A considerable quantity of turnips remained to be pulled in some districts as returns were made, and in two or three of the more northern counties an early snowstorm was making the work disagreeable.

Mangel Wurtzels.

These roots did much better than turnips, both as regards yield and quality. They are described as being from fair to extra good. In most cases they were safely housed as correspondents wrote.

Carrots.

Carrots as a field crop do not appear to be general, but have done well where grown.

Sugar Beets.

This class of roots is increasing in favor as food for live stock. Correspondents claim that they are of good quality this year, both for sugar-making purposes and for feeding.

Fruit.

Fruit trees generally are reported in good condition, although a small percentage have died during the Summer, supposedly from the effects of the severe Winter of 1903-'04. There was a surplus of apples, pears, plums, and peaches. There would have been more first-class hand-picked apples on the market but for the heavy wind storms of October, which shook down and bruised a considerable quantity of excellent fruit. While injury from insect pests and fungi was not so great as in former years, still too much harm was done to apples by the codling moth and the scab. Grapes yielded largely and ripened well, and the vines are described as being in good condition for entering the Winter. Small fruits generally were regarded as good crops.

U. S. APPLE CROP.

A report on the U. S. apple crop says it is the smallest in a number of years. The shortage is most in evidence in the big surplus States, New York, parts of New England, Michigan, and a number of sections in the southwest.

The crop of 1905 is estimated at 23,500,000 barrels, compared with 45,360,000 barrels one year ago, and compared with the small yield of 1901, approximating 27,000,000 barrels, and the largest crop on record, in 1896, when it approached 70,000,000 barrels.

In the great producing sections of the middle and central States, including New York and Michigan, the crop is placed by this authority somewhat less than 9,000,000 barrels, against 20,000,000 barrels one year ago, and figures approaching the last named for two and three years.

The far west, Colorado and the Rocky Mountain territory to the Pacific Coast, has harvested a generally good crop of apples.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

LOCAL trade has shown a fair degree of activity. The arrival of California fruit has opened up a distinct revival of interest.

The North California districts are marketing their fruit first, which is coming to hand in excellent condition, for early oranges.

Reports to hand denote that the first car of South California Redlands left for Canada on the 23rd inst. and is expected to arrive shortly.

We have added to our list this week California oranges at $3.75 to $4 ; Mexicans, $2.25 to $2.40.

Pineapples are also arriving and commanding a degree of interest at $5 to $5.50.

Reports from original points refer to cranberries as being a very short crop. They are estimated to scarcely reach 50 per cent. of last season's. Prices are consequently ruling firm with a distinctly upward tendency.

Domestic apples are firming in price to the extent of 50 cents per barrel on all good fruit.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Trade in green fruit is very quiet. There is little or no change to report in the way of prices, which are about as last week.

There is some little demand for Jamaica oranges and these seem to meet with good favor and in the opinion of many dealers, both wholesale and retail, are considered to be even better eating fruit than navels or Floridas.

California navels will not be here until about the middle of the month.

Cranberries are steady with stocks light and prices unchanged.

New Grenoble walnuts are now in the hands of fruit dealers and selling at prices ranging from 13c to 14c. The demand for apples has fallen off somewhat and prices are a shade easy.

We quote :

FRESH AND CURED FISH

PROGRESS OF FISH CULTURE.

ALEXANDER MOWAT, fishery expert, who has been superintending the work of collecting the eggs from the salmon at the Carleton pond, New Brunswick, has returned to his home in Campbellton. The operations at the Carleton pond have been much more successful than was at one time anticipated. Between six and seven millions of ova have been collected and distributed among the various hatcheries in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Quebec. There have been several new hatcheries opened in the Dominion during the past year, and there are now about twenty-seven in operation in the Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific. All the hatcheries are well filled with the various kinds of eggs and fishes. Fish culture as now conducted under the superintendence of F. H. Cunningham, of Ottawa, is in a most healthy condition. Alex. Finlayson, inspector of hatcheries, from Charlottetown, is on a tour of inspection and will visit all the hatcheries in the province.

RE-APPEARANCE OF HERRING.

Herrings have made their appearance at Hermitage Bay, Sydney, again and during last week some of the residents made good hauls. The fish are very large, the oldest inhabitant saying they equal in size those caught at Ramea sixty and seventy years ago. In the days that are past the industry was prosecuted extensively in that neighborhood, by people from all parts of the island, when the herrings were "boiled down" for the oil. Of recent years none have been taken, but the present school it is hoped is the forerunner of a larger quantity, which will be a boon to the poorer classes. These herrings excel those caught at Bay of Islands.

SALMON ON THE NOOKSACK.

John Crawford, a deputy sent out by Fish Commissioner Kershaw, has completed an investigation upon which it is announced that Fraser River sockeye salmon are spawning in some of the tributaries of the Nooksack River. This is regarded as of great importance, as lending encouragement to the belief that in the course of a few years the propagation of sockeyes on this stream may be developed to such an extent as to be of great value to the fishing industry on the Sound. The fish commissioner is now looking after the hatching of 300,000 sockeye salmon eggs from the Fraser River in the Nooksack.

TO SUPERVISE B. C. FISHING.

The British Columbia canners have presented a memorial to the Fisheries Commission. They ask for the appointment of a board of fishery commissioners to handle all affairs which the distance from Ottawa now makes difficult; for the steady operation of snagboats on the Skeena and Naas; better patrol of streams by police; the construction of a hatchery on the Skeena; the prevention of fishing in the Fraser and Sound in 1906 and 1908; the granting of trap licenses to non-speculators; the adoption of sixty mesh nets; and the prevention of poaching by Americans.

FISHING AT P. E. ISLAND.

The fishing season in Prince Edward Island is now drawing to a close, with the exception of the smelt and eel fishing which is just beginning. One of the features of the season was the high price for codfish and hake, there being an advance of from 60 to 100 per cent. in the past few years. Though the total catch of cod will be below the average, the enhanced price will make up for the shortage in the catch. The value of the lobster output will be about equal to an average year. In oyster fishing the size regulation was strictly enforced this year, causing a lessening of the quantity exported, but the prices have never been higher. The change in the law whereby the opening of the season was changed till later in the Fall has operated with advantage to the industry, preventing the dropping in prices. The catch of mackerel was very small during the year. Smelts are now being taken with hooks and gill nets; drag nets cannot legally be used until later in the season.

THE OYSTER INDUSTRY.

Oyster dealers in Prince Edward Island favor stricter Government protection for the oyster industry. At the end of the season's catching, fishermen say that the quantities taken out were not more than a quarter of a barrel a man, compared with three or four barrels in other years. The Government already prohibits the catching of oysters under three inches. They report to the Government that total prohibition for a few years is the only thing that will revive the industry.

CLEANING FISH BY MACHINERY.

In Seattle is a fish cannery where this season an average of 30,000 fish have been canned a day. Fish canned there are cleaned by a machine which is a highly ingenious piece of mechanism. It scales and cleans the fish and also cuts off the heads and fins and washes the body ready for the cans. From that machine they slide down a chute, where they are caught by another cleverly-arranged mechanism that cuts them into pieces that just fit the cans. Another machine puts the pieces in the cans, and by means of an endless chain they are passed along to where the cans are automatically covered and soldered. From the time the fish is put in the cleaning machine it is never touched by the hand of any man. The use of machines insures perfect cleanliness.

FISHERIES PROTECTION.

At a conference by the State Fish Commissioners of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the State Fish Commissioners have agreed to adoption of the laws to conform with the Detroit conference of March, 1904, which provides for a close of the commercial fish-taking season in Lake Erie from November 15 to March 15, provides for a license on all nets and boats in the lakes and requires the fishing boats to be registered. It was reported that Ohio and Canada will agree to the terms.

ABUNDANCE OF SALMON EGGS.

A British Columbia contemporary in reply to allegations made about the salmon traps of Vancouver Island to the effect that they prevent salmon spawn being deposited in fresh water, states that there has never been a year in the history of the hatcheries when a greater number of salmon eggs were obtained for the hatcheries than this year, which is the first in which the above mentioned traps have been operated. It also states that salmon taken in traps are all utilized, whilst sometimes hundreds of thousands of those taken in the nets are thrown away. The traps are economical in respect to the taking of the fish, and can be regulated as well as seines.

PROGRESS OF WHALE FISHING.

Thirty Newfoundland fishermen passed through Moncton recently on their way home from Seven Islands, where they have been engaged in whale fishing for a Montreal firm. Seven Islands is one hundred and fifty miles north of Rimouski and has been used as fishing grounds for some time past.

Several Montreal business men organized last Spring for the purpose of pursuing the industry at the above place and engaged this party of Newfoundlanders who use the explosive point harpoon instead of the ordinary instrument. They have been at work for the last three months, successfully, and report some of the whales containing as high as 200 barrels of oil each. Their contract terminating with the company they have returned to their homes.

LOBSTER FISHERIES.

The lobster season in most of the fishing districts of the Maritime Provinces ended on Monday, 10th July. Reports from all districts are not available, but along the north shore of Nova Scotia lobsters were very plentiful and most of the packers had secured the full output of their factories long before the legal period had elapsed.

It is expected that the catch in all the Gulf factories will be the largest in recent years. In P.E.I. the catch this season will be about an average one. This season, owing to bad weather, the fishermen were late in starting.

The rather unusual fact of lobsters starting to shed their shells in July instead of in June as in previous years operated to the advantage of the fishermen.

The price this season is about one dollar a case less than in 1904. The total catch is estimated at about 50,000, valued at $650,000.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

BREAD-MAKING BY CONTINUOUS PROCESS.

ACCORDING to the London (England) Daily Mail, bread at six cents per loaf, instead of about 10 cents, it is claimed, will be the probable result of an invention in the form of a bread-making machine now on trial in London.

London alone consumes 6,000,000 pounds of bread a day, so that the invention may effect a daily saving of $60,831.25, or over $21,899,250 per annum, to the people of London alone.

Simply stated, the invention is a series of ingenious machines which convert wheat into loaves ready for delivery without human aid, and at a rate that puts other means of production out of the field.

It is not only a labor and time-saving invention—it might also be called a machine-saving machine, so greatly does it simplify the process of bread-making.

For instance, at present the miller grinds his wheat perhaps as many as 15 times to obtain the best flour. By the new method the wheat is ground only once. This grinding gives three products—flour, middlings and bran.

The foremost is conducted to the bin, the bran is mechanically carried and automatically weighed into sacks, while the middlings pass into tepid water, by which all the floury part is washed out.

This water, impregnated with nutritive material, flows into the kneading pan, in which the dough is automatically produced. The dough is left to rise for one hour and a half or two hours, is then shaped into loaves, and forty minutes later an electric carrier delivers the hot bread to the throbbing motor cars that wait impatiently to carry it through London.

The bakery where these wonders are worked is in Upper Thames street, E.C., and is owned by Mr. Apostoloff. Two years ago his takings amounted to 83 loaves per week. To-day his new methods enable him to turn out 11,000 half-quartern loaves and 8,000 fancy Vienna bread rolls from his factory every day. And this is only the beginning.

He is now building what will be the largest bread factory in London. It is to have 400 ovens, and it is calculated that it will be capable of producing 300,000 pounds of bread a day.

An additional economical result claimed for the process is that perfectly sweet white bread is produced from English wheat alone. It is a well-known fact that bakers will not venture to make bread from English wheat flour unless mixed with the best foreign flour. This change of method alone secures a saving for the Apostoloff system of from 97 cents to $1.46 on each sack of flour.

To this increase in milling products—constituting the main source of commercial profit—must be added the profit at present made by the middlemen, as well as the cost of transport, with its consequent waste in handling, and both profits are secured by the milling bakery.

POSSIBILITIES OF THE CONFECTIONERY TRADE.

NO better paying line exists in the country than confectionery to the person who takes it up with a determination to pay attention to all the details and to make it a success from the start. Some even go so far as to call it a hundred cents on the dollar proposition, that is for the man who has made his preparations right and calculates on putting all his spare energy into it. The United States, our nearest neighbor, consumes more candy than England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium and Russia all put together, and we would venture to say that Canada is not far behind in proportion to her population.

Some people seem to labor under the delusion that anyone can get along in the candy business, but this is far from being the case, as the most superficial observation will show. It takes a man of ideas to go into the candy business and make a real success.

No doubt a great many are deceived by the fact that it is possible to keep an untidy, disreputable looking little candy shop and make some sort of living at it. Somehow or other its proprietor manages to hang on to the tail end of the business and to eke out a precarious existence by catering to juvenile and low trade, but how many would call such a business a success?

The man who makes a real success is the one who puts into it knowledge, foresight, insight, and hustle, good live American or Canadian hustle.

DEATH OF MR. E. W. RITCHIE, OF DUNDALK.

DUNDALK and vicinity were terribly shocked and genuinely saddened on Monday morning last when the word passed around, as it did very quickly, that Mr. E. W. Ritchie, the Dundalk member of the firm of Ritchie Bros., had died during the night.

On Tuesday of last week he and his sister, Miss Gertie Ritchie, were both attacked by quinsy. They had both suffered similarly before, and they immediately put themselves under the doctor's care.

On Sunday evening at twelve o'clock the patient took a turn for the worse, and the attendants sent for the physician, Dr. McWilliam. There was nothing to be done, however, and after remaining for awhile the doctor returned home. Shortly after peculiar symptoms again developed which grew so alarming that it was decided to summon the physician again. Before, however, the physicians reached his bedside, though only a few minutes elapsed, he passed away painlessly and quietly, though up to the last hour he had suffered intensely.

Deceased had just reached his 28th birthday. He was born in Dundalk, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Ritchie, then residing in the roughcast house still standing on the corner of Owen Sound and Albert streets. The family shortly after moved to Orangeville and have resided there since. Deceased received his education in the schools of that town and during those years was known by old and young as a model of uprightness. On leaving home he took a position with Mr. M. K. Richardson, of Flesherton, who recognized his sterling qualities in business and socially and appreciated him accordingly. The news was received at the home of Mr. Richardson, and many other homes in Flesherton, with profound sorrow and regret. On the 29th of April, 1903, he opened the Dundalk branch of the business in the Morgan block. The following year the stock was moved to the present stand, succeeding R. H. Benson & Co., who left town. Since the opening day the business increased and has prospered, owing entirely to the ability, honesty and integrity of the deceased. Thus the call came with terrific suddenness, and a young man in the midst of bodily vigor, and the ambitions and bright prospects of a life being lived according to the divine law, relinquishes his hold on all that we who are left consider worth having and striving for.

Deceased was a member of the Methodist church and his death creates a vacancy in the quarterly board, in the choir and in the league. The quarterly board held a special session and passed a resolution of sympathy to the bereaved relatives. The members of the church will remember that at the quarterly service, so recently held, his testimony was

The burial took place at Orangeville on Wednesday at 2.30 p.m. in Forest Lawn cemetery, where the remains were tenderly and lovingly laid to rest beside those of a sister who pre-deceased him some years ago. An appropriate service was held at the house, conducted by the family pastor, Rev. Locke, of Orangeville, and Rev. Wellwood. The funeral cortege was large and included a number from Dundalk.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful and were emblematic of the life just closed.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

TOBACCO CROP GOOD.

AN excellent tobacco crop is reported from Amherstberg, Ontario, one not equalled in quality and quantity since 1890. Mr. Gregory, a North Carolina tobacco expert of the Empire Tobacco Co., put the possible yield for this year at 12,000,000 pounds. He says the kind grown here, called the burley, is the same as the Kentucky burley. Mr. Gregory says:

"The cost of raising and marketing an acre of tobacco in North Carolina is $41.25; average yield is 800 pounds; price realized, 8 cents per pound, or $64 per acre.

"The cost of production of an acre in Essex county, Ontario, Canada, is computed by competent authorities to be $45; average yield is 1,125 pounds; price averaged for past seven years, 9 cents, or $101.25 per acre."

Thus it appears that the profit from one acre in North Carolina is $22.75, and the same here is twice as much, or $46.25. While, as stated, 1,125 pounds is the average yield per acre, 1,300 to 1,500 pounds is very common, and as high as 2,250 pounds have been taken from a single acre. It has become one of the staple crops in this district.

According to the statistical yearbook of Canada for the year ending June 30, 1904, there were imported into Canada for that year, 14,248,303, of which 13,861,780 pounds was from the United States.

CANADIAN LEAF CIGARS.

RETURNS show that the number of cigars made from Canadian leaf was 3,713,150 in 1902, 2,881,360 in 1903, and 2,200,240 in 1904, a decrease in two years of 1,512,910. The manufacture of foreign leaf cigars increased from 142,084,171 in 1902, to 170,934,150 in 1904, or 28,849,979 in two years.

The growers are asking an increase of 100 per cent. in the customs duty and a uniform excise stamp for cigars. At present separate excise stamps distinguish Canadian-leaf cigars from imported-leaf cigars.

Canadian growers claim there is an unreasonable prejudice against the home product and that if it were not identified by the excise stamp, smokers would make no distinction between the domestic and imported article.

The manufacturers argue that they must be governed by the popular taste, and that if they were taxed into the use of Canadian tobacco exclusively, the demand for imported cigars would be greatly stimulated and they would lose a large share of the home market.

If the tariff on raw leaf is raised, they ask a proportionate decrease in the excise duty. They say they are willing to encourage the growing of Canadian tobacco, but the growers must produce a quality satisfactory to the smokers of the country.

It is believed that superior grades can be grown in Canada, and the experiments inaugurated by the Government are being carried on in a spirit of confidence which it is to be hoped will be justified by results.

JAPAN'S TOBACCO TRADE.

THE year 1904 was the most eventful in the history of the tobacco trade in Japan. The outbreak of hostilities with Russia in the early part of February enabled the Government to carry out their long-contemplated scheme of a cigarette manufacturing monopoly, with a minimum of opposition or discussion, and on July 1 last all existing manufactories were taken over or purchased (and closed) by the Government.

The right to manufacture for export still remains, but inasmuch as it is now illegal to possess the necessary machinery, that right seems somewhat of an anomaly. From the time the bill was passed until July 1 all the then existing factories were worked to their fullest capacity, consequently the export does not show a falling-off. The figures are £242,794 for 1902, as against £210,996 for 1903, the Japanese army and navy accounting now in a large measure for exports to Corean and Chinese ports.

Simultaneously with the passing of the manufacturing monopoly, the duty on imported manufactured tobacco was raised from 150 to 250 per cent. ad valorem, and imports prohibited. Some late consignments have been purchased from the importers at invoice cost, and they may re-purchase their goods from the Government at about three times that cost, which for cigars works out at heavier duty than probably up to the present time any Chancellor of the Exchequer ever dreamed of imposing on any article of daily consumption.

Notwithstanding several inquiries from the United Kingdom in April and May last, the total export of leaf tobacco from this port, including Osaka, was less than 150 bales. This is accounted for by two years' short crop in succession, and the disinclination of the Government to sell, in view of the cut-tobacco monopoly, which came into force on April 1. On that date the Government acquired full control of the tobacco industry in the Empire of Japan.—British Consul at Kobe.

GOVERNMENT REPORT.

Tobacco—Reports regarding the tobacco crop are, on the whole, most favorable. The leaf is described as being well matured, and of extra good quality.

CULTIVATION OF TOBACCO.

The Government will endeavor to retain Mr. Felix Harlau, the French tobacco expert, permanently in Canada for the purpose of establishing experimental stations in this country for testing culture of tobacco. Mr. Harlau has reported that Canada might become a good tobacco producing country.

BONNIE SCOTS HERRING LASSIES

IN view of the expected advent of the specially imported bonnie Scots herring lassies, who are to help British Columbia in developing its herring industry, the following from the London Morning Leader is of interest:

The Caller Herrin' lassies have come to England fra' the far North. They have arrived at Yarmouth in the wake of the great herring shoal—a shoal numbering several hundreds of millions of festive fish which, according to the mysterious workings of Nature, begin their annual holidays off the Orkneys in early Spring, swim round the Scottish coast, and visit our northern and eastern watering places with such regularity that the horny-handed gentleman who spends his days in trawlers can tell to the minute when Mr. Herring is parading off Grimsby or calling at Scarborough—to be caught and eaten.

Finest Lassies in the World.

For eight months in the year this obliging fish gives work and bed and board to 10,000 of these "Caller Herrin'" girls. To-day half of them are in Yarmouth, and they are still arriving. Physically, they are without doubt the finest lassies in the world. It is a moving picture to see them flocking to the fish flaying after breakfast of a morning. The old town rumbles and shakes with them, and most are booted to the knee with mighty Wellingtons an inch thick in the sole, and so heavy that they drag and rasp along the echoing pavements But these maids of the sea and the wind and the "parritch" are not here for show. Honest work is their business and homespun their dress. They don't know—most of them, that is to say—what it is to wear a hat or bonnet, or such like kickshaw. They have pretty hair, all shades of red and auburn and brown but a Paisley shawl fastened tight under the chin hides all such worldliness. Their arms are naked to the winds—red and rough. Their fingers are nearly all in bandages, for their trade is with the knife, and the sharp blade is forever slipping across the wame of a wriggling herring, and bringing disaster and gore. But their faces are bonnie and bright—shining with health and their bodies are aglow with vigor.

A Glorious Clan.

It is clear that they come of a sound race—a race apart. They are Hielanders and Lowlanders but they are of the same fisher family— sea-maidens of many generations. They have raced the herring boats to Yarmouth, coming from the north in long and roaring express trains. But watch them on the quay, waiting for the boats to come in; and you will find that the bronzed men on the Peterhead and Banff and Aberdeen boats are their cousins and their brothers, and their lovers. These wanderers of the sea are all of one great family, after all—more clannish than Israelites.

No matter from what part of Scotland they come, their clannishness is wonderfully marked. You will find that along the Scottish coast there are two towns of the name of one—the "sea town" and the town proper. It is from the sea towns that these girls come; and they will tell you that the sea town is all-in-all, and the other simply a collection of houses not to be reckoned with. Here is "clan" once more, and it is marked clearer when you reach the village, and find that the girls whose home is in far-away Shetland, keep to the clan in Yarmouth, work in "crews" together, lodge together, and parade King street of an evening together.

And when at last it comes to the more important business of sweethearting and marrying, the link of clan is stouter still. The Lawries and the Cuthberts were marrying in 1830. They are marrying still, and cousins shoal like herrings.

A Hard, Wild Life.

The work of these lassies is hard and exacting and cold. It begins in May off the rugged corners of Stornaway and the Orkneys. Then comes Shetland, where the land is as inhospitable as the sea. To this barren coast the Scotch fisher girls take all their belongings, from clothes to cups and saucers and spoons. It is a wild life here and it gradually eases off into more of humanity as the digger and the Goodwins crawl nearer across the waste of waters.

The Sea Girl's Mother.

But there is one friend who is always with these hardy damsels. She is Miss Davidson, a deaconness of the Scottish church, and the Lady Bountiful of the fleet. This is the seventeenth season Miss Davidson has been mothering these children of the sea. In Yarmouth, behind the bustling fish wharf, she manages a homely little place known as "The Rest House of the Scottish Fisher Folk." Here is a hall and restaurant, and a big cosy room where the girls can get all manner of creature comforts for the smallest of small sums. Breakfast, dinner and tea are obtainable, and there is a regular sort of out-patients' hospital here as well. Sprains and cuts and suppurating sores are no rarity in the fisher-girl's business: and Miss Davidson and the three charming lassies who help her are kept busy most of the day with liniment and lint and embrocation.

I should advise every business man who wants a good thing and knows how to appreciate one when it is to be had, to send a year's subscription of two dollars to the publishers at Toronto. This may look like an advertisement. It is at least wholly gratuitous and unsolicited, being the result of one of the most pleasant and instructive evenings spent by my fireside. with The Business Magazine of October, 1905, as my companion. PROGRESSIVE RETAILING

ON BUYING A BUSINESS.

NEARLY if not quite 50 per cent. of the men who buy the small retail stores offered for sale are men who have worked at some trade or other occupation and who have saved enough out of their wages to start them in business.

The kinds of business that are sold to inexperienced business men are mainly retail stores, and the amount of capital invested by each man runs from $200 or $300 for the small store to $3,000 or $4,000 for the larger establishments, but $1,000 is an average for investments of this class of buyers.

For $600 can be obtained sometimes a well stocked store in a good location, and the man who has this amount of money will not lack for a variety in the opportunities offered to him for investment. In fact, the choice is so great that if he has not already decided upon the particular line he wishes to enter he will probably be puzzled to make a selection. Even if he has fixed upon one kind of business that he wishes to buy, he will find the variety of locations, stocks and clientele open for his selection is of so many kinds that it will take him some time to make his decision.

If he is going to buy a store of any kind, it is the consensus of opinion among the business brokers that the best place for him is not, as might be supposed, in an old-established place, but in a new neighborhood.

For the man who first enters a new locality and sets up a store with a clean, bright stock of goods, there is a better chance for success than for him who goes into an old location where there is keener competition. In the new location he has the chance to get new trade—trade that he obtains through the merits of his goods and the treatment that he gives to his customers, and this is the best custom obtainable.

In buying a store he should first of all look to the location. A stock that is old and unattractive can be renewed and renovated, but poor location can only be remedied by moving, and this entails additional expense and loss of time in getting started, and to the man who is going to begin to do business on limited capital and experience it is extremely essential that he begin to get trade as soon as possible.

In determining the choice of a location he should thoroughly inspect the neighborhood and ascertain as far as possible the kind of people that reside in it, for the retail store, outside of the downtown district, is almost entirely dependent upon the trade of the neighborhood.

The class of stores that are most frequently offered for sale are the small cigar and confectionery stores that can be bought for from $200 to $500. One man who invested $500 a year ago in a store of this kind is now doing a business that yields him a profit of $12 a day. He was fortunate in securing a good location, for the stock the store contained when he took charge of it was not worth at wholesale more than $100.

After this kind of business the grocery stores are the ones to most frequently change hands. This is a business that it is hard for the beginner to make a success at, the chances for loss in the selling of groceries by an inexperienced man being great. Still, many men who enter this line as proprietors make money at it.

It is seldom that a fair-sized grocery can be bought for less than $600, and a well established business will cost up into the thousands. There is probably no kind of store wherein there is so much chance for a man's ability to win trade as in this line, but it is also one wherein business can be easily lost. To be a successful groceryman it is just as necessary for a man to have a knowledge of his business as it is for a butcher, or any other business man, and it is up to the man buying such a store to set himself to quickly master every detail.

ON BRANCHING OUT.

IT is notorious that departmental stores make more profit in proportion to investment than one-line merchants.

The reason is simple, in spite of the fact that many very good merchants fail to see it, or at least to make application to their own business.

The department store has many lines under one roof, which multiply sales faster than expense.

And some one or more of its lines are always in season, hence it has no dull seasons.

These two facts explain all there is of "mystery" about the profits shown by retail department stores.

You have a certain fixed expense which cannot be cut under a certain minimum, no matter how low sales sink. This includes rent, heat, light, advertising, a certain number of salaries, etc.

In your store, could you not, for example, do a little more business with no increase in expense, or a third more with only a moderate increase? If so, nearly all the gross profit on that excess business would be net profit.

In your store, again, does not much of the profit of busy December trickle away in the expense of dull January and February? And do you not spend in July and August much of the profit of the busy Spring?

Imagine how your profits would jump if every week and day in the year you had some line in which the people were interested, whose sales would make good the temporary shortcomings of other lines.

Not every store can be a department store, but the retailer who does not "branch out" to the limit of his ability is missing his best chance for profit.

Ask fifty one-line merchants why they do not branch out, and forty-odd of them will probably tell you they have no capital and no room. Yet most of those forty-odd could find both capital and the room, simply by turning a portion of their over-stocks into cash, and then ordering a thirty days' supply of an article instead of a three months' supply.

Incidentally, this weeding out of the over-stocks would infuse health into every part of the business.

ENGLISH TRADESMEN AWAKE.

Several phases of social revolution are noticeable in England. The latest is the revolt of the tradesmen, or the wealthy middle class, against the demands of the nobility for extended credit.

The recent introduction of American methods by several Oxford and Bond street dealers has shown, by a contrast in prices, the evils of the arbitrary credit methods. The result is that an anti-credit league is forming, and the Countesses and Duchesses who have been accustomed to order what they pleased and pay when they got ready are getting the cold shoulder in the largest shops of the British metropolis.

In recent bankruptcy proceedings the failure was shown to be due wholly to abuse of the credit system which the proprietors had not been able to check. Some accounts were 14 years overdue, but, strangely, were regarded as "good." Lately the London tradesmen have awakened to the fact that they are practically financing the establishments of many of the richest families among the nobility. They are borrowing money to carry on business, while their noble debtors are receiving interest upon money in bank that really belongs to the shopkeepers.

IT PAYS TO ACCOMMODATE.

There is nothing people appreciate more than being served by those who really enjoy accommodating them. What a comfort, at a strange hotel especially, to be served by those who seem anxious to please us, who seem to take real pleasure in making us feel at home and comfortable! There is no one quality which will help youth along more rapidly than the cultivation of this desire to please, to accommodate. It appeals to everybody; it creates a good impression.

What a pleasure and a comfort, when traveling, to be served by pleasant, good-natured people who try to please us! A surly, impudent Pullman porter often destroys the pleasure of a whole journey on a train. An impudent clerk in a hotel office can make everybody in the house uncomfortable, and such service is dear, even if it could be had for nothing.

It is noticeable that a boy who always tries to help wherever he can, and to make everybody comfortable, who is accommodating in everything; is very popular, and other things being equal, most likely to be promoted.

GOOD ADVERTISING

A department devoted to the improvement of Retail Advertising. The editor of this department will be pleased to answer questions on advertising and review any advertisements submitted to him.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

A FEW weeks ago when discussing some of the factors bearing on retailers' publicity I stated that I would at another time offer some suggestions on newspaper advertising proper.

In dealing herein with this phase of the case it will be assumed that cognizance has been taken of the "conditions" previously touched upon and that it is after a consideration of those conditions that advertising is deemed essential.

One of the first steps in newspaper advertising is to select the medium or mediums. If there is more than one paper in your town it will, perhaps, be well to advertise in them all, periodically. There should be no difficulty in telling which of the papers is the best medium for certain classes of business. Make an announcement in one paper alone. Then have the same announcement inserted in one of the other papers, and so on. Note the results in each case.

Of course, as I have said before, too much importance should not be attached to the boasted superiority of one paper's circulation as compared with other papers. But it is possible for one of the papers in your town to reach a greater number of the rural community than its contemporaries. That fact is valuable knowledge for you when advertising.

* * *

Never allow your selection of a medium, however, to be influenced by politics, friendships, etc. The money you spend on advertising is a concession to nobody. It is a plain commercial transaction—a dollar-for-dollar deal.

* * *

Selecting the goods to advertise should give you the most concern. Besides the necessity for timeliness and attractiveness, you should see that there is no one-sidedness—groceries left unadvertised for want of system.

The best system I know of is to have an advertising book, drawn up in memo style, into which entries should be made by yourself and the clerks. If, say, on a Monday you considered it would be appropriate to run a canned goods advertisement on the following Wednesday you would write a note to this effect in the book under the heading Wednesday, covering a certain date. The points about the goods would likewise be written down.

If one of the clerks thought that on the same Wednesday it would be well to announce the arrival of some choice creamery butter he would note that fact with particulars also. When the advertisement was to be written there would be a number of lines to select from, all timely.

The advertising book would also be of service in that it could be perused occasionally and knowledge of the previous month's or year's advertising gleaned from its pages. As a depository of information it would be indispensable, the details of a certain line of groceries that had been advertised being, in part at least, useful when that line of groceries was to be advertised again.

Another helpful adjunct to the advertising book would be to clip your advertisements and file them, in the order of their appearance, with the date marked on each. When you were extra busy it would be possible to take an ad off the file, used a year previous, make a few changes and bring it into service again.

There can be no doubt but that the adoption of some such methods would be of material assistance in preparing advertisements. At first you would feel the system's monopoly of time, afterwards its benefits.

* * *

The writing of the advertisements themselves should not prove to be an onerous task. Having decided on what to advertise, you secure the details from the advertising book and begin to shape them to suit the space.

Ink should always be used, and white paper, preferably hard finish. This is the connecting link of safety to the compositor. The practice of some merchants of writing on all kinds and colors of paper, with lead pencil, should always be shunned.

While you hear a good deal about type and the essentialness of typographical knowledge for advertisement writing, this need cause you no alarm. An acquaintanceship with the printing art will stand you in good stead and always be of some service. But learn as you go along—from the school of experience. Notice how the compositor dresses your advertisement up. Notice the type used in your competitor's headings. If you like it better than your own cut it out and paste it on your copy.

In your advertisements you are going to appeal to people of every-day language, so do not worry over your inability to wield a facile pen. You are just going to "talk shop" on paper. That you can do without much assistance.

* * *

As regards cuts, if you have suitable ones use them, but do not get into the practice of inserting cheap-looking stock cuts. The cut idea is overdone, and with many advertisers is nothing but a space consumer.

* * *

An attractive heading sets off an advertisement, but never sacrifice space for too elaborate a heading. Occasionally advertisements appear in Canadian newspapers in which the headings represent about one-half the advertisements. While this may be catchy it is certainly costly. Undoubtedly instances of the kind are generally due to insufficient details having to be "spread." For this reason I would recommend your not taking too large a space at first.

Writing the sentences clearly and preserving coherency between the various paragraphs is very important in ad writing. I meet with a number of retail advertisements that are worded ambiguously, due mostly to hurried preparation and an inadequate grasp of the essential features to be announced. Introducing advertisements by irrelevant phrases, as evinced in much of the medicine advertising has little to commend it.

* * *

A pitfall to avoid is that of filling up the space with generalities or facts already known, such as "Tea is essential to every household," "Sugar is in great demand," etc. Statements of this nature advertise any grocer's teas and any grocer's sugar. You are advertising your own goods alone. Remember, too, that you are not trying like a mail order house to build up the sales of an article. You are just selling every-day commodities in competition with scores of others. These commodities were used long before your time and the chances are they will be used long after.

Culling the unnecessaries, your advertisements should finally appear as statements of what you have for sale, supported with reasons why your goods should be purchased. There may be various ways of stating these two things but they are the nucleus of all retail advertisements written from correct models.

So it will be seen that while retail advertising demands some study it is within the range of any merchant or clerk who will go about the work methodically and learn by doing. It will be seen that this phase of publicity is more a matter of adaptability than ability, more a matter of trained common sense than genius.

At some other date I shall design three or four ads and have them appear in this department with "Reasons Why."

A. A. B.

The merchant who has the reputation of placing the biggest orders with the traveling men is not always the one who is making the most money. His competitor who buys carefully and does not overestimate his requirements, preferring to buy frequently, usually has his assets in better condition, and that is what the credit man looks at when estimating the value of a merchant as a credit risk.

Where Wilson Superiority Comes In

Most vinegars look alike. Most vinegars taste alike. But no other vinegar tastes just like because no other vinegar is made by as good a process. Fruit vinegar is always superior to commercial acid vinegar, but fruit vinegar may be made in the wrong way, or a poor grade of apples may be used.

The Wilson Process stands for correct methods and select fruit. That is why Golden Russet Vinegar has out-distanced all competitors in the Quality Race.

No Dust Or Cobwebs Here!

Did you find dirty, dusty articles of trade up on the top shelf when you took account of stock a few weeks ago? Have you tried to sell them for less than cost as a "job lot"? It's ten to one that none of them were standard goods. You'll find no dust or cobwebs on "standard goods"—are you stocked with the three following well-known lines? They are Standards!

"Thistle" Brand

Canned Haddies
Kippered Herring
Herring and Tomato

Selected with the greatest care and cleaned, cured and packed under the personal direction of Captain Austin, whose whole life has been devoted to this one particular business. There are no secrets in the factory of the "Thistle" Canning Co., at Little River, N.S.—everything is "above board" and visitors are always welcome to inspect the works, which are the most perfectly equipped and the CLEANEST OF THE KIND on the Atlantic Coast.

Since, "seeing is believing," if every grocer who sells Canned Fish could compare by personal observation the manner of selection, the cleaning, the curing and the packing of the "Thistle" Brand with any other brand he would realize fully what it means to sell "standard goods" that are above competition. The invitation is cheerfully extended to every grocer to visit and inspect the Thistle Canning Co.'s Factory and to judge for himself.

Quaker Canned Goods

We have finished packing Corn and Tomatoes for this year. Taking the season altogether it has been the most favorable for quality we have ever experienced, the weather being about perfect all through the season for maturing vegetables in splendid condition. This applies to all lines, commencing with Peas and running right along into Beans, Corn and Tomatoes. With the fine quality of canned goods this season and the moderate prices there should be an enormous increase in the sales over previous years. While the pack has been large it does not exceed in our estimation the pack of two years ago in any line. Of course, we cannot speak for the whole country, but we know this applies to our pack. Judging from this we believe every case of Corn, Tomatoes, Peas and Beans packed will go into consumption before new goods come on the market next year. The fine quality of the goods alone this year over previous years should make an enormous increase in consumption, to say nothing of the much lower price the consumer can buy goods compared to the last two years. We packed thirteen thousand cases of Sugar and Cream Corn. This is a new line for us and is as fine in quality as the name denotes. We expect with this 13,000 cases sprinkled between the two oceans to lay the foundation for a trade in this line that will take the entire capacity of one of our factories next year to cater to.

THE PACKERS OF QUAKER CANNED GOODS

Have you ordered your season's supply of

CANNED FRUITS?

If you haven't, don't you think you should ?

You know that all fruits are scarce this season.

The bumper crops in the West, together with the immense railway and other building operations, mean prosperity.

Consumers this season will not be content to eat dried fruit. They will want the best, i.e., Canned Fruit, packed by

WE have at present unsold a few thousand cases of canned CORN, PEAS, TOMATOES, BALDWIN APPLES, RED RASPBERRIES, etc., and owing to the lack of storage we wish to move some of the stock. We have everything up to date for the manufacture of canned goods. No expense has been spared to produce the best goods possible. Now, at the low prices no one can help making money on canned goods. It is easy to guess who will make the money. It is a long time before next pack. Now, Mr. Grocer, specify AUTUMN LEAF BRAND CORN and TOMATOES, and if your jobber does not carry them write us or order direct. We guarantee to suit you as to QUALITY and Price. We are out to sell now. Do not let this lot of AUTUMN LEAF CANNED GOODS GO BY—IT MEANS SOMETHING TO YOU. We are out for the Trade and have got some and are going to have more.

CEYLON Tea Talks

No. 2

Some Ceylon Tea facts it is your interest to know.

A quarter-century ago Tea was practically unknown in Ceylon and its cultivation probably not thought of. Yet at the commencement of the present century a very considerable proportion of the world's supply was produced in Ceylon, and the total area now under cultivation probably exceeds 400,000 acres.

The advantage claimed for Ceylon Tea above others is, that whilst it contains all the Strength and Body manifest in Indian Teas, it also combines with it all the Purity and Delicacy of Flavor of the China, thus securing for itself the Premier place as a "Self Tea," giving a beverage at once refreshing and invigorating in the highest degree.

Ceylon Green Tea stands absolutely Top when in comparison with other "greens."

It has a higher percentage of Theine.

It gives a greater Extract lb. for lb.

It has the minimum of Tannin.

Do You Want to Make Some Extra Money?

If you do, just work as hard for a month selling good tea, as you do trying to sell brands that you know are a little shady, but on the quiet, or perhaps openly, give an extra 5 per cent., or (if very shady) perhaps 10 per cent., discount. Do not make any mistake. "The nigger is in the wood-pile" all right! You get the discount and your customers get——— ! what ?——well, they get tea that they won't always come back for, and you won't know it until it is too late to bring them back.

You never find a big discount being used to sell high-class goods, quality is enough.

Will you make the test for a month? Push RED ROSE TEA just as hard as you have been pushing the other brands. Then figure up your profits and take an account, too, of the new customers you have made through selling RED ROSE TEA. The result may surprise you.

Will you write now for particulars and samples? Perhaps I can give you some suggestions that may be worth something.

One of the Differences—
—Is the Flavor

Many differences are found when a comparison is made between

Southwell's
Jams and Marmalades

and "other makes."

One of the differences is that SOUTHWELL'S JAMS and MARMALADES have a flavor—that good old English flavor—quite difficult to find in "other makes."

A Grocer is justified in ordering SOUTHWELL'S JAMS and MARMALADES on that flavor triumph alone.

CANADIAN EXPORT TRADE IN JAPAN

THE Grocer is in receipt of the following very interesting letter from Mr. Andrew R. Tufts, of Yokohama, Japan. Mr. Tufts will be remembered as an occasional contributor to the columns of The Grocer on Japanese trade matters, on which he is thoroughly conversant. Mr. Tufts is well known in Ontario, where he was formerly in the retail grocery business. He was later in the same business in British Columbia, before going to Japan, where he is now in business as a manufacturers' agent for Canadian producers :

"That Canada has no considerable over-production in any line for which Japan would afford a ready market was quite evident to me when I again got among my mercantile friends in Yokohama and Tokio.

"Two years ago at the Osaka Exhibition we sought to inform the Japanese that Canada was a country of vast possibilities and great promise of future trade. It is true we gave the promises, we still have the vast possibilities, but the United States and Australia enjoy the trade, with most of the European countries getting their share, too.

"The strongest feature of the Canadian exhibit was a demonstration of bread-baking from Manitoba flour, and we received the medal for having the finest foreign exhibit.

"In comparison with the soft wheat flours of the Pacific Coast States our hard wheat flour seemed very high priced to a people who were making other foodstuffs than bread, namely, maccaroni, vermicelli and doughy cakes. They were willing to buy our low grades, but since Manitoba hard produces only about 10 per cent. low grades, we did not secure much of a market for what we had the most of.

"To-day more bread is being used by the Japanese, and more and better grades of flour will be in demand, but it will be a flour light in color, possessing a good percentage and quality of gluten that will supply the masses, and at a price on a par with 80 per cent. of the flour produced by the soft wheats of the Pacific Coast States.

"More western grown wheat, more western mills, adequate preparation for a continuous supply of the product, and a wise cultivation of the oriental market will give Canada her proper share of the Far East flour trade.

"Thanks to the good management of our Government dairies, and the patience of two or three large grocery firms here, our butter trade is growing, but deliveries are protracted.

"Two enterprising soap manufacturers in British Columbia, who believe that an increased output lessens their cost of production, are making headway against the world's largest manufacturers, though hampered by the general tariff being against them. The market is worth winning, and their domestic business will be helped also.

"In comparison with the Puget Sound lumber trade ours does not look good to me.

"This is probably a question of lack of small cargo carriers. Certainly it is a transportation difficultv and not lack of production nor interest on the part of British Columbia millmen.

"The other lines which we could most readily find a large market for in Japan had we any large quantitv to regularly supply, are wood pulp, fish fertilizers, phosphate rock possessing less than 3 per cent. of iron oxide and alumina, coarse grains, apples, dry salt dog salmon, salt herrings, tallow, beef, leather, resin, tar, turpentine, analine dyes and canned milk. A large export trade from Canada to Japan is chiefly a question of ample supply in the above-enumerated products.

"There is no use attempting a fitful trade. It does harm, causing disappointment when further supplies are not available.

"Have we the courage to produce more than we have a home market for ?

"The Government is doing its share in helping to prepare the market here to receive our products. Under Trade Commissioner McLean's supervision a great deal of information is being disseminated. He is not here to sell goods, but to answer questions from either sellers or buyers, and I am sure many Canadian brokers must wonder why they cannot reach Japan with their lines, when the Yukon buys so readily from them.

"The home market is always the best market ; they are quite unlikely to find here as good prices.

"Though it is not officially known here, I read in the local press that Japan has given consent to Canada's coming under the conventional tariff, thereby having the same privileges as enjoyed by the United States and Europe.

"This will help the soap men, the canned milk, leather and many other items, when we are producing them in large enough quantities for export.

"I do not suppose we could well spare any of our cereal food plants in Canada, but I believe there is a splendid opening in Japan for one if our western friends can be induced to raise more grain than is needed for home consumption.

"The constant dietary of rice is said to be the cause of that scourge of the east, beri-beri, and physicians at once put the patient on a diet of barley, oatmeal and other grains.

"Imported breakfast foods bear such a burden of advertising, transportation and duty that they are here expensive to an European family, besides being readily affected by age and dampness. A locallv prepared cereal food should be a winner here if ably advertised.

"Cereal coffee also I consider an acceptable item. Genuine coffee is expensive in Japan, usually a bit stale, and there are no coffee roasters here. The Japanese as an evidence of western fashion rather like coffee in the breakfast menu of toast and eggs.

"An enterprising Japanese firm combines the coffee and sugar by putting a little ground coffee of poor quality in a mould and casting a lump of sugar. The hot water is poured over the sugar in the cup, the sugar dissolves and your coffee is ready. When you drink it you wish you hadn't.

"Some time ago when visiting Japan I was asked to assist as interpreter two American stockmen seeking a concession of land in Hokaido Island for stock-raising purposes. The governor of that prefecture was quite willing to grant all their requirements, providing that Japanese might hold some interest therein. Owing to personal differences quite apart from this enterprise the Americans quarreled and the matter dropped, but I feel sure a similar undertaking on the part of Canadian stockmen would meet with the hearty co-operation of the governor and local Japanese capitalists, and should prove successful.

"Germany seems to be supplying most of the wood pulp. Canada, I understand, has none to spare, or if any the rail freight westward kills it. There are immense tracts of suitable spruce on Vancouver Island and several projected companies, but 'nothing doing.'

"Wood alcohol made from sawdust at a cost much less than the corn-made article should be an export article of value, not to speak of the charcoal brickettes which Japanese firms would contract for quite readily.

"I am told there is more alcohol imported than flour, and there are, I believe, several processes of making alcohol from sawmill refuse which are well beyond the experimental stage.

"Fish fertilizers possessing about 10 per cent. of ammonia, and made rather coarse in style, are eagerly contracted for at about $3 per unit of ammonia per ton. I know parties ready to make contracts for 5,000 to 10,000 tons for purchase of a suitable article, and I can't find even 500 tons available on the Pacific coast. Perhaps our Atlantic seaboard can spare some.

"The dry salt dog salmon industry is a growing one, but if shippers wish to keep their trade and avoid consignments, it would be well to have a provincial inspector appointed at Vancouver."

TO LICENSE CHEESE FACTORIES.

There is a movement on foot among cheesemen to have cheese factories licensed. The inspectors can only advise cheesemakers and patrons, but have no power to enforce their suggestions. Hence a good deal of their work is of no effect through inattention on the part of those they advise. If factories were licensed the inspectors would have power to make patrons comply with reasonable suggestions for the improvement of cheese.

Many factories are not what they should be. There are poor curing rooms, bad sanitation, impure water, etc. The patrons are not all scrupulously clean and careful in handling their milk. Some milk stands are built beside pig pens or barns yards where the foul odors are absorbed by the milk and cause bad flavors in cheese.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETINGS

QUEBEC BOARD OF TRADE.

A COUNCIL meeting of the Quebec Board of Trade was held recently in the association rooms and was attended by the following members: Messrs. Wm. Power, M.P., presiding, Geo. E. Amyot, E. E. B. Rattray, M. Joseph, Dr. Ed. Morin, V. Lemieux and N. T. Levasseur, secretary.

A letter was read from the Montreal Board of Trade proposing the holding of a conference of the Boards of Trade of the Dominion at Montreal in the Spring of 1906. The last occasion upon which the Boards of Trade of the Dominion met was in Toronto in June, 1902, and the Montreal Board deems it advisable and valuable that the various Boards should confer together periodically on commercial matters of interest to the Dominion and the Empire. The Council of the local Board decided to co-operare in the movement for such a conference.

Resolutions passed by the Toronto Board of Trade respecting taxation of commercial travelers were discussed.

The secretary of the Board was instructed to write to the chairman of the Tariff Commission requesting information as to the date upon which the Commission proposed to hold sessions in Quebec and offering the use of the Board rooms for their sessions. The Board would like to know the date of the Commission's meeting in Quebec in order that due preparations may be made. Upon notification of the date of the Commission's visit to the city the secretary was instructed to notify, and especially the local branch of the Manufacturers' Association, of the date by advertisement, so that they may, if desired, be heard by the Commission.

The complaints of Anger & Son, Leclerc & Letellier. Mr. J. C. Kaine, M. P.P., and others in regard to discrimination in freight rates by the Quebec & Lake St. John Railway were referred to the Provincial Railway Commission for investigation and regulation.

KENTVILLE BOARD OF TRADE.

KENTVILLE Board of Trade met on Tuesday evening with a good attendance. The membership, which stood at 94, was raised to the century mark by the addition of six new names. The persons proposed for membership were Messrs. R. C. Dickie, F. B. Newcombe, R. H. Ryan, W. H. Seaman, E. J. Bishop and W. A. Creelman.

Mr. W. P. Shaffner reported for the school committee. He thought the public should know more about the school and he thought it might be best to have one day each month for the parents and others to visit the schools.

President Porter reported on a visit to the schools, and told of the work in the academy, and in the domestic science and manual training departments. A discussion followed bearing upon the work in the school, publication of marks, etc., in which G. E. Calkin, H. G. Harris, W. P. Shaffner and M. G. DeWolfe joined.

Secretary Rand read a communication from the commercial agent of the Dominion in Great Britain asking for views, photos, etc., showing the natural scenery and products of our country and particularly of our fruit sections. The matter was referred to Dr. Moore to deal with.

THE MOOSE JAW BOARD OF TRADE.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Board of Trade, Moose Jaw, was held at which Mr. Hugh McKellar was re-engaged as commissioner for another year, dating from March 10.

The season's work was commenced by the commissioner in the following report:

The objects which the board of trade had in appointing a commissioner were to advertise Moose Jaw and the Moose Jaw district, and to benefit all business enterprises in the city.

The appointment of a commissioner was a good advertisement to our city. Since that date, Moose Jaw and the district have been well advertised.

This advertisement has brought business of all kinds to the city. The evidences of our prosperity do not require to be enumerated; increased volume of business is known to all.

The branch line of railway to the north is practically an accomplished fact, for there is no doubt but that construction will go on the coming year towards the Elbow of the Saskatchewan.

The spur track, for warehouse purposes, although delayed from time to time, has at last been put into definite shape for construction.

The grain pyramid exhibited at the C.P.R. station has been a noted means of advertising our agricultural district. Farm lands have so increased in value, largely through advertising, that the asset to the city is almost incalculable.

Boring for natural gas and the Stock Sales Market have not yet materialized; yet everything that could be done regarding these projects has been done by the board.

The present is the growing time for the new Province of Saskatchewan. Moose Jaw, as a city, and the Moose Jaw district, require to be kept continually before the public, so that we may reap the benefits to which we are entitled during this period of expansion."

Berlin Beet Sugar Industry and the Tariff Commission

The Commission at Berlin.

THE native sugar industry put forth a strong plea to the Tariff Commission for encouragement and protection. Berlin is the home of the beet sugar industry, one of the two large establishments now being successfully operated in Ontario.

The case for the manufacturers was presented by Mr. Hugh Blain, of Toronto, president of the Ontario Sugar Company, who, in a carefully prepared memorandum, presented a new aspect of the case, namely, that as the major part of the sugar now imported into Canada enters under the British preference, there is left only a protection of 17 8-10 per cent. for the home manufacturer. Showing in some detail the possibilities and advantages of beet sugar manufacture, he argued that the protection should be increased. His contentions were reinforced in an almost sensational manner by a delegation of one hundred farmers who grow beets for this factory, hailing from eighteen different counties, each wearing a badge indicating the name of his county, and who testified to the success of sugar beet culture as a farm crop.

The evidence heard by the Commission was not all on one side. Mr. G. T. Wolfe, on behalf of the T. Eaton Co., Toronto, complained of the sugar combine, and asked for its destruction or the removal of the duty, while Mr. Allan Huber accused the Government of going back on the low tariff principles of the party platform of 1893.

The sugarmakers' case was heard in the afternoon. Mr. D. A. Gordon, M.P., president of the Wallaceburg Sugar Company, was present, while Messrs. Robert Jaffray and W. J. Gage, who had been attending a board meeting of the Berlin company, also listened to the proceedings. Earlier in the day the Commissioners had been shown through the factory, now producing 600 barrels of sugar daily.

Mr. Hugh Blain on the Sugar Beet Industry.

The memorandum submitted by Mr. Blain was as follows :

"The production of sugar from home-grown beets may be said to be Canada's latest native industry. It is far reaching in its effects, and is almost entirely a development of our own natural resources. The article is staple, the demand is constant and practically unlimited, and the consumption is by all classes of the community. The duty paid on the imported article during the time required for the establishment of the industry will be fairly borne by all in proportion to the quantity each individual consumes, and is a fair and legitimate source of revenue.

"Like nearly all new industries there are a great many difficulties to overcome in its introduction, and it will require a few years to educate all parties up to the knowledge necessary to put it on a proper business basis. The farmers have to learn the scientific methods of cultivation. The manufacturers have to learn the most economical system of management, and have to find or create a market for the by-products of the factory. The transportation companies are slow to realize the value of the enterprise, and have to learn how to furnish the facilities required by a business of such immense proportions.

An Industry That Must Succeed.

"The foundation upon which the industry rests is, however, sure, and if given an opportunity it must succeed. We have about as good conditions as can be found anywhere in the world, except, perhaps, where the beets are grown by irrigation. Our climate is in the best part of the beet sugar zone. Our soil is rich and easily cultivated. Our transportation by rail and wagon is good, and our water is abundant, and of the right quality, and our people are healthy, vigorous and industrious. I know of no industry where there is a greater or wider distribution of benefits. Our company paid $80,000 for beets delivered in October, and we will have to pay a larger amount for beets delivered in the present month and a still larger amount later on. We also pay large sums for purely Canadian labor on such articles as lime rock, cooperage, sacks and other supplies.

Tariff Affords no Encouragement.

"When this industry was organized the minimum tariff was 40 cents per 100 lbs. for a 75 degree sugar under 16 Dutch standard, and 1½ cents per 100 lbs. additional for each degree of sugar above 75 degrees. The minimum tariff now, under the British preference is 26 2-3 cents per 100 lbs. for a 75 degree sugar under 16 Dutch standard, and 1 cent per 100 lbs. additional for each degree of sugar above 75 degrees. I need not tell you that refiners are taking advantage of this reduction and buying almost exclusively from the countries entitled to this preference. Instead, therefore, of getting encouragement from the Dominion Government, the duty after we started was practically reduced one-third. The last published trade and navigation returns, ending June 30, 1904, give the total consumption of sugar as 390,544,660 lbs., valued at $7,562,168.00, and the duty paid as $2,182,493.43, an average of .5588 cents per lb. duty, equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 28 8-10 per cent. Of this total consumption, 23,734,365 lbs. were above 16 Dutch standard, valued at $574,060.00 and paid duty of $264,263.75, being 1.1134 cents per lb. duty, equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 46 per cent., and 366,810,295 lbs. under 16 Dutch standard, valued at $6,988,108.00, and paid duty of $1,918,229.68, being a duty of .5229 of a cent per lb., equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 27½ per cent.

Effect on the Preference.

"The returns ending June 30, 1905, of which I have an advance sheet, show a total consumption of 346,752,598 lbs., valued at $8,561,176.00, on which duty was paid of $1,846,986.81, being an average duty of .5326 of a cent per lb., equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 21½ per cent. Of this total consumption, 19,517,812 lbs. were above 16 Dutch standard, and valued at $572,757.00, and paid a duty of $175,880.94, being .9007 cents per lb. duty, equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 30 7-16 per cent., and 327,234,786 lbs. under 16 Dutch standard valued at $7,988,419.00, and paid a duty of $1,671,177.87, being .5170 cents per lb. duty, equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 20 9-10 per cent. Of this sugar under 16 Dutch standard there came in under the preferential tariff, 261,516.733 lbs., valued at $6,779,889.00, on which duty was paid of $1,214,542.60, being .4644 of a cent per lb., equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 17 8-10 per cent. The duty for the imports of this year is not given, but as far as we can see it will be still lower. The latest authentic figures, therefore, give us a duty of 9-10 cent per pound specific, or 30 7-10 per cent. ad valorem on refined sugar and .5170 cents per pound specific, or 20 9-10 per cent. ad valorem, as an average duty on raw sugars and .4644 cents per pound specific, or 17 8-10 per cent. ad valorem on raw sugars under the preferential tariff. This does not make any allowance for waste in refinery, against which, however, must be placed the value of the by-products. Now this is the actual protection the farmers have against the foreign growers because this is what was actually paid by our competitors for their raw material.

An Industry of Vast Importance.

"I have gone thus fully and carefully into these figures and calculations to prove that since we undertook the establishment of this industry we have been put in a very trying position by having one-third of the protection we depended upon taken away from us, and we now think that we can fairly ask you for relief at the approaching tariff revision. I trust you will pardon the length of time I have taken in placing the case before you, but in my opinion it is a matter of the utmost importance. If second to any it is second only to the iron and steel industry, and if a reasonable encouragement is given I see an immense future for the beet sugar industry in this country.

"In conclusion, let me again emphasize the fact that the great bulk of the sugar now being consumed is from imported raw sugar under fourteen Dutch standard brought in under the preferential clause in the tariff, on which the duty actually paid is .4644 of a cent per pound as a specific duty and is a duty of 17 8-10 per cent. ad valorem."

mission. There were present at that meeting representative beet growers from eighteen counties, delegates from the 2,000 growers shipping to the Berlin factory. They did not find farming unprofitable; beet-growing was profitable in this and other countries. They were enjoying the home markets. There was no strife between those who produced the food and the artisans who consumed it. They must prosper together for the good of Canada. "There lie dormant in Canadian soil and Canadian sunshine," said Mr. Reynolds, "the elements out of which, by the application of Canadian industry, of the farmer and the artisan toiling together, may be produced her entire supply of sugar. At the present time we produce only one-twentieth of the sugar consumed in Canada. Where there are 400,000,000 pounds used, we only produce about 20,000,000 pounds."

It had been said to be a mistake to bonus that industry. Personally he was not in favor of bonuses, but he believed that in this case until the industry was established a bonus was warranted. The profits on growing sugar beets exceeded those from any other crop on the farm.

Mr. Reynolds and a number of other delegates selected from the one hundred present related their experiences in growing beets, showing net profits ranging from $15 to $50 per acre. They also spoke of it as the most profitable crop they grew.

Mr. Paterson asked the company for expressions to the contrary, if any, and several said the estimates were not favorable enough.

"If it is such a profitable business why do you need more protection?" asked Mr. Allan Huber from the audience.

"Are you a beet-grower?" asked Mr. Fielding.

"No, but I use sugar," was the reply.

Free Sugar Asked For.

Further complaint of the operations of the grocery combine as regards sugar was heard from Mr. G. T. Wolfe, manager of the grocery department of the T. Eaton Co., Toronto. The company, he said, buys 50 to 60 carloads a year, but cannot get cane sugar from the refiners, as their selling list was, by the admission of their own representative, controlled by the Grocers' Guild.

"As this is a free country and a free people, we would ask you to take the duty off sugar at the present time and let us have a chance to compete with the people that are selling sugar in Canada the same as other goods that are controlled by combines," said Mr. Wolfe. "We have the same money and ought to be able to buy the same quantities on the same terms as other people."

As it was, he continued, they had to buy from the wholesalers, who did not handle the sugar, but gave them an order on the refiners. They could get beet sugar, but they required cane sugar. The two wholesalers in Toronto who are not in the guild had to subscribe to the latter's terms and could not sell below a certain price. They had been refused sugar by the St. Lawrence and the Redpath refineries. They had applied to get on the selling list, but were refused because it was claimed they were not wholesalers, though they claimed they were.

Mr. Paterson saw danger to the revenue if the duty was removed, but Mr. Wolfe said he would be satisfied if the combine was broken up, to which Mr. Paterson replied he understood proceedings were being taken in the courts.

A good deal of amusement was occasioned by the remarks of Mr. Allan Huber, a Berlin commercial traveler, who as a Liberal free trader accused the Government of departing from the party platform of 1893. He specially condemned the sugar and whisky combines, which, he said, kept up the price of those commodities unduly. He quoted Sir Wilfrid Laurier's utterances in opposition, that he would not remove the tariff at one swoop, but would do it gradually. "He has not done anything so far, so it's time for him to start to swoop," said Mr. Huber, amid laughter. He quoted Mr. Paterson as saying when in opposition, "Farmers, you have been robbed by protection," but Mr. Paterson laughingly said he had not said it that way, and that the platform of 1893 was a good platform. Mr. Huber asked that the excise and import duties on whisky be equalized, so as to make it cheaper to the consumer.

The argument of the Farmers' Association that protection did not benefit the farmer was combatted by Mr. H. L. Janzen, who said he spoke on behalf of farmers and market gardeners of Waterloo county. He quoted from a local paper to show that butter, eggs and poultry bring higher prices in Berlin than in Toronto. He remembered how difficult it had been years ago to secure a market for those products in Berlin. To admit American agricultural products free would do great injury to the Canadian farmers. Increased protection would be a benefit to all people who have to work for a living.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

December 8, 1905.

THE country cheese boards have all adjourned for the season, navigation is closed and just as we were settling down to a dull and quiet time, which was generally expected, some good sized orders were received here which created rather more activity on the market than what was anticipated. Thus it is that "it is the unexpected that happens."

We have right along pointed out the strength of the situation in these articles and if the orders from across the Atlantic keep coming in, our prices must advance much earlier than was anticipated. Stocks of cheese are much lighter than last year and any ordinary consumptive demand in Great Britain would easily absorb these supplies before the new season can open with new goods.

It becomes now a question to what extent may the consumptive demand decrease when prices are advanced to a famine point. In this respect we must watch other food supplies on the British markets, notably Australian mutton, rabbits, etc. If cheese gets beyond a price for the British retailer to make a fair profit, other articles of food are taken up in its place and any ill-timed advance in prices may thus be checked.

Cheese is good food ; there is no waste and it requires no cooking, but in Winter time even the humblest of homes must have some fires that may be used for cooking meats, etc., and then if cheese is too dear there will be much less of it consumed. Warm meals with some meat are after all more popular with most classes of the population than a piece of bread and cheese.

Meanwhile, however, the situation has not lost, but gained in strength, and as far as the present outlook for future prices is concerned, there seems to be nothing in sight to prevent prices from still further advancing. The retailers in Great Britain are still getting a fair profit on their goods, and so far, at least, the consumption of cheese has not fallen off to any noticeable extent. As long as this condition exists there is only one course for prices, which is a gradual working towards a higher level.

This has been a wonderfully successful season for the farmers of this country. Both cheese and butter have been unusually high in price during the entire season and there seems yet to be plenty of room for a further extension in the production of dairy products. If farmers will increase the number of their cows they will undoubtedly gain by it, even should an occasional poor season of low prices come in. On the whole there is a large demand for both cheese and butter, and as the home population increases the consumption of milk increases also in proportion. The trouble among the farming classes here seems to be that they are generally doing so well that they are perfectly satisfied to let well enough alone, instead of progressing by adding a little more to what they already have.

Canadian cheese and butter may now be considered standard articles in the United Kingdom. There is a steady demand for both at good prices. Any overproduction might lower the prices at times, but there is a certain quantity needed yearly for consumption, and as long as we give our friends across the Atlantic a suitable quality, they will continue to buy our goods at fair market value.

There seems to be a particularly good chance to increase our production of butter, and wide-awake farmers, principally in the Province of Quebec, where the best butter is made, are going more and more into the making of butter instead of cheese. If this is carried too far, it may result finally in a shortage in the cheese supply and an over-production of butter. However, we can meanwhile find a ready market for considerably more butter than what is at present produced.

The butter market shows no change since our last report. We have no goods to spare for export and our home consumption is meanwhile getting sufficient quantities of fresh made butter to keep the market steady. When the supplies of this Winter made butter fall off, prices will probably advance considerably.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

November 25, 1905.

THERE is not much doing in Canadian butter on this market at the time of writing, nor is it likely that we shall see any further activity in this department again this season. We learn that there has been some advance in values in Montreal, and this fact coupled with the shortage in Canada will bring the season to a close without much delay. In view of the fact that we are not expecting to see much more Canadian butter on this side for some little while, attention is now turned more than ever to Australasian butter.

Canadians may well indulge in some little self-congratulation at the success which has attended their efforts on this market during the past few months, for they have done better than ever, in the whole annals of their butter trade with Britain, they have done before. They have established a new record in the matter of shipments ; they have realized prices between eight and ten shillings per cwt. higher than last year, and they have made great improvements in their quality.

The year 1903 was Canada's record year, the receipts of butter then being 13,238 tons for the twelve months ending June 30 ; there was a considerable decrease for the same period, 1904, but for the twelve months ending June 30, 1905, the total went up to 12,847 tons. From July 1 of this year to the present time the total receipts of Canadian butter amount to 13,795 tons.

Circumstances have been all in the favor of Canadian produce, for the drought on the European continent has interfered with our continental supplies. Denmark has been busy supplying the German demand and making up for the European deficiency, while supplies from Russia have been very uncertain. Irish supplies have been short. The trade here, as might be well imagined, has felt the effects of high prices, and there have been but small profits, not to mention occasional losses, to both importers and retailers.

CHEESE. There is not very much to report as regards Canadian cheese. Business is on a moderate scale, and inquiries continue to come in. There is not, however, sufficient demand to warrant any further advance in price, so that quotations remain without any alteration. Figures, which though not exact are approximate, show that on November 23 total stocks of Canadian cheese in London (i.e., in general warehouse and in importers' and salesmen's local warehouses), stand at about 175,000 boxes.

The quality of Canadian cheese continues to be very fine, but prices are high, and it must be remembered that as the year advances the attention of the public is turned from cheese to poultry and frozen meats, the latter being very cheap just now. Owing to home conditions, Canadian exporters seem inclined to raise rather than lower prices, and as long as inquiries continue to come in from this side no doubt this disposition will remain. On this side the position for Canadian cheese is somewhat similar to that of Canadian butter lately—involving good profits for Canadians but resulting in but small profits to dealers and retailers over here.

As reported some two weeks back, the large dealers, on the principle that they must make some money somewhere, have advanced the price of cheese from sixpence to sevenpence. It must not be presumed, however, that the smaller dealers will therefore be compelled to go up to eightpence. This is a false impression which seems to obtain with some Canadians

BACON. The market remains with very little change to report. The arrivals of Canadian have been on a rather more liberal scale and prices for boxed meats are, if anything, a trifle easier. There is one factor in the market which does not tend to improve the reputation of Canadian bacon on this market, and that is the fact that many of the Canadian packers are buying, curing and shipping to this market bacon made from American hogs. However careful packers may be, the tendency on this side of the water is to sell this meat as the outcome of the packers' factory, the qualifying term "American" being occasionally omitted from the description. The result is not always to the advantage of the reputation of Canadian bacon.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

TORONTO.

DURING the week under review trade is generally reported to have been slow and somewhat uninteresting. It is thought, however, that all points considered, the situation is about normal for the particular time of year.

Arrivals of hogs are by no means excessive, although showing a slight improvement on that of earlier dates. Harvest having now practically ended, the farmers are no doubt turning more attention to the marketing of their cattle. One prominent buyer, however, has expressed the situation as by no means satisfactory inasmuch as the growth of hogs has been gradually degenerating and although buyers are compelled to buy whatever comes to hand on account of the greatly depleted stocks, still in this particular dealer's judgment the time has come when buyers should show greater discrimination in their selection of stock and in place of giving an average price should show a determination to pay a distinctly higher rate for quality. By this means the farmer would see the advantage which would accrue to him by regulating the feeding of his hogs, so as to produce the particular growth which is adapted for packing. As things are at present, it is found very difficult to make prime selections to satisfy the export trade. If a quantity of inferior grades continue to be sent to the foreign markets it must have a very serious and depressing effect upon Canadian produce. The Agricultural Department at Ottawa, it is reported, is on the eve of making an exhaustive investigation into this feature.

As regards the butter situation there is nothing of particular interest at the present moment; the turn of the season has not yet really transpired. The factories are still holding off somewhat in the making of bulk butter, probably on account of the present high range of prices which can be obtained for cheese. A quantity of creamery prints are finding their way to the market and are maintaining a good firm price of from 24c. to 25c., but good solid butter is still slow to arrive.

There have been very few reports from the cheese boards since our last issue, practically only of the character of re-offerings. The cheese which is now being made at the factories is, of course, fodder fed, and by expert buyers is not considered to warrant the high values which are being insisted on; therefore, the more recent board quotations do not reflect the true condition of the market. A prominent buyer was heard to say that he would not upon any account use them for export trade unless it were where the special demand for a low grade product was inquired for, as it was easy to detect a large degree of foreign flavor.

The provision market continues to rule steady. There is a continued reported scarcity of hogs and prices are high. The feature of the scarcity in hogs is the agitation that is on foot relative to securing the attention of the Government to an improvement in the supply and the calling attention of the farmers to the value of this branch of trade. The price for live hogs is quoted at 6 3-4c. for selects, with mixed at 6 1-2c. and common 6 1-4c. Dressed hogs are strong and prices steady. Fresh abattoir killed, $8.50 to $8.75, country dressed, $8.00 to $8.50. No change in smoked meat, bacon and ham, both being in fair demand.

Prices of butter are high and firm, supplies of good stock are limited. It is reported that a shortage in outside points has caused a demand to be made on Montreal stocks. This naturally has had the effect of strengthening the market. Prices for creamery, 22 1-2c. to 23c. for good to fine, and 23 1-4c. for best. Finest Ontario tub dairy is quoted at 20c. to 20 1-2c. and rolls, 21c.

There is no change in the price of eggs, the market being steady and prices ranging from 21c. for limed to 25c. for select. The local demand is extremely good and holders expect prices to still further advance.

The cheese market is keeping up a decidedly strong tone and prices are quoted high. Holders are firm in their ideas, which makes trading and turnover small. The demand is good and as export inquiries are also very good and prices in the U. K. high, it has the effect of still further stiffening up this market. Ontarios are quoted, 12 5-8c. to 12 3-4c.; Quebecs, 12 1-8c. to 12 1-4c.; and Townships, 12 1-4c. November cheese is claimed practically out of the market.

After the health of "The King" had been drunk, Mr. J. O. Gareau in a happy speech proposed the health of their distinguished guest, Mr. Honore Gervais, member for St. James' division, Montreal, expressing the tnanks of the retail merchants generally for the very able and effective services he had rendered in the passing of the Act relating to trading stamps.

Mr. Gervais, in reply, made an eloquent speech, detailing the various phases of the work up to the time the matter was placed into his hands, and closely explaining the progress of the bill through the two Houses.

Among the other speakers were Hon. Senator Mitchell, Hon. J. I. Tarte, Jacques Bureau, M.P.; Godfroy Langlois, M.P.P.; Hon. Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec; Mr. J. G. Watson, president Retail Boot and Shoe Association; Mr. E. M. Trowern, secretary Ontario Retail Merchants' Association; Mr. J. A. Beaudry, secretary Montreal association, etc.

The banquet was a most pronounced success, and the result in strengthening the work of the retail associations throughout the province can only be good. The committee having the affair in hand deserve great credit for the labor put into the work to make it an epoch in the history of the Retail Merchants' Association of Montreal. Special credit, however, is due the energetic secretary, Mr. J. A. Beaudry, who was most indefatigable in the inception, planning and final arrangement of the banquet.

TEA STANDARDS FOR CANADA.

OUR attention has again been drawn to the question of establishing tea standards for Canada. In June last we drew the attention of the tea importing and jobbing trade to the vital necessity of establishing a set of standards by the Federal Government, and all interests working together for the proper safeguarding of the tea trade were called upon to assist in laying the matter before the authorities.

A petition was at the time circulated in Montreal and UNANIMOUSLY signed by EVERY wholesale grocer and tea merchant in Montreal, asking that a set of tea standards be adopted by the Canadian Government and suggesting that same be on a par with the United States standards. The reason for this petition was that enormous quantities of teas rejected by the United States inspectors were allowed to enter Canada, much to the detriment of the Canadian trade generally, but more particularly in the Province of Quebec, where China green teas are principally used.

A reply was received from Ottawa that this petition would receive consideration, but hearing nothing further, and the trade discovering that a good many teas were being rejected by our inspector in Ottawa, was naturally anxious to know what the Government modus operandi was and on what basis they were rejecting teas, again asked in November for this information. The reply received from the Department was that "the Montreal petition had been under consideration but in the absence of similar petitions from other trade centres no change in the regulations had been authorized as yet."

The general feeling and opinion of the Government's action in this matter is decidedly unsatisfactory as the Canadian trade is absolutely in the dark as to on what basis imports can be made.

As an instance, in June last a small invoice of Moyune Imperials was sold on the London market and purchased by a Montreal tea house, but on arrival of the teas at Customs stores the buyers were astonished to learn from the Customs authorities that they had been rejected. These teas were examined by several independent tea experts and pronounced to be perfectly sweet and sound, although a shade lower in cup quality than the United States standard, but as there was nothing foreign or detrimental to the teas the general opinion prevailed that they should have been allowed to come in. The owner of the teas asked for a second test and was again informed that the teas were bad and must be exported within 30 days, and they were promptly shipped back to London.

Notwithstanding these facts it is understood that some time last month (November) two blocks of Pingsueys, aggregating some thirteen hundred packages, were admitted into Canada, the whole of these being infinitely inferior to the Moyunes referred to, being woody, darker liquoring and scummy, the last objectionable feature being one which the Government inspector has hitherto guarded against.

Inspection of these teas by The Grocer and the general opinion of tea experts in no way interested directly in this particular lot, is that these teas should never have been aflowed to enter this country.

Inquiries on the part of The Grocer among the trade elicited the information that the absolute uncertainty of tea importers as to what they may safely import, is a cause of great dissatisfaction and it is felt that tea importers and jobbers are not properly dealt with by the Government. If the Government is desirous of doing justice by the trade, despite the fact that "similar petitions have not been received from other trade centres," it would seem only right that the Montreal trade should be furnished with a set of standards upon which the inspector bases his decisions, for, as stated before, it is in the Province of Quebec that China green teas are principally used.

Outside of the fact that the matter is a most vital one for the tea importers of Canada, the establishment of a set of tea standards by the United States Government protects the people of that country against the sale of cheap, trashy and unhealthful teas, and it would seem only right that the Canadian tea drinker be protected against the teas that are not fit for citizens of the Republic to drink and which find their way into this country.

What is unfit for the citizens of the United States to drink should certainly not be allowed to pass into consumption in Canada. To be absolutely safe and fair to tea importer and consumer alike, standards should be decided upon without delay and placed in the hands of the trade. With these standards in hand no importer will think of purchasing teas he knows would not pass inspection. Will the Government relieve the uncertainty and put the importer on a right basis ?

THE GROCERY SITUATION.

THERE is little doubt but that the inquiry of the Tariff Commission is creating wide and serious interest among the industrial communities.

The following extract from a communication received at the office of The Canadian Grocer is indicative of the light in which many of our readers view the present grocery situation :

"I have been reading closely the reports of combine exposures and evidence before the Tariff Commission published in your columns. I hope you will continue to give us very complete reports of all developments. Years ago I was not over-friendly to the methods of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, but while no doubt they are looking out for their own best interests, yet their interests are ours to a great extent. I have heard some stories of their proceedings which, if true, are iniquitous. On the other hand, the evils which the departmental store can work on the legitimate retail trade, particularly the retail grocer, are such that every effort should be made to protect the interests of the grocery trade by educating manufacturers up to the importance of not placing one large retailer in an advantageous position and thus enable him to make the retail business unprofitable to hundreds of others throughout the country. Even now the large departmental stores get too many lines direct from manufacturers, particularly in the grocery business, and this enables them to cut and slash and use staple lines as drawing cards, and then they soak the buyers and gold brick them on something they know nothing about.

"A great many retailers have it in their heads that they ought to buy direct from manufacturers. In having this idea I fancy they have not thought the conditions over very carefully; otherwise they would see that if manufacturers sold to large retailers at the same price as they would to wholesalers, ultimately the usefulness of the retail man would be entirely done away with, excepting large departmental stores, who would not only control the selling medium to the consumers, but being in that position would be enabled to dictate their own terms eventually to manufacturers.

"OLD-TIME READER."

TRADE AND COMMERCE—WEEKLY REPORT.

PROBABLY there is no instance on record of so rapid and substantial a growth in the industrial situation of any country as that of Canada. That it has not been attained without hard and persistent work goes without saying, especially when it is remembered that comparatively few years ago Canada's possibilities were unknown, and little credence was placed in any suggested commercial possibilities. All has changed, however, and foreign countries are vying with each other for Canadian trade.

A review of the records of trade inquiries received at the Commercial Agencies' Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, is most instructive reading in this connection, and reveals the development of a very satisfactory system. Within the past few years this department has done good work. Eight years ago a few inquiries were annually received from foreign houses, but in the absence of any particular system proved uninteresting and unremunerative. In the early part of 1904, however, the system which had in the interval been formulated was brought to perfection by the decision to issue a Weekly Report and Mr. F. C. T. O'Hara took the matter in hand with such a degree of zeal that by the end of that year the number of inquiries had jumped from a modest 19 in the year 1898 to some 566 in 1904, whilst for the 11 months ending November 30, 1905, a total of 759 inquiries had been received with another month yet to come to complete the year. This, however, satisfactory as it is, is only one side of the question at issue; the other side and certainly the most important is as to the number of answers which the publicity of those inquiries called forth, as it is upon this feature that the success really hangs.

A reference to the records reveals the fact that whilst in the year 1898 there were no addresses whatever furnished to the inquirers, and later in 1903 only the insignificant number of 157, during the first year of the publication of the Weekly Report the Department was enabled to place the addresses of nearly 1,200 firms in the hands of inquirers, and better still, during the 11 months ending November 30, 1905, upwards of 2,500 addresses have been already supplied to these inquirers. The Department is to be warmly congratulated upon so favorable a result, which goes to show how much can be accomplished by the introduction of systematic methods and publicity.

The Weekly Report is always full of instructive and interesting information, and the reader feels he is getting the latest and thoroughly reliable news. Any of our readers who are not getting it would do well to apply for a copy, and be kept by it in touch with the world news of the British Empire.

A CONTROVERSY OVER TEA.

A LITTLE over a week ago the New York Herald published what was alleged to be a cable despatch from London, stating that a prominent physician had declared that Indian and Ceylon teas were injurious and that the preference should be given to China teas.

This naturally displeased dealers making a specialty of Indian and Ceylon teas and induced some of them to take up the pen in behalf of their favorite. Among that number was Mr. P. C. Larkin, of Toronto. He told the Herald frankly that he doubted if any physician of prominence had made such a statement. The Herald replied in a column editorial in which it confessed that the alleged cable was nothing more than a clipping from the Daily Mail of London.

The incident has not yet been closed, or it had not up to the time of writing, as the Herald had almost daily several columns of pros and cons in regard to the matter.

Tea was probably never before the subject of so much newspaper discussion.

MOLASSES.

CONDITIONS have not changed recently in the molasses market although the distributing trade, with the approach of cold weather, has been somewhat better. Stocks in jobbers' hands are light, but there has been some pressure to sell on the part of holders, and quotations for pure Barbadoes are nominal, ranging around 30c, whereas off grades of other islands have been offering at considerably less. We learn of a sale of Trinidad recently around 24½c.

The most recent reports from Barbadoes indicate that they have had showery weather, which is much needed at this season of the year, and although the area under cultivation is about 10 per cent. less than it was some years ago, still the prospects are if crop appearances keep up that this year's crop of sugar will amount to about 50,000 tons as compared to about 40,000 last year. This would mean an increase in molasses also under ordinary conditions. Last season owing to the relatively higher price of molasses and declining sugar markets as much molasses as possible was made, therefore whereas there may be a fair increase in quantity of sugar, we will not likely see the same proportionate increase in molasses unless prices on sugar rule very low. There is also an indication that there will be a larger proportion of syrup made in future than there has been in the past.

TWO STRONG CARDS.

MANY a retailer's stock needs more well kept want books and the more frequent use of the mail order.

Most merchants will confess that their stores have not want books enough and what they have are poorly kept. The stock runs short on some particular articles and the clerk or merchant fails to enter those items on the want list.

The day comes when calls for those articles are made and the stock contains them not. Then it is that the merchant is tempted to buy more than he should of those lines to make sure that the stock will not get short on them again.

In every scientifically handled store the want book and the mail order are coming to the front. Thus instead of buying it all in one lump to make sure the stock will not run short, the scientific merchant orders carefully and sorts up frequently. The want book is an important part of his system. The mail order is another.

These two features of good storekeeping save many a dollar from year to year when properly applied. Carrying expense is a big item and the want book and mail order help chip off a large piece of that expense. They assist the retailer to do business with less of his money tied up in merchandise. They teach him to leave as much of the stock as possible in the hands of the wholesaler and manufacturer until he needs it.

ON Saturday, Dec. 2nd, Secretary W. A. Coulson arrived in Winnipeg from the west, having completed a highly successful organization trip in Saskatchewan and Alberta. The bulk of his work was done in Alberta and much yet remains to be done in Saskatchewan. Letters from various parts of that province awaiting him on his return to Winnipeg, indicate that the merchants there are thinking of other things besides elections, and that they are anxious to fall in line with the movement.

So much space has necessarily been devoted to the publication of this long and encouraging list of new members that much interesting matter is necessarily held over until next week. This list is sufficient evidence of the enthusiastic way in which the dealers in the new provinces have supported a worthy movement. The secretary has letters from merchants in many towns in Saskatchewan asking him to visit them and help them to organize. He will do so as soon as possible, but any dealers who are impatient must remember that there are limits to what one man can do, and it is a great undertaking to organize the whole of the west. It is, in fact, becoming increasingly evident that the secretary must have an assistant; but of that this paper will have more to say later.

Readers will notice the large membership in Edmonton. On the night of November 20th a very largely attended meeting was held in Edmonton, at which the Edmonton section was organized. This was probably the largest meeting of any section; more than one hundred dealers were present.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

Ontario Markets.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Dec. 7, 1905.

LOCAL trade has continued to be in a large measure uninteresting during the week in review. There is still a good deal of activity in hurrying forward orders which have been placed at an earlier date, before the setting in of severe weather. Apart from this, however, the condition of trade might be accurately described as dull. On the street this has been particularly so, brokers reporting trade as slow of interest and only in the nature of immediate requirements.

In canned goods there is nothing of particular interest to note. Reports appear to denote that there is a probability of some stocks falling short in supply, but at the present moment there is nothing in evidence to make this of serious consequence.

The sugar market has settled down to the ordinary routine of supply and demand. The situation is still one of uncertainty as will be seen by our detailed report.

In syrups and molasses trade has been uninteresting.

In coffee interest continues to be maintained and dealers are very sanguine as to the prospects of this cereal.

The domestic tea trade has been somewhat more interesting. Especially has this been the case in greens. Any samples showing quality have at once aroused the interest of buyers.

In foreign dried fruits the situation is one of great interest. Although trade has been somewhat slow, the market generally has developed great strength, especially so in prunes.

Rice and tapioca continue good but no new feature to note.

Spices have been uninteresting.

Honey has been in active demand, with prices firm and steady.

The bean situation continues one of strength, but there is virtually no change in the situation.

Fish has been in active demand and some dealers have expressed difficulty in obtaining sufficient supplies of dried fish to satisfy their customers.

The hide market has made a further downward tendency, with supplies coming in in greater volume.

Canned Goods—There is no new feature of particular interest in the canned goods situation. There are indications of some lines falling short in spot stocks, but whether this is so with canners' stocks is not yet evident, so that the market is unaffected at the present moment.

Sugar—The domestic trade at present moment is tending rather toward the dull side. The market, however, does not treat this slowness with any degree of seriousness. The total season's business has been eminently satisfactory. It is considered that the bulk trade has been almost of the nature of a record. Prices remain unchanged and steady. Many dealers consider a further drop not unlikely, but the universal opinion is that bottom is near by. Foreign reports rather indicate a stronger position. New York reports a slight advance on raws with refined firm.

This week's summary of the statistical position shows stocks in the United States and Cuba together of 301,624 tons, against 318,455 tons last week and 130,305 tons last year, an increase of 171,319 tons over last year.

Stock in Europe, 1,685,000 tons, against 1,457,000 tons last year.

The total stock of Europe and America is 1,986,624 tons, against 1,587,305 tons last year at the same uneven dates and 2,756,298 tons at the even date of January 1 1905. The increase of stock is 399,319 tons, against an increase of 411,679 tons last week, and a decrease of 1,005,740 tons January 1, 1905. Total stocks and afloats, together, show a visible supply of 2,050,624 tons, against 1,702,305 tons last year.

In refined it is stated that prices have held firm throughout the week on the same basis as at the close of last week.

In raws the week under review has shown much activity, with continued firmness in quotations, but without any marked improvement. Quite a large business was done in sugars from warehouse on the basis of 3 9-16c, duty paid, for 96 deg. test, and in Cuba Centrifugals, for shipment, at 2½c c. and f. for 95 deg. test basis. Everything offered at these prices up to the close of the market has been quickly taken. Indications point to a firm re-opening.

Coffee—The domestic consumption is evidently on the steady increase. Whilst no great demand is reported during week under review, still trade has been satisfactory.

Willett & Gray give the following interesting notes in their latest report :

"While option engagements in December in New York were far below the quantities some people encouraged the public to think, transfers to various later months, and the demand for the actual coffee tendered, show steady confidence in the future of the article by speculators and investors. Nothing is more certain than a steady increase in the consumption of coffee, and present and prospective production fall far behind the requirements of the world, and especially when values are attractive to capital and speculation. It is true that stocks in this country are still large, and the trade generally has been working mostly hand-to-mouth, always hoping for a cheaper basis for large purchases. In Europe the interior traders have acted about the same, encouraged by dealers until port and interior stocks have run down to a point that they must be regular buyers in producing markets in the period of small receipts, when the bulk of the current Brazil crop has been disposed of. This outlook naturally encourages Brazil holders, as all reliable authorities are now agreed that the balance of this crop is comparatively small, against which the needs of consumption must continue on the same scale or larger than the forepart of the season.

"In a Brazilian newspaper is the following statement from a large planter, for many years president of the National Society of Agriculture in Brazil : 'The agricultural crisis is due to the excessive cost of all our products,' which statement endorses the many reports in these columns of late, that coffee culture is on the decline, owing to low prices for the product, scarcity and high price of labor, extreme rates in Brazilian currency for interest, transportation and general expenses, added to which unfavorable climatic changes have worked mischief.

"When the turn comes, and now so close at hand, competition by Europe and the States for the balance of this crop will prove interesting, and holders in Brazil already quite firm in their views, will not be slow to take the advantage. The outlook now for the next crop is undoubtedly poorer, but this is a matter that will be of greater importance after the growing period is further advanced."

Tea—The domestic trade has shown improvement during week under review. There has been some interest in greens, and inquiries have been in evidence for good liquoring samples. Prices have also been better maintained. Buyers are satisfied that the present high prices are likely to continue for all good teas, and are therefore more ready to buy. The London market reports Indian prices as somewhat irregular with Ceylons well maintained. There is reported to be a percentible shrinkage in good teas offered, with lower grade teas showing a weakening in values, whilst good qualities manifested an upward tendency.

Foreign Dried Fruits—The local trade continues active for most all lines. In Mediterranean goods trade is concerned more upon filling early advance orders, and any present orders are being quoted on firmer basis. Advices from primal points denote a general development of strength, otherwise previous situation remains unchanged. In California fruits recent reports to hand denote continued strength with advancing markets. The prune market is considerably unsettled. It is reported that there are only some 130 cars of fruit awaiting shipment. At this time there should at least be several hundred ; indeed it will be almost impossible to satisfy demand from all points, so that an advancing market is certain, and it is not unlikely that by the early part of the new year prices will have made considerable advancement. Peels are also firm, but as available stocks are full, it is not likely to materially affect the market.

Coffee—Business in coffee during the week has shown some improvement. The reports of the likely advance in coffee, owing to the very strong statistical position of the market, has led to freer buying. The opinion among those directly concerned with the trade is that higher prices in all coffees must shortly prevail. We quote:

Tea—The tea market shows no change this week. Business is reported fair. Most dealers say there are plenty of inquiries from outside points, but owing to the strong market, and higher prices of the past few weeks, business has been somewhat restricted. Ceylon greens and blacks are firm and held strong by London operators. There has been a fair amount of business in Japans. Ping Sueys are in small supply with a fair amount of inquiry. China blacks are quiet with little business turning. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Business still remains very active in all lines of foreign dried fruits and distribution to the country trade is proceeding rapidly. Prices on most lines retain their firmness and we have no changes of importonce to report in the primary market of Europe. In California, however, an advance in prunes, if not actually in effect as yet, is looked upon as a certainty in the near future, as we hear packers have been refusing orders at prices current last week. On the other hand California raisins are weak and while prices are not quotably lower, some packers we think will be open for reasonable bids. Dates are stronger and in some instances higher prices are reported. We quote:

Rice and Tapioca—There is no change in the rice situation to report. The demand is as usual at this season of the year. Tapioca is one of the most interesting lines among the wholesale jobbers to-day. The price of this article has advanced fully one cent a pound within the last few months and to-day it is practically impossible to import any under 4 1-4c. to 4 1-2c. in jobbing lots. Local stocks are light and holders of any are firm and indisposed to sell. There is every indication of much higher prices, as the latest reports from Singapore are to the effect that planters have found it unsatisfactory, from a financial point of view, to prepare the goods for market. The trade generally may look for high prices for many months to come. Jobbing trade are asking from 5c. to 5 1-2c., according to quantity. We quote:

Spices—Firmness seems to be the leading characteristic in spices, particularly on peppers, Singapore blacks being particularly strong and firm. Other spices are unchanged, with nutmegs still figuring very low. Spice dealers report business satisfactory. We quote:

Beans—The market is very firm and prices are firm at our last week's quotations. Several car lots sold this week at $1.70 per bushel. The high price is partly due to reported shortage in crop, as well as a strong export demand on account of the Russian market, and several large shipments have been made via New York for Russia. We quote:

Choice prime beans	1 75 1 80
Lower grades	1 65 1 75

Evaporated Apples—High prices still prevail in evaporated apples and the latest reports shown The Grocer this week were to the effect that still higher prices may be expected by the trade. Evaporators advise having made sales for account of New York houses at 9c. to 9 1-8c. f.o.b. factory. There is no doubt that the high prices ruling will reduce the consumption locally very materially. Ruling prices among the trade are given at 9 1-4c. to 9 1-2c.

Maple Products— The demand for maple products is light and expected to be on the quiet side until the turn of the year. The attention that has been paid by the Inland Revenue Department to the distribution and sale of pure products has had the effect of making buyers more careful in their selection of maple syrup and maple sugar. Prices will naturally be enhanced if the act is strictly enforced as genuine pure maple sugar should command a higher price than is at present asked for the so-called pure article. We quote:

" in large tins	0 06½ 0 07
Pure Townships sugar, per lb	0 07 0 07
Pure Beauce County, per lb	0 08½ 0 09½

Honey—Honey is in somewhat better demand. This is no doubt due to the cold, unsettled weather that now prevails. Prices are unchanged and are as under:

White clover, extracted tins	0 08
" kegs	0 07½ 0 08
" comb, new	0 12 0 14
Buckwheat	0 06 0 06½

Fish—Advent having opened this week, and coupled with the very favorable and seasonable cold weather, has stimulated the demand for fish to a very considerable length, in fact dealers can hardly keep up with their orders and the fish business may be said to be booming. Owing to warm weather last week some dealers were short of supplies of fresh haddock and cod, while others have had ample supplies to fill all requirements. Frozen sea herring are meeting with good sale. In smoked fish there is an active demand for haddies and kippers and these are both in good supply, but bloaters are scarce, especially the larger sizes, which are known as Yarmouth bloaters. Bulk oysters—December is always one of the best months in the year and the demand this season is even more active than last. Large quantities of bulk oysters will be used during this month, and until after the holiday season, banquets and other festivals being always occasions for a large consumption of oysters, but unless a freeze up occurs in the Southern States, where the oysters are produced, prices will not be materially affected by the heavy demand. In salt fish there is the usual demand for all kinds, particularly so for green cod. Prepared fish are in fair demand only, there being so many other lines on the market. We quote:

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 5, 1905.

BUSINESS is still quite active in grocery lines, but the big Fall and holiday trade has been done. The present activity is in seasonable goods chiefly, dried fruits, nuts, etc., sorting up orders.

There was some uneasiness over a strike on the part of the laborers, with the opening of the Winter port business. The men, however, behaved well and have, after a little delay, accepted the terms of the steamer people. There is a general feeling that the steamer people were too arbitrary, particularly in not allowing even a slight advance in the wage for night work. There can be no doubt it would have well paid them, as the men, better satisfied, and not having a wholly beaten feeling as now, would have done better and more work.

In markets there is little of particular interest. The quantity of American lard here is a feature. It is indeed strange that with a protection of two cents a pound we cannot furnish our own lard. In fact, the lower provinces never furnish their own lard and not even their own oats. It shows the great opportunity for growth and possible expansion, if our people would but go to work. There is too much of the "get rich quick" disease, which yearly costs thousands of dollars in actual loss beside the immense loss in lack of honest effort. The market is a firm one.

Oil—In burning oil the price is still held firm at the slight advance of a few weeks ago, which is still a low one. There is active business. Lubricating oils are quiet. In paint oils, prices are somewhat unsettled, though little changed. Linseeds are still low, and turpentine high. Cod oil is firm. There has been a fair supply this year.

Salt—In Liverpool coarse salt the Winter port steamers have so far brought out very little. There is but a limited demand at this season. Prices are quite firmly held. In fine salt, sale is also light.

Canned Goods—Stocks of vegetables continue to be received. Shipments are not made as early as before the combine. The combine being unable to supply further tomatoes, several of the wholesale grocers in the canners' agreement have bought outside goods. Corn and peas seem a full supply. Fruits have but a steady sale. Salmon move somewhat slowly. Meats are dull Gallon apples held quite firmly owing to the extreme price of evaporated. Blueberries are dull. There is a steady sale for imported sardines, but it is not yet at all a large business. Domestic sardines in fair supply. Haddies and kippers just a fair stock.

Molasses—Prices are low, particularly for Porto Rico, of which there is a fairly large stock. For fancy quality, good figures obtained. Barbadoes is somewhat firmer. The stock is not large.

Fish—In dry cod there have been fair receipts, but stock not large. The market seems hardly as strong, though prices are unchanged; in fact, the situation is still a firm one. Pickled herring are high. Sales rather less active. Stocks are light. The firmer tendency in smoked herring is a very satisfactory feature of the market. Finnan haddies have a steady sale, chiefly west.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour, prices are unchanged. The rather unusually large difference in price between Manitobas and Ontarios is still a feature of the market. Oatmeal is high. A fair sale. Oats are high. In cornmeal, local ground has the sale here, prices unchaned. Beans have had a good sale, owing to the low price of yellow eyes. They have been quite largely bought. The price is firm.

Dried Fruits—There is good steady business. There is now a fair supply of California seeded raisins, though the stock bought this year is the smallest in years. Prices are high. Some New York seeded offered are but fair. A few Malaga seeded seen, cost quite low. In loose raisins, a few Californias here, but chiefly Malagas seen. Valencias freely offered and price is low. Currants are firm. New York continues to supply large quantities and the direct importer feels the last of fair protection. Figs have sold quite largely, being cheap. Dates are firmer, but the later and cheaper shipments are not yet here. Prunes are firm; stock not large. There is a fair supply of apricots and peaches. Evaporated apples are high; this is causing some sale for dried. Onions are firm. Some Valencias are now here. Nuts sell very freely at steady prices.

Sugar—Stocks are light. Dealers have little confidence in the market. English sugar has been offered at low figures this week. There is a good steady sale.

Provisions—While prices are unchanged in barrel pork and beef, the market is perhaps hardly as strong. The fact that the season of best sale is past, of course, has its effect. In both lines American goods largely supply the market.

American pure lard is still in large supply, prices high. Refined lard still low.

Smoked meats high.

In fresh meats, beef is still a dull line. Lamb holds a fair value, but is somewhat lower. Mutton dull. Veal in light supply. Pork is still bringing full figures. Poultry high. We quote:

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 5, 1905.

HALIFAX grocery markets are in a very healthy state at the present time. A good business is being done in all lines and orders from outside points are coming in very freely. Everything gives promise of a large Christmas trade. Money is circulating somewhat freely and collections are fully up to the average. There is a very heavy demand for dried fruits, raisins and currants particularly. Prices are generally well maintained, though some dealers are inclined to cut prices on certain lines to catch trade. One dealer in particular is resorting to this practice. He is selling such articles as Lea and Perrins' sauce for 28 cents per bottle, and Bensdorf's cocoa for 20 cents per small tin, at retail. Some dealers say that these goods cannot be purchased at wholesale for these prices.

Butter and Eggs— The butter market in Halifax does not seem to improve. On all sides is heard the complaint about the shortage and the excessively high price. The consumer of this article very greatly feels the effect of the stiff market. At retail the best creamery prints are quoted at 28 cents, and small tubs of dairy butter are selling at 26 cents. Some of the butter, even at these prices, is not first-class. Up to the present time very little Winter butter has been marketed here and the dealers have no estimate of the farmers' holdings, if any. All the conditions have been favorable for the farmers to come in, but they are still holding off. Importations of butter from the upper provinces continue large. Eggs also continue scarce. Fresh table eggs are quoted at 40 cents per dozen. Case eggs(not warranted) are quoted at 22 cents. Most of the eggs on the market at the present time are P. E. Island stock.

Cheese is a trifle easier in sympathy with the upper province markets.

Apples—The price of apples continues very firm. Heavy shipments of fruit are being made from this port to the British market. Gravensteins are about over, and the Winter varieties are now in demand here. Bishop Pippins are very scarce and the quality marketed here is poor. Blenheims, Ribstons, Kings, Greenings and Russets are the varieties mostly in demand and they are fetching from $3.50 to $4.00 per single barrel.

Fish—The fish landed by the Lunenburg fleet has nearly all been sold, the price obtained for it being the highest in the history of the business. Both vessel owners and crews have had a profitable season. The Halifax dealers purchased most of the Bank fish and paid $6.25 per quintal for it. Heavy receipts of fish from Newfoundland continue to come here, and the warehouses are rapidly filling up.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

New Fard dates are in store with the Eby, Blain Co., Limited.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, report arrival of 50 bags of paper shell almonds, which they are offering at very low quotations.

White & Co., Limited, report the banana market much improved this week. Arrivals are lighter and demand much better than for the past month.

MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, have been appointed agents for the Foreign Packing & Trading Company, New York, importers and packers of sardines, canned vegetables, olive oil, etc. In view of the shortage in both the French and Portuguese packs, sardines which they are now offering are remarkable value.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

Mr. H. B. Marshall, of the office staff of J. Y. Griffin & Co., Limited, Winnipeg, is enjoying holidays this week.

James T. Madden, president Wm. Ryan Company, left this week on a two months' pleasure trip to Bermuda.

Mr. C. F. Fisher, of Montreal, has returned this week from a business trip to St. John, Halifax and Cape Breton. He reports business as being very good, although the scarceness of all kinds of fish in parts of Nova Scotia has had a bad effect.

Mr. S. Wigle, mayor of Kingsville, Ont., was a visitor to Montreal last week. Mr. Wigle, who is very largely interested in the Canadian tobacco industry, reports trade has been exceedingly good in Montreal for Western Ontario domestic leaf tobacco.

Mr. Walter H. Crabbe, representing Canada Maple Exchange, Montreal, is making his last trip this season through Ontario. Mr. Crabbe will be in Toronto next week, and no doubt Small's maple products will be well looked after.

Mr. A. N. Reay, the Canadian representative of the Force Food Co., was in Montreal this week. In addition to developing business for the firm, he was busily engaged introducing to the trade J. H. E. Davis, who will take charge of the Quebec territory for the company

Mr. T. C. Savage, representing L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, in the Maritime Provinces and Prince Edward Island, was met by The Grocer in his firm's offices this week. Mr. Savage makes an annual trip to headquarters for a thorough posting on all lines. Trade in the Maritime Provinces is reported as very satisfactory by Mr. Savage. Mr. Savage's headquarters in the east are at Charlottetown, P.E.I.

DOMINION C. T.'S ANNUAL BANQUET.

The annual banquet of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association will be held in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on Thursday, December 21. The committee report that from all indications this banquet will be the best in the history of the association. The lists of invited guests and speakers are in the first rank of commercial, legal, literary and Parliamentary life, and a good treat is in store for the guests.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 7th, 1905.)

CONDITIONS in the Winnipeg wholesale grocery trade continue very satisfactory. Colder weather has given a marked impetus to trade in many lines, and there is a heavy movement of Christmas goods. Collections show a marked improvement in most parts of the west, the only complaints being in regard to districts where, because of car shortages, there has been delay in marketing the crop. The west was never in sounder condition than at present and the wholesale trade are not anxious about any temporary troubles which can easily be explained.

The last week has seen a sharp advance in oatmeal, but the recent advance in cornmeal is not likely to be maintained. In all probability the next fortnight will see a decline in cornmeal.

Sugar is steady and for the time seems to have struck the bottom price. There is little confidence displayed in the market by the trade and buying is strictly for immediate requirements.

Canned Goods—New season canned pumpkins are on the market and are quoted at 5c. higher than was at first announced. There is a steady demand for canned goods, but there are no other new features of note. We quote:

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Crest Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

Stop and Think!

Mr. Grocer, do you know that the sales of are increasing, and yet you are missing the opportunity to sell it regularly? Isn't that a mistake on your part?

Orange Meat

Orange Meat is made "differently" to other breakfast foods, that is why it is better.

Only the finest grade of wheat is used, and the manufacturing is done in a cereal plant, the acme of cleanliness.

Orange Meat is put up in Mercerized Bags (inside the packages) which keep the food fresh.

The coupons in the 15c. packages and the price of the Jumbo package bring trade.

Order Orange Meat regularly and thereby get your share of the business.

Flour and Cereal Foods

TORONTO.

Dec. 8, 1905.

FLOUR dealers continue to express dissatisfaction at the lack of attention given their orders by the railway companies. Great difficulty is still experienced in getting deliveries; trade in consequence is suffering. The domestic trade is reported as very good, millers have been free buyers, and Manitoba wheats have strengthened ½ to 1c. Inquiries from the Maritime Provinces are showing decline, probably owing to the fact that they have stocked up fairly well lately, and are in consequence filled up.

The export trade has also shown a measure of dullness; prices have been difficult to maintain on European markets, and the uncertainty of receiving consignments to any given date is an important feature which is very depressing to sales.

Oats are in fair demand, but prices, ranging as they do several cents above U.S. prices, precludes the material increase in export sales.

Peas are in active demand, and are commanding firmer quotations. Other grains are in steady demand, but without distinctive feature.

Quotations generally are well maintained; a degree of fluctuation has been apparent throughout the week under review, but this has been attributed to some local feature rather than to any distinct market importance.

The feeling among dealers rather leans to the belief that indications are pointing toward a decline in values, as the market settles to Winter conditions.

PROGRESS OF GRAIN INSPECTION.

NO less than 32,052,250 bushels of the 1905 crop have been inspected at Winnipeg up to November 30, according to figures compiled from the returns of Chief Grain Inspector David Horn.

A comparison of these figures with those of the corresponding period in previous years shows the marked superiority of this year's crop. During September, October and November, the first three months of the present crop year, a total of 30,525 cars of wheat has been inspected, of which 551 cars were inspected at Calgary and the balance at Winnipeg.

Last year during the same period there were 20,120 cars, and 21,126,000 bushels inspected, and in 1903, 18,494,000 bushels passed inspection.

With the exception of the crop of 1902, the quality of which was better, but the quantity far short of that of this year, the present year's crop is the best in the history of the west.

A PERSONAL NOTE.

The staff of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, in anticipation of the removal from Winnipeg of L. H. Bennett, presented him with a handsome mahogany music cabinet and de luxe volume of "Golden Treasury of Song," accompanied by an address containing the names of the various members of the staff. In the address expression was given to the fraternal feeling existing between him and other members of the staff and regret at his prospective departure from the city.

The gift was an especially appropriate one, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett having been active members of the city's musical circle during their five or six years' sojourn in Winnipeg. Mr. Bennett is severing his connection with the Ogilvie Company and leaves during the present week to enter on an engagement in the office of the Leitch Bros., millers, of Oak Lake.

TO BE USED AT LAST.

The grain elevator at Halifax, N.S., which has been idle since its building six years ago, is being got ready for operation during the Winter season. Arrangements have been made for regular shipping of grain at this port and a consignment of two hundred thousand bushels will arrive early this month for export to Liverpool and Havre on Allan line steamers. The grain will be carried over the Intercolonial and it is expected that most of the mail steamers will receive full cargoes at Halifax, where shipping facilities have been greatly improved during the past Summer.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Flour.

The flour market is unchanged this week. There was a decline of 20c. per bbl. in the price of Manitoba instituted by the larger Manitoba millers. There is, however, no general tendency to do any cutting, as there is a good demand for Ontario and Manitoba flour from both city and country trade. Heavy exports were made last week, when the steamer Wyandotte carried nearly 40,000 bags for South Africa. We quote :

Winter wheat patents	4 60	4 80

Rolled Oats.

There is no change to report in the situation of rolled oats. Firmness is the leading characteristic, despite the fact that stocks are heavy at present. We quote :

Feed.

Feed of all descriptions is in good demand, particularly Manitoba bran, which is selling at $17 per ton in bags. Ontario bran is very scarce and the market almost depleted of stock. Manitoba shorts at $19 per ton having good sale, while Ontario at $20 to $20.50 is also selling well. Mouillie is unchanged. We quote :

Ontario shorts	20 00	25 50
Manitoba shorts	19 00	19 50
" bran	17 00	17 25
Mouillie, milled	21 00	24 00
" straight grained	25 00	28 00

Hay.

There is a good local demand for hay at somewhat easier prices. Supplies are increasing rapidly even in the better grades. Several lots of No. 2 ordinary are also on the market, having missed the last outgoing steamer, and this has had a tendency to weaken prices, as they will have to be sold on this market. We quote :

Clover, pink	5 50	6 00

WINNIPEG.

Oatmeal has been sharply advanced and the new prices will be found below. Cornmeal, however, is not likely to maintain the advance noted last week, and a decline is expected within another week. We quote as follows :

Bran Waste is One Great Difference Between Good and Poor Flours

The food part of flour is "protein."

Protein makes brain muscle and brain. There is no protein in bran.

Bran is the outside part, the husk or "bark" of the wheat.

Bran is the part of the wheat which is absolutely without food value to the human system.

Bran represents part of the difference between "Royal Household" Flour and whole wheat flour or cheap, inferior flours that are poorly milled and not thoroughly purified.

No other flour in this country is so thoroughly and completely separated from the waste as is "Royal Household," because no other mills are so well equipped or exclusively devoted to the production of scientifically pure flour as "Royal Household" Mills.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

APPLES FOR GERMANY AND FRANCE.

MR. P. W. DUNCAN, commission merchant, New York, is spending a few weeks in the Colborne section buying apples for export to Germany. He purchased Mr. J. E. McDonald's entire pack amounting to eight thousand barrels and Mr. A. Loomis, of Brighton, sold him his pack amounting to six thousand barrels.

The Colborne apple market is exceedingly brisk at this season. Apples are coming to Colborne along all the roads these days, many arriving by train also. The quantity to be placed in store is estimated at over 100,000 barrels, while shipments are heavy every week. Although having just completed a large new storehouse, R. and J. Coyle are compelled to send over 5,000 barrels to Trenton for storage. A woman from France was at Colborne this week and contracted with Jas. Coyle for a large number of barrels of apples. It is stated also that there are a number of orchards in vicinity still unpicked, as apple buyers have experienced difficulty in getting sufficient help to pack and store the big crop.

ORANGE PICKING STARTED AT REDLANDS.

C. M. Brown, manager of the Redlands Golden Orange Association, writes from Redlands, Cal., under recent date, regarding the orange situation, as follows:

"Weather conditions have continued very favorable and oranges are coloring much more rapidly than was anticipated a week ago. We shall start picking on Monday, the 20th, having several cars for immediate shipment that will be the best colored oranges in the State, and the quality and texture is as fine as silk. While the oranges here are coloring much more rapidly than was anticipated, at the same time this condition is confined almost entirely to the Redlands district. Redlands is much earlier than any other section in Southern California if not in the State.

"Shipments will necessarily be light for the first few days, after which time the supplies will be more liberal. However, there is nothing to indicate at present that there will be any heavy shipments for the holiday trade this season, especially as the sizes will run small. In the first car of navels sold in New York at auction there were only eleven boxes of 126s and larger. However, the sizes of Redlands oranges will be considerable improvement over this."

FRUIT GROWERS' CONVENTION.

Dr. Woods, of St. John's, Que., president of the Fruit Growers' Association of the Province of Quebec, was in Richmond last week arranging for the annual convention of the association, which will take place on the 13th and 14th December, at which delegates from all parts of the province will be present. There will be afternoon and evening sessions, which will be open to the general public. The evening meetings will be diversified by musical and vocal selections by Richmond and Melbourne amateurs. Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, Prof. Saunders, Prof. Robertson and others are expected to be present.

BEAN CROPS AND MARKET.

AT the present time, when the condition of the bean market has been somewhat uncertain, the following report from J. B. Stringer & Co., Chatham, Ontario, will be instructive reading:

"We beg to report an active demand has prevailed for the new crop since it came on the market, and with large shipments forwarded, and more following to meet the foreign demand from the U. K. and France, it is estimated to-day that 50 per cent. of the crop is already out of producers' hands. We are glad to say the quality of the crop runs excellent, but yield has proved comparatively short. Threshing returns show an average of about 12 to 15 bushels per acre, while ordinarily the yield is 20 to 25 bushels. This inclines dealers to view the future of the market as likely to be higher.

"We quote present values $1.50 per bush. for standard primes (3 lb. pickers per bush.) and $1.60 per bush. for hand-picked, subject 1 lb. picking or waste per bush. The hand-picking is done by women and girls, and it is found the work of the most careful when tested will show on an average about 1 lb. of imperfect beans, etc., to the bush. However, this is not enough to materially hurt their looks.

"The bean producing district lies principally within the confines of the county of Kent, and in a good season the production runs up to 500,000 bush., or a little more.

"A firm market is anticipated for balance of the crop."

CALIFORNIA OLIVES.

Up to this time but a small quantity of the California olives has found its way into the markets east of Chicago, the call for them in the west having been more than equal to the supply. Minneapolis, Omaha, New Orleans, San Francisco and the City of Mexico have all been good points for the sale of the olives from this coast this year. There is a feeling among horticulturists all over California that the eastern people being wedded to the peculiar flavor of the green olives of the Old World there, and having a conservatism that is unknown in the west, hard work and patient effort will be required to cultivate a general consumption there of olives from California. The wonderful success, however, of the last seven years in introducing California prunes and raisins in the most conservative eastern markets gives the olive growers good reason for believing their product will in time be as popular there.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

LOCAL trade has been dull and uninteresting. Dealers are stocking heavily in view of Christmas trade for which prospects are considered excellent.

Arrivals of foreign fruits are coming in in good quality and quantity. Six cars of Florida oranges were dispatched for Toronto on the 23rd, 24th and 25th November. Since these cars were shipped there has been continuous rain, which has delayed picking and packing and will have a detrimental effect on the next pickings, making them puffy and poor keeping qualities.

The second car of holly is expected to arrive this week.

Cranberries are still fetching high prices, the scarcity having the effect of strengthening prices very materially.

Our prices have been completely revised and rearranged to meet the holiday quotations.

FRESH AND CURED FISH

TORONTO.

THE fish trade in Toronto is probably one which is equal in importance, proportionately, to any other food trade, and it has made rapid strides. This Winter season has opened up eminently satisfactorily, demand being good for all lines.

The prominent dealers in oysters made, well in advance, special arrangements to cope with that trade, with the result that never before have such a fine lot of oysters been placed so continuously before the public, who on their part have been quick to appreciate it.

Some arrivals of deep sea fish have been on market from the Atlantic Coast, but not in great quantities. It is, however, expected that this line will make considerable more headway. White fish and trout are at the present time greatly in favor and have the advantage of being moderate in price. Except in Labrador herring, which is decidedly firmer, no change in quotations is noticeable.

THEIR FIRST DEMONSTRATION.

MR. J. J. COWIE, the Scotch fish expert, with the Misses Campbell, Wood and Gault, Caller herrin' lassies, sent by the Dominion Government to give the Nanaimo fishermen instructions in the best methods of curing fish, gave their first demonstration on November 16, which was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators and which proved that Mr. Cowie and the lassies were certainly experts in their line.

Most of the day was taken up in repacking a consignment of last year's fish which the demonstration clearly proved had not been properly packed.

Asked as to what he thought of the herring caught in last night's run, Mr. Cowie pronounced them as excellent, and with the one exception, namely, that they were a trifle smaller, fully up to the high standard of those caught on the Atlantic coast.

He thought there would be no difficulty in putting up the fish, of which there are now unlimited quantities, to keep as long as desired.

A series of demonstrations will commence at the curing establishments of the Nanaimo Fishing Co. and the Gulf of Georgia Co., Protection Island. The former company is adopting Mr. Cowie's method of curing fish and his system will be strictly adhered to. For the present two brands known as the "Thistle," which is Scotch cured, and the "Viking" brand, Norway cured, will be manufactured and ready for the export trade at once.

The harbor presented an animated appearance. Dozens of fishing boats and small tugs were busily engaged in hauling in their nets laden with tons upon tons of fish, and re-setting them.

The herring industry, which is still in its infancy, means much to Nanaimo as it furnishes employment to upwards of a hundred men with the resultant monthly pay roll of several thousand dollars.

Mr. Cowie and his associates expect to remain six or eight weeks.

One of the peculiar features of the herring run this season was the large number of whales that were seen in deep water. Fishermen on the outside report that they never saw the equal; one fisherman who saw them said there must have been hundreds and their continuous spouting made a most extraordinary sight, somewhat resembling hundreds of small geysers on the water.

HALIBUT AND COD LOCATION.

A TABLE of the fishing banks in the North Pacific Ocean reprinted from the Pilot Chart for the month of December of the present year has been issued, giving complete data relating particularly to the halibut and cod fisheries.

By this chart it is shown that codfish and small halibut are abundant where the bottom is either black sand and gravel or grey sand, gravel and broken shells, the latter predominating on the principal cod banks. The depth of water on these banks ranges from as low as eleven fathoms to as high as ninety fathoms, no apparent difference being recorded on account of the depth of water.

The principal banks for cod fishing recorded in the chart are in the northern waters. Slime Bank in Bering Sea, named from an intermediate zone of jellyfish which cover fishing lines and bait with slime; Baird Bank at Bristol Bay, and Portlock Bank, northeast of Kadiak Island, are the largest banks where codfish and small halibut are numerous and red rock fish fairly abundant.

Extensive Banks.

Slime Bank covers an area of 1,445 square miles, and the depth of water is from twenty to fifty fathoms. The bottom is black sand and gravel. Baird Bank is the largest given in the chart. It covers 9,200 square miles, and the depth of the water is recorded as from eleven to fifty-three fathoms. The bottom is grey sand, black sand and gravel. Portlock Bank has 6,800 square miles, with a depth of water ranging from thirty-seven to sixty-seven fathoms, and a bottom of grey sand, gravel and broken shells. Another one of the larger banks and where the greatest depth of water is given is Albatross Bank, southeast of Kadiak Island. While this bank has not been as fully investigated as the others, cod, small halibut and red rock fish are said to be fairly plentiful. The bank extends for 3,700 square miles, and the depth of water ranges from twenty-seven to ninety fathoms.

North of Vancouver Island is another large bank where cod, halibut and red rock fish are taken in large numbers. This is one of the easiest banks to fish. The water is charted at forty-four fathoms and the season is from March to September. The area of this bank is given as 2,000 to 3,000 square miles, with a bottom of sand and gravel.

Off Cape Flattery.

Flattery Bank, off Cape Flattery is an excellent ground for halibut, but the other fish are not found in such numbers as on the other banks charted. The bank covers an area of 1,100 square miles, but the best fishing is about eleven miles northwest from Cape Flattery lighthouse and covering an area of about thirty-five square miles.

The chart gives only two mackerel banks, and these have not been thoroughly tested. One is near Attu Island and the other around Atka Island. The depth of water or size of the banks is not given, and the statement is simply that mackerel are known to inhabit these two sections in fairly large quantities.

The chart also records the discovery of oysters along the west coast of Mexico of an excellent quality and closely resembling the species of the Atlantic coast of the United States. It is suggested that these oysters should be introduced in the California beds.

CANNING ON VANCOUVER ISLAND

AT Victoria, B.C., while cannerymen are not likely to make any move in the way of making practical preparations for the ensuing year until March, they have for some time been discussing plans. The operations on Vancouver Island in the past year have established one fact beyond all doubt, namely, that the practice pursued by nearly all the trap men of shipping salmon to the Fraser involves a serious loss both in quality of the fish and in the running expenses of the industry. The question now confronts all of how this trouble can be overcome. It is conceded by all that to can the fish on Vancouver Island is the only way in which the difficulty can be obviated. Cannerymen, even though they be the most enthusiastic mainlanders, have also to acknowledge the fact that once the salmon enter fresh water they deteriorate and continue to do so until they reach the headwaters of the stream, this deterioration amounting, it is said, to twenty-five per cent. of their nutritive quality in three days after they leave the salt water. Reasoning from this, therefore, it will be seen that any salmon caught off Vancouver Island should demand a higher price in the markets of the world than any other canned on the Pacific coast, for the situation here is unique in that this is the only place on the Pacific where the fish are trapped as they come out of the ocean currents.

QUEBEC FISHERY CONGRESS.

Hon. Jean Prevost has requested the Department of Fisheries to send a representative to the Congress of Fish and Game to be held at Montreal on December 13 and 14. Mr. S. T. Bastedo, Deputy Minister, will represent the province by request of Hon. Dr. Reaume.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

GET IN ADVANCE.

DO not leave all your preparations for the holiday season until the last minute. This is the time when you should do your planning, not only in regard to the goods you will sell, but the methods you will adopt to sell them.

You remember that last year you said a few days before Christmas that if you only had the time you would do certain things. The time is yours now, unless you let it slip through your fingers; make time just now to sit down and first of all ask yourself what you are going to make the special confectionery features of your holiday trade. Then plan your store attractions and decorations; if they require any elaborations you will have plenty of time to put in the extra touches. It will be by doing something that has been carefully thought out that you will win success in this as in any other project.

These eleventh hour plans as a rule are failures, besides entailing an amount of worry and hustle out of proportion to the results. A good motto at this particular time with regard to matters of this kind is "Do it now."

GOOD PROSPECTS AHEAD.

IF one is to judge from the present activity of the large confectionery establishments, there will be a large Fall and holiday trade.

Orders have come in very freely of late not only for goods for present consumption, but for holiday requirements, which this year are being anticipated somewhat further in advance.

With the keen competition for business there has been a development of enterprise and skill in the production of specialties that has brought the product to a high state of perfection. In high class goods Canada is to-day turning out as handsome and as well made lines as can be found anywhere. The people seem willing to pay prices that were not possible a few years ago. The importation of high priced lines has perhaps helped to accomplish this much.

In spite of this development there are some concerns who think the object in manufacturing is to market goods as cheaply as possible. There are lines being made by some concerns that are not only below the requirements of the times, but take the place of better and more profitable goods. Prices are fairly well maintained, but occasionally one hears of a cut.

TWO SIMPLE RECEIPTS.

Pecan Nut Loaf.

Make a maple cream as follows: Dissolve ten pounds of maple sugar, four pounds of common sugar with sufficient water, set on good fire, add a small teaspoonful acetic acid and cook to two hundred and forty-two degrees; pour out on a clean wet marble, and as soon as it stops bubbling on the marble, sprinkle over about half a pint of cold water and let partly cool. Turn into cream with a spatula and when it runs together into a lump, immediately cover with a damp cloth, and let lie for half an hour, then knead it into a smooth paste, reheat it a little, add about four or five pounds of pecan nuts, and pour out into a square loaf in a neat wooden frame. When cold remove the frame and cut as sold into thin strips.

Unwrapped Caramels.

Take ten pounds of sugar, six pounds of glucose, four quarts condensed milk and six ounces of cocoa butter. Place the sugar and glucose in a small copper pan, then next add about half the milk, set on the fire and stir and cook for about five minutes; then add another quart of milk, cook a few minutes longer then add the last quart of the milk and also the cocoa butter and cook to a good hard ball; pour out on greased marble between iron bars, let cool and then cut into small squares. Flavor with vanilla, strawberry or chocolate, adding nuts to suit your trade.

DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION OF WESTERN CANADA.

THE first of a series of meetings of cheesemakers and patrons of the various districts under the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario was held at Listowel, November 21.

Mr. I. W. Steinzoff, of Stratford, director of the association, occupied the chair and said the system of instruction followed by the association, as he knew from his experience as a cheese buyer, resulted in a marked improvement in the general quality of the cheese of Western Ontario.

Chief Instructor Barr said the factories had been grouped into seven districts, each in charge of an instructor, and instruction had been given in 217 factories. The result had been a much more uniform and better quality of product. The Listowel district was still at the head, due to the peculiarity favorable to natural conditions of air and climate, but other places were coming up fast.

A full and interesting discussion followed on the difficulties met with and how best to overcome them. The question of a Government license for factories was discussed, only such factories as were kept clean and sanitary to be allowed to operate.

From reports gathered by Mr. Barr it was shown that out of 162 makers, 82 only wore aprons, that 97 makers wore clean clothes and 65 did not, floors were clean in 110 factories, gutters in 132 and utensils in 114, in only 12 factories were the whey tanks cleaned as often as once a week. Discussing the bitter flavor with which some factories are troubled, Instructor Barr said: "Bitter flavor bacteria is just common dirt."

Improve each opportunity to do good, and slight every one that points to evil.

ADULTERATION AT WINNIPEG.

As a result of the recent visit of the Inspector of Foods for the Department of Inland Revenue to Winnipeg and the west, sixteen wholesale and retail merchants have, within the past few weeks, been fined by the Department for selling to the public adulterated goods. Most of those fined were Winnipeg dealers, though there were a few who had been infringing the law in some of the Manitoba towns.

The fines were all light, in the neighborhood of ten or twelve dollars, and were intended more as a warning than anything else. The inspector on his Winnipeg visit took samples of food and then sent them east to be analyzed, and as a result of the analysis these fines for the infraction of the pure food laws have been imposed. The maximum fine is $50.

Adulterated Pepper.

For the infringement of the law there were more fines for adulterated cream of tartar and black pepper than anything else. Pepper seems to be a favorite article to adulterate. One firm the Department got after for selling adulterated marmalade and another for impure maple syrup. Jams and jellies were found in several instances to have foreign substances mixed with them. Most of those fined are quietly paying up and taking the lesson to heart, the officials hope. A few are making protest, claiming that the wrong parties have been fined. One dealer in particular says that he bought the food in good faith, believing it was pure, and he thinks it is utterly unfair to fine him, and the manufacturer is the one who should have the law after him.

Manufacturer at Fault.

J. T. Gosnell, Winnipeg collector of the Department of Inland Revenue, said there was undoubtedly much in the dealer's contention. He had no doubt that in many cases, possibly the majority of the instances, it was the manufacturer who was at fault. He claimed that the trouble was that it was exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to reach the producer, especially, as was often the case, if he lived in a foreign country. The only way to protect the public was to hold the man who sells the goods responsible. If the dealer insisted only on pure foods, he would soon bring the manufacturer to time.

Not Necessarily Injurious.

Mr. Gosnell pointed out that many of the goods which are adulterated do not necessarily contain injurious ingredients. Many of the mixtures to cheapen the goods are not in any way deleterious. "The difficulty is," said Mr. Gosnell, "they are not what they are represented to be. For instance I have been told that sometimes in making apple jelly turnips are mixed with the apples. Enough apples are put in to make the color and give the flavor. Now there is no special harm in turnips, but they do not make apple jelly."

KEYSTONE SUGAR CO. CONSTRUCTION.

The Keystone Sugar Company have let the contract for the erection of the sugar factory to a Michigan construction company. The contract price for the buildings is not less than $150,000. The structural steel in the Wiarton factory and the machinery of that plant will be removed to Whitby. The contract calls for the completion of the buildings by August 15, 1906. The work of dismantling the Wiarton factory and assembling the material at Whitby will commence forthwith. It will require at least one hundred and fifty cars to transport the material.

The site of the factory at Whitby is on the waterfront, the harbor having been purchased by the sugar company. The main building runs from the steamboat wharf easterly to the power house of the town waterworks and electric light plant. Two of the beet sheds will be along the wharf for handling beets by water. The other three sheds are for wagon and railway supplies. The storage capacity of the five sheds will be 12,000 tons. Portland cement construction will be used largely in the erection of these buildings.

"Eggs may go to 30 cents, the paper says," remarked the traveler's wife at the breakfast table.

"Humph! These look like it already" replied her worthy hubby.

CIGAR PERFECTION

And How it is exemplified in the PEBBLE and PHARAOH

As a 5-center, no grocer could wish to handle a better cigar than the Pebble.

As a 10-center, no grocer could wish to handle a better cigar than the Pharaoh.

The care and skill of experts is embodied in the Pebble and Pharaoh Cigars, besides the strictest tobacco selection.

The Pebble and Pharaoh Cigars are known as the "cigars that satisfy."

FIRST PRINCIPLE—KNOW
SECOND PRINCIPLE—SELL

You must first know the tobacco that is suitable for the Grocery business. After you "know" the "suitable" tobacco, you should sell it. The name of course, is not new to you. Many times you have heard of it. Many times you have perhaps thought of stocking up, but "put off." Yet, despite this, you rather incline to the belief that T. & B. is the tobacco. No grocer can help believing that.

In most things you "act" after you have "considered." Why the exception when it is tobacco you are dealing with?

You know and believe in T. & B. By all means, sell it!

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

THE KRINTON PIPE.

THE Krinton pipe, put on the market some little time ago, has acquired a very firm hold on the market and on the public. The patent feature of the pipe lies in the mouthpiece, the lip of which is so constructed that the tongue of the smoker fits under it, so that the smoke cannot burn the tongue, while the fan-like shape of the bore at the lip ensures the even distribution of the smoke. Cool and pleasant to smoke, it is made in a range of shapes and sizes, and is well worth the attention of those tobacconists who have not yet stocked it.

SMOKING RACES.

"Smoking races" are the latest development of student life in Germany. They are usually held at drinking clubs and form a novel feature of these occasions. Huge pipes are made specially for this purpose, having a capacity of from one to three ounces of tobacco. All pipes must be identical in shape and construction and are filled with the same quantity of tobacco to a grain.

At a given signal the contestants apply lighted tapers to the bowls and begin to puff vigorously at the stem, while through clouds of smoke the other students urge their favorites on to greater endeavor.

The winner is he who first reduces the contents of the bowl to a white ash. Leaving in the bottom of the bowl a small unconsumed portion disqualifies entrant. There is no attempt made to enjoy the smoke, the sole effort being to consume the quantity in the shortest possible time, and long before the goal is reached the pipes are so hot that the smoke almost blisters the lips of the contestants.—New York Herald.

WHAT A GOOD "SMOKE" DID.

Mark Twain is an inveterate smoker, and whenever a long journey is before him a plentiful supply of tobacco is provided. Once when he was about to sail for Honolulu he located a wholesale dealer in cheroots and bought 3,000 of them, together with fifteen pounds of pipe tobacco. In the afternoon he went back to the store and bought 3,000 cheroots more. That evening, shortly after beginning his lecture, he surprised his manager, who was in the audience, by beckoning him to come up on the stage. The summons was obeyed with alacrity, much to the curiosity of the audience. The manager mounted the platform and when at the lecturer's side Mark Twain stopped in his talk and, turning to him, said: "I fear that cigar place may close before I get through here. Go there now and get 1,500 cheroots." He then continued his lecture as though nothing had happened. Next day he sailed with 7,500 cheroots and 15 pounds of tobacco, perfectly happy and with his mind at rest.

TWO NOVEL TOBACCO ADS.

A cigar store in Wisconsin put a premium on home-run hits during the baseball series in which the town was entered. A $5.00 case pipe was offered to the player on any team who first succeeded in hitting the ball for a circuit of the bases. No conditions whatever were attached to the prize, the first home run securing the pipe. The offer was announced to both teams on the first day, and the enthusiastic slugging that resulted was a good advertisement to the cigarist, who had of course made much of the prize in the local papers, and even had it written up in the sporting column.

A rather clever idea in advertising, designed to awaken public curiosity and keep people guessing, was originated by one wideawake man in a small town. On a number of billboards scattered throughout the outlying country districts, in a space in the local papers, and even on the sidewalk near his store appeared announcements reading simply: "Where is the man?" "Who is the man?" This was mystifying, and everybody began to query where and who was the man anyway. Before the interest in the matter had time to flag, the announcements were altered to read: "Where is the man that cannot find a cigar to suit him at Blank's?" Who is the man who carries the best and finest line of cigars and toabecos you ever saw? Tom Blank—he is the man."

A TRADE NEWSPAPER PUBLISHER.

LONDON'S new Lord Mayor is a trade newspaper publisher. Coming of a family of bankers, he began to follow in the footsteps of his ancestors, but was one of the first to see the tendency of modern time was to specialization.

He saw that there were many classes and communities which needed a more complete news service than the daily and weekly newspapers could afford to collect or publish. With his brothers he established the Grocer. This was followed by the Ironmonger and Chemist and Druggist. The first passed into the hands of his brother-in-law many years ago. Later the brothers established a similar series of papers in Australia.

The New Lord Mayor of London.

Walter Vaughan Morgan, one of the founders of our English contemporaries—The Grocer and The Ironmonger.

The two surviving brothers, the Lord Mayor and Mr. Septimus Morgan, do not now devote much time to their publishing business. They visit their offices for an hour every Friday when they are in London. The real work is now being done by their sons and nephews. The boys are very wealthy in their own right—one of them being a multimillionaire, yet they work extremely hard.

Under their fathers the papers were the greatest of their class in the world, but the young men are making them better still. It is said the editorial expenses of the Ironmonger alone amount to over $1,500 a week. In this they have a monopoly. Some years ago Mr. Ingram, of the London Illustrated News, and C. Arthur Pearson, who was then associated with him, had been looking with jealous eyes at the Morgan Brothers great property, and started a paper to compete. They lost about $275,000 before they abandoned it, and the Ironmonger was stronger than ever.

The Lord Mayor as well as his brother have large investments in Canada. The former is a director of the Hudson Bay Co. The latter had more faith in Canada than Canadians themselves, for he bought heavily of Canadian Pacific around 40 and sold at about 150.

The position of Lord Mayor is no sinecure. He receives a large salary, but the expenses of the position will require him to spend from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars during the year out of his own pocket. His duties are quite onerous. Here are his engagements for an average day: 9.45 a.m., small committee at Mansion House; 10.45, magisterial work for about an hour and a half; 12.15 to 1.15, signing papers; 1.30, luncheon of about twenty; 3 p.m., public meeting re education in South Africa at Mansion House; 7 p.m., chief guest at dinner given by the Plumbers Company, one of the ancient guilds of the city.

There was a long discussion of a project to rent club rooms for the members in Winnipeg, and a committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. A. L. Johnson, McGowan and Wilson to make inquiries as to suitable rooms and report at the annual meeting on December 16.

As some changes in the charter of the association were deemed advisable a committee composed of D. J. Dyson, G. F. Bryan, A. L. Johnson and F. J. C. Cox was appointed to make recommendations and report.

POWDERED MILK.

Canada has developed a fine trade in condensed milk, but New Zealand has gone into the production of dried milk, which is finding a good market in Europe. The powder, when mixed with eight or nine times its bulk in water, gives a mixture about like fresh milk. The new preparation is found by English chemists to be uniform in composition and free from germs, while the fat is more digestible than that of ordinary cream. Will Canada take this cue?

POINTERS FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS

GENIUS WASTED IN IDLENESS.

THIS is a story of a young man who had real ability and never exerted himself to put it to good use. There can be no doubt, writes Norman Morris, that Adair was a genius. He could write. He began as a reporter on a country newspaper. He wanted to get to a city. The fact that Adair did make a decided impression, and that within a year after his advent as a metropolitan newspaper man, proves that he was a real genius. He was no flash in the pan, a man who could do one or two good stories and then lie down. He "had it in him" to do good work and to do it right along. He had a whole lot of good work in him, and with men of this kind it is only a question of getting it out, and then success written in big letters and interspersed at frequent intervals with the desirable dollar sign is theirs to have and to hold. Adair had it in him. If he had only got it out there is no telling where he might be at this day. But as he never did get it out, he is still working for a reporter's wages on a small paper down south.

When Adair made his first hit the world opened up brightly for him. It was only a common newspaper "story" that first attracted attention, but it was the kind of a story that would have attracted attention if it had been printed on yellow wrapping paper and put around a bar of soap. Other men had taken the same subject, for it was an old one, and worked at it hard without doing anything startling with it. But under the sway of the young genius it became a thing for men to sit up and gasp at when they read it. The fashion in which Adair wrote made it an epic. It had everything in it that the well written story should have in it, and besides it had that which men may sit down and try to define, the touch of genius. It was a sensation in the profession for a full day after it was printed, and this is a novelty in a profession where yesterday's paper is as a thing of ancient history. It got Adair offers from two papers and it got him also an advance of salary.

A year later Adair began to attract attention with his feature stories. He was then just 24. He wrote stories that men who had grown gray at the trade would have given a hand to have written. He had a style about his work that made it popular without cheapening it in quality, and his prospects grew brighter day by day. He sold one or two stories to the magazines, and a female magazine reviewer swelled his head almost shamefully by comparing his work with the early efforts of Kipling.

His friends discussed him, and waited and hoped for the day when "Old Adair" should come before the public with a book. "He'll show 'em what real writing is when he gets started," they said. After awhile they began to say: "Don't you think Old Adair loafs a little too much?" A year later they were telling each other what a fool Adair was for wasting his chances. He had everything before him, he had the goods, all that was necessary was for him to put them on the market. And his friends waited and waited, and the goods came not.

The fact of the matter was that Adair had never adopted the habit of being industrious. He didn't want to work any more than he had to. In the early days, when he was only a reporter, he never tried to do any work outside of the mere routine of his assignments. When he had any spare time he got away some place with the rest of the fellows and devoted the time to talk and drink. The rest of the fellows, not having any particular ability, were not to be particularly blamed for wasting their time, but with Adair it was different. He had not merely ability, but genius, and a genius shouldn't throw himself away.

After awhile his friends began to talk to him. They told him that they were surprised to see no new work under his name. They advised him to buckle down and turn out something. Adair, being young, took this in the light of patronage and grew angry. When he wanted any fatherly advice he knew where to go for it, and he wasn't in need of any just now, thank you. His friends, also becoming angry, told him to go where the ice man cometh not, for all they cared, and left the young genius strictly to himself. A few editors wrote to him at intermittent periods asking for some of his stuff and Adair drifted along, doing work of a poor quality, and doing only enough of that to make a living. When he did decide to buck up and work hard, he found that he had the habit of not working so well rooted in his system that getting down to a desk for a protracted session of work was torture. As he did not love to be tortured by his own hand he didn't work much.

People who didn't know the inside facts of the case wondered why the brilliant Adair wasn't breaking into print more often than he did, but his friends knew, and called him a fool for throwing away his chances. So he drifted from one paper to another, never holding a position for any length of time, never turning out anything but mediocre work. He is still doing this. Even now he could do work that would soon make him well known, if he would apply himself to the task, but the "manana spirit" developed in his younger days has him in its grasp and he ambles along carelessly, filling positions that men with but half of his capacity laugh at, and no nearer success than he was in the beginning. Other men come and make a hit and go on upward. Adair stands still. He can do the work, but he doesn't. Other men do it. And that is the difference between the successful man and the failure.

EARLY SUCCESSES OF GREAT MEN

NO one will deny to Samuel Johnson the title of great, if only because he was so consummately human. That most of his reputation, high as it is, rests upon his biographer, Boswell, cannot be gainsaid, but the portrait would have amounted to little had it not been for the fine qualities to be discovered by it.

Johnson's maturity was slow, and his earliest successes came late in life, compared with those of other men of equal force. He was born in Lichfield on September 18, 1709, the son of a man of note locally, but one destined to lose his property through too great a love for books. This taste, indeed, was all he left his son when he died in 1732. Samuel was to labor without ceasing for full thirty years in order to provide himself with a bare living.

Johnson tried to earn his daily bread in various ways, with little success. He married a woman with children older than himself, and cherished her tenderly until she died. After she had departed he set out for London, being 27 years old, and as obscure a person as ever entered the city's gates.

He worked from hand to mouth, a bookseller's hack, says an exchange, and yet he found time to write his "London," an imitation of Juvenal, as Pope's successful satires and epistles, just then agitating the metropolis, were imitations of Horace. Johnson's work appeared in May, 1738, without his name. He was not yet 29, and yet it was to be years before he came into anything resembling secure fame after his first success with "London."

For the "Dictionary of the English Language," Johnson's greatest work, did not come out until 1755, seventeen years later, "The Rambler," "The Idler," "Rasselas," these preceding it by a little, but the "Journal to the Hebrides" was printed in 1775, while his "Lives of the Poets" did not complete itself until 1781, the author being then 72 years old.

Samuel Johnson died December 13, 1784. He occupied a remarkable place in the literary history of his century, rather through his personality, it must be admitted, than through his performances, though these have a place among the little read classics of our language.

Why this should be true every reader of Boswell can tell. Samuel Johnson was a man, every inch of him—not an ideal man, but a good one, in spite of everything.

John W. Montgomery and P. J. Sullivan have entered into partnership to conduct a first class grocery and restaurant business on the east side, Pembroke, and have purchased the old Queen's Hotel. It is their intention to remodel the front of the building and extend the premises formerly occupied by Mr. Sullivan. Messrs. Sullivan and Montgomery have had a large experience in their respective branches, and the East Enders are to be congratulated on their establishing themselves in their midst.

WALL PAPER

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR WALL PAPER.

WALL paper mills are working to their full capacity to get out their orders for Spring delivery. The season has proved better than was expected even by the most optimistic manufacturer. Orders have been uniformly heavy, and as the samples show there should be an attractive season ahead for the retail merchant.

A noticeable feature of the orders which are now coming in is the large number of general stores who are seeing the advantage of handling this profitable line. It has become recognized as an integral part of the house-furnishing stock, and a progressive merchant cannot afford to neglect it.

Development and expansion are the watchwords of the present time. From the biggest departmental store in the great cities to the small store in the country village, the one idea running through all is to carry as many lines as can be handled economically.

"Viator," writing in the Free Press, St. John's, N.F., says : "The MacLean Publishing Co of Toronto have recently issued a new magazine, or rather re-issued an old one in a new form. The Business Magazine, as it is called, is one of the most interesting of compilations. It is more than interesting, it is useful and instructive. The Review of Reviews has done much for the literary world, as has Littell's Living Age, World Wide, the Rapid Review, and kindred publications. What these papers are to the literary student, or to the man in the street. The Business Magazine promises to be to the business man, a compendium of all that from the business standpoint is best, brightest, most readable and most instructive in the magazines of the world. The publishers may well refer to it as 'The Home Magazine of the Busy Man and His Family.' If the first number is a sample of what is to follow, I should advise every business man who wants a good thing and knows how to appreciate one when it is to be had, to send a year's subscription of two dollars to the publishers at Toronto. This may look like an advertisement. It is at least wholly gratuitous and unsolicited, being the result of one of the most pleasant and instructive evenings spent by my fireside, with The Business Magazine of October, 1905, as my companion. To keep up to the level of the October edition in succeeding numbers will be difficult, but the magazine is in good hands."

Made in Canada

These words are the key to the success that every true Canadian heartily desires for this fair Canada of ours!

Why should we buy goods of any description that are made in a foreign country? The making of foreign goods does not give employment to our artisans. It does not retain money in this country.

Why use Foreign Salt? We have CANADIAN SALT that is superior to any foreign salt that is made.

Why not help build up Canada by using

Canadian Salt

and thereby employ Canadian labor, Canadian works, and Canadian capital?

Demand of your wholesale grocer Canadian Salt, and if he does not keep it write to us for prices and samples.

The Only Spice of Life for Horses, Cattle and Poultry

IS Myers'

It is not a Stock Food, but a condiment to be used with food, and contains no corn, middlings, etc. Why pay ten cents per pound for what costs only one cent? If you desire bulk for your money take 100 pounds of middlings, or such like, and mix with 100 pounds Myers' Spice, you will then get a much superior article than most advertised Stock Foods, and it will cost you only $5.50 per 100 pounds. A saving of $4.50 on 100 pounds is an item not to be lost sight of. Is not this true economy?

The trade is respectfully invited to write the

CEYLON Tea Talks

No. 3

Remember—The wise man has no hard and fast ideas, but will share the ideas of others and make them his own.

The dietetic value of Ceylon Tea as a beverage is attributable to the well-balanced proportions of its constituent parts.

First in importance is the presence of the "Essential Oil." It is this oil which exhilarates, and increases the activity of the brain, and overcomes the weariness and lassitude arising from hard manual and mental strain.

The perfect proportion of "Essential Oil" makes Ceylon Tea (Green and Black) extremely palatable and refreshing and is one of the chief factors which determines its high value, and has led to its present position of favor.

Trade Bulletin

Owing to our having been fortunate in making some very large and favorable contracts on Bristles and other raw material, we have been able to reduce our prices on many lines of "Boeckh's" and "Bryan's" Paint Brushes handled by the General Trade, and by the introduction of new machinery it has been possible to also make reductions on many lines of Household Brushes, and we are now revising our prices and preparing our 1906 illustrated catalogue, which will be ready for distribution about Dec. 1st. We therefore wish to impress upon you the importance of first seeing our samples and getting our prices before ordering for your Spring requirements, as we feel confident that you will find our values much better than those of any other manufacturer.

Our representative will call on you in due course with a complete line of samples, when you can see exactly what we have to offer. We trust you will be in readiness to order by the time he calls, and would specially mention that it is decidedly advantageous to place orders for Spring requirements as early as possible, as by doing this the Brushes are sure to be delivered before the rush season begins, you protect yourself against any advance in prices which may be necessitated through the possible and probable advance in bristles, etc., when the large Spring demand is on, and also you get the benefit of being able to display your goods well in advance, without any extra cost to you, as we always give a liberal dating on stock orders for Spring trade.

Trusting that we may be favored with your orders, we remain,

Yours truly,

OUR AUSTRALIAN LETTER

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

CANADA recently made overtures to Australia on the subject of preferential trade between the two countries. Federal Ministers are now studying in what way it would be profitable to develop increased trade with Canada.

From the Victorian Chamber of Manufactures our Prime Minister (Mr. Deakin) has received a resolution asking his ministry to "seriously and immediately consider" the proposal to establish trade relations with Canada, "which," the resolution adds, "this chamber hopefully trusts may be eventuated." Mr. Deakin has not yet received the report of the Customs Department upon the proposal of Canada, but he is considering certain data which is in his own department. The whole matter has yet to go before the cabinet.

The despatch received from your Dominion Government regarding this momentous matter reads as follows:

"On a report dated 30th June, 1905, from the Minister of Finance, submitting that, under the provisions of the customs tariff, 1897, and amendments thereto, the benefits of the preferential tariff were by orders in council of June 28, 1897, and July 14, 1898, extended by Canada to the colony of New South Wales.

"The Minister states that upon the union of the Australian colonies, New South Wales ceased to have a separate tariff, and came under the operation of a tariff adopted for the Commonwealth generally. In consequence of such change the orders in council above referred to were rescinded on January 23, 1903.

"The Minister of Finance deems it desirable that the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia should be invited to consider the advisability of entering into preferential tariff arrangements between Australia and Canada. The terms which Canada is able to offer at present are set forth in the present Canadian Customs Tariff.

"The Minister observes, that, in accordance with announcement made some months ago, it is the intention of the Canadian Government to cause an inquiry to be made at an early date, into the operation of the Canadian tariff, with a view to making some revision at the next session of Parliament.

"The Minister further observes that while some tariff changes may be brought about, it is not the present intention of the Canadian Government to depart from the principle of British preferential trade already established.

"That the revised tariff may, therefore, be expected to include the preference to the products of the United Kingdom, and to those of such British colonies as may be prepared to make favorable trade arrangements with Canada.

"The committee, concurring in the report of the Minister of Finance, advise that His Excellency be moved to inquire whether the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia would be willing to enter into negotiations with the Government of Canada, with a view to establishing preferential trade relations between the two countries; and, if so, whether the Australian Government would be prepared to offer state tariff concessions by conferences between delegates representing the Australian and the Canadian Governments."

Our Federal Minister for Customs has decided to enforce the law respecting the invoice value of goods exported to the Commonwealth. According to the Minister's own statements, under the system previously in force, it was estimated that we were losing about £30,000 or £40,000 per year in connection with charges made between the port of manufacture and the port of shipment of Canadian and American goods. The decision to go back to the f.o.b. value was based on that. The Minister remarked that, so far as Canadian goods shipped via New York were concerned, he had decided to allow the f.o.b. value to be stated as if the port of shipment were the Canadian border, but, as a result of certain information which has recently come to hand, he was now seriously considering whether this concession would not have to be also withdrawn.

Figures supplied recently by our Comptroller-General of Customs are interesting in the light of the above decision of our Federal Ministry to add inland transportation charges to Canadian invoices when tssessing and the ma dian invoices when assessing value for duty. There are fixed rates of duty on 47 per cent. of the imports from Canada, and ad valorem duties on 43 per cent., while 10 per cent. of the imports are admitted free. As transportation charges are added only to the goods on which there are ad valorem duties, this official points out that about 57 per cent. of the imports are not affected by the new f.o.b. regulation.

The Minister for Customs stated yesterday that he had received a communication from a Government official in Canada giving details of the practice of exporters there. The writer says the rule is for exporters to prepare two invoices—one for the customs and one for the purchaser, the object being to increase their export trade and to capture the markets of the world. He thinks something should be done to put a stop to this practice, and expressed his willingness to take the position of Australian representative in Canada. Our Minister does not intend to make any appointment.

No official protest has been received as yet by our Federal Ministry from your Government respecting this important decision of the Customs Department. A cable message recently published here stated that at Ottawa it is feared that the principal Canadian houses may export to Australia via New York instead of via Vancouver, and thus, by withdrawal of freight from the Canadian-Australian mail service, cause this Pacific line to be discontinued. Our central customs authorities admit that this is not at all improbable. Section 143 of our Customs Act provides that "goods exported to Australia from any country, but passing through another country, shall be valued for duty as if they were imported directly from such first mentioned country." Goods sent to Australia via New York would therefore, only have to bear freightage from Montreal to the border of the United States, while, if sent via Vancouver, they would be loaded up with twice the amount of freight, owing to the longer haul. Transportation charges are only added to ad valorem goods, but two-thirds of the imports from Canada come under this head. The probable fate of our Vancouver mail service will be askcided directly. Parliament will be asked to ratify the contract which will expire in June next, and many members will endeavor to persuade Ministers to withdraw the Federal subsidy of £26,626 per annum when this agreement expires.

Regarding the matter of our mutual mail service, negotiations for a new service from Australia to Vancouver are still proceeding between our postmaster-general and the Union Steamship Co. It was stated recently that our Federal Ministry wished to cease paying a subsidy for this service, and to revert to the poundage system, but the postmaster-general says that there is no foundation for this rumor. Canada, Queensland and New Zealand are all interested in the Vancouver line, and it is understood that your Government has raised objections to changes of route which have been proposed by the Queensland and New Zealand Governments.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION IN THE WEST

POINTS OF INTEREST TO THE GROCER.

AFTER a postponement of two or three months the Tariff Commission held their sessions in Winnipeg on December 4 and 5. Considerable interest was manifested in the meetings. Ample opportunity was given for the presentation of the views of the various interests affected by the tariff and a respectful hearing was given all who appeared before the Commission. Business men remarked the keen insight of Hon. Mr. Fielding, whose searching questions showed his wide acquaintance with all the subjects under discussion. 6

"Milk Chocolate" Protest.

At the opening meeting in the Board of Trade rooms the first petition was presented by A. L. Moran, on behalf of a number of importers and dealers in milk chocolate. The petition protested against the application for an increase in the duty on that commodity. The reasons given were that milk chocolate is a food rather than a confection, and does not therefore come into direct competition with the confectionery trade; that the consumption is not large enough for milk chocolate to be manufactured except by one or two large firms, thus establishing a monopoly; that the milk chocolate manufactured in Canada is of inferior quality and meets with little demand, although it is cheaper than the imported. The petition was signed by A. L. Moran, Telfer Bros., Pratt's Wholesale, Macnab & Roberts, Dingle & Stewart, Joseph Watson, W. R. Milton, Martin Bole & Wynne Co., and Campbell Bros. & Wilson.

Canadian Canners Limited.

The balance of Monday's session was occupied with delegates from the grain growers' associations who made strong pleas for a general reduction of duties.

On Tuesday morning Isaac Pitblado, a leading Winnipeg lawyer, appeared on behalf of an unnamed Winnipeg wholesaler to protest against the tariff on canned fruits and vegetables. He claimed that the duty made possible a combine in canned fruits and vegetables and presented a sweeping indictment against the Canadian Canners, Limited. This corporation, he said, was really a combine comprising from 14 to 17 factories, the largest in Canada. It was so strong that, so far as the west was concerned, it practically eliminated competition in canned goods. He had in his possession a copy of the agreement made by the Canadian Canners, Limited, with their customers, showing that they treat, not with individual wholesale grocers, but with the Wholesale Grocers' Guilds. The agreement in question was with the Winnipeg Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

After reciting the fact that similar agreements had been made with the wholesale grocers of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island, the agreement continued that the products of canneries controlled by the corporation would be supplied to members of the guild whose names were printed on the agreement only on condition that they would sell to retailers at a price to be determined by the Canadian Canners, Limited. As all the western wholesalers in Kenora, Winnipeg, Lethbridge and Calgary were on the list the western retailers had no alternative but to buy from them at the prices fixed by the "combine."

According to the agreement the wholesaler is allowed a discount of 5 per cent. on fruit and 10 per cent. on vegetables but a private and confidential note informs him that an additional 5 per cent. will be paid him on his making a statutory declaration that he has sold at the proper prices and has purchased no canned goods from any other concern. Mr. Pitblado argued that while the extra 5 per cent. purported to be a bonus, as a matter of fact it represented the whole profit to be made by the wholesaler and it was therefore impossible to handle the goods of the "combine" without buying from them exclusively.

This state of affairs was made possible by the high tariff against American canned goods, 1½ cents per lb. on vegetables and 2¼ cents per lb. on fruits. On a dozen cans of apricots, sold in the United States for 95 cents, the Canadian duty amounted to 67½ cents. On peaches worth $1.30 in the United States the Canadian duty was 60¾ cents; on plums worth 90 cents the duty was 67½ cents, and on corn worth 50 cents the duty was 27 cents. Mr. Pitblado closed with a strong plea for a reduction of duties.

Manufacturers' Views.

On Tuesday afternoon the members of the Manitoba branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were given a hearing. The deputation consisted of L. C. MacIntyre, T. R. Deacon, E. F. Hutchings, G. F. Stephens and E. L. Drewry. Their representations were for the most part general in their nature.

L. C. MacIntyre addressed the Commissioners as follows:

"As vice-president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association for Manitoba I take pleasure in introducing a few of the manufacturers of Winnipeg. While some of those present may have special cases to lay before the Commission, our main purpose in coming here to-day is to express our belief in a reasonable increase in the general protective tariff, as a means of building up varied industries in Canada, affording employment for all classes of our citizens and creating a home market for our farmers, while at the same time giving a preference to goods of British manufacture.

"There is a mistaken notion in the east that the west must always be a purely agricultural community. We believe that the natural resources of the west are such that it may have interests as varied as those in the east. It will take time to establish them, but the higher the tariff against the United States is made, the more quickly will industries of all kinds be established in the west.

"We believe that the people of the Canadian west should do their own manufacturing so far as possible, but when we cannot get what we want right here at home, we think that our fellow Canadians in eastern Canada, who are helping us in building up and developing the west, should get a preference over all outsiders. If we cannot get what we want either in the Canadian west or in eastern Canada, we should then seek what we want in Britain, in preference to foreign countries.

"We do not pretend to advise the Commission how high the tariff should be, but it should be high enough to cause many of the great manufacturing companies of the United States, who are now selling large quantities of goods in Canada, to establish branch factories in this country. If the Government will do this much, we think the cities and towns of the Canadian west will be able to convince American capitalists that a good many of the branch factories should be located west of Lake Superior.

"The building up of factories throughout the northwest will make mixed farming profitable. Continually growing nothing but wheat will in a few years exhaust the soil. However, bad years for wheat may come, even before the soil is exhausted. The farmer who is able to sell meat, milk, butter, eggs and vegetables in local markets will not be ruined by a failure of the wheat crop.

"Mr. Andrew Graham, who addressed this Commission yesterday, arguing against protection, said that mixed farming was most profitable and that exclusive wheat growing cannot be profitably continued very long. Mixed farming is an impossibility except in a country having home markets. It is a well known fact that mixed farming is most profitable in those districts which are close to manufacturing towns.

"With reference to the price of agricultural implements, I have seen it stated very positively that although the cost of transporting agricultural implements from Toronto to England is less than from Toronto to Winnipeg, the price of agricultural implements is considerably higher in free trade England than in Manitoba. There is no duty on agricultural implements in England. I have not myself verified this statement, but no doubt the Commission could without difficulty ascertain whether it is true or false. If it is true it completely knocks out the argument that protection always enhances prices.

"No doubt we will always continue to buy a good deal outside of our own province and it will pay us better to buy from the eastern provinces or from England, than from foreign countries, because our surplus crops must go eastward over Canadian railways, and if the railways bring back manufactured goods they can afford to carry grain cheaper than if the cars came back empty. Moreover, our farm products are almost entirely shut out of the United States by their high tariff, whereas we can send our products freely to the eastern provinces of Canada. We would not think it advisable for the Government to take any steps to reduce the tariff.

"The era of prosperity that we have enjoyed for the last number of years must show them conclusively that their tariff policy has been to the best interests of the country, and I am pleased to say that the farmers of the great western country are sharing in this prosperity. I know farmers in Manitoba that show a net profit of seven thousand dollars for their year's labor, and also farmers that bought farms and paid for them with proceeds of one year's crop. It is not all sunshine for the manufacturer. There is keen competition in all lines, and it is only by careful management that a profit is made."

Other manufacturers made similar representations and were questioned minutely as to particular points by Mr. Fielding.

Herring Duty.

Jos. Carman brought up the matter of importation of herrings from Holland. There is, he said, a duty on the packages, although there is no duty on the herrings. These packages are practically worthless and no Canadian industry is benefited by the duty.

A PROMINENT INDUSTRY.

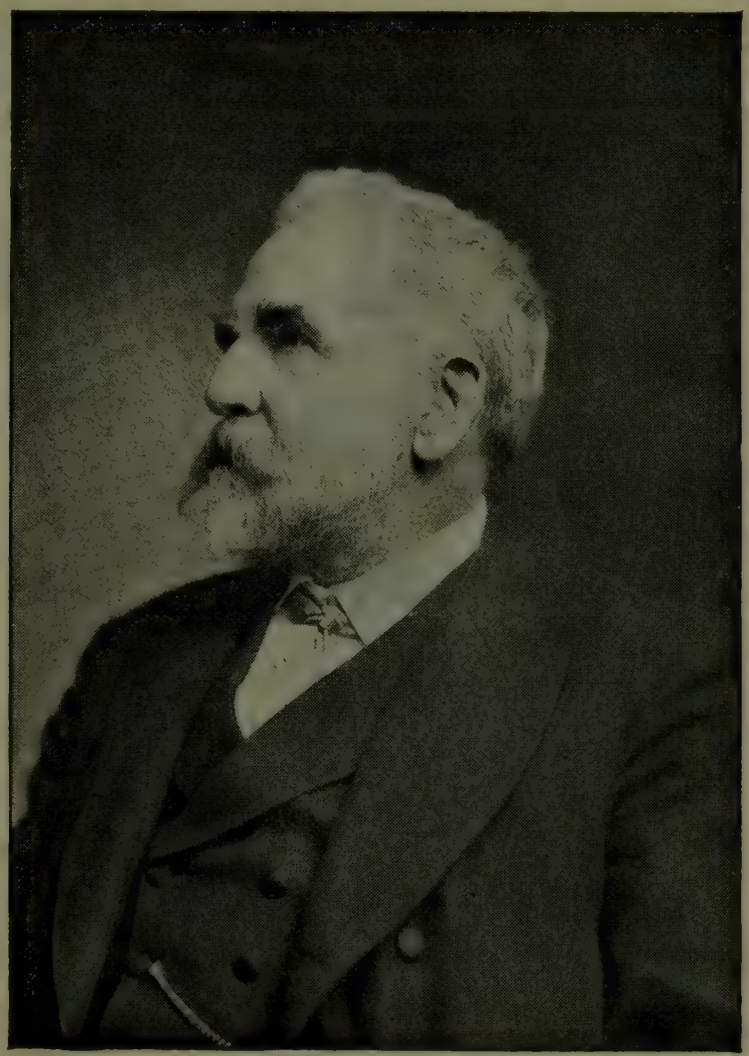
AN industry that bulks largely in the industrial activity of Niagara Falls is the Myers Royal Spice Co. The head of this concern, Mr. Thomas Myers, is a gentleman whose name has been familiar to stock raisers both in Britain and the American continent for the last half century.

He was born in Otley, England, and at an early age become interested in the study of live stock, but more especially of horses, cattle and poultry. This interest was not merely that of a "fancier," but took a very practical shape, for before long he became known to stock raisers in England as the inventor of a special condiment—now well known as Myers' Royal Spice—which he claimed to be superior to anything heretofore known as a tonic for horses, cattle and poultry.

Having implicit faith in the efficacy of his preparation, he resolved to make it his life work. His first move was to open an unpretentious shop in York, where he manufactured and retailed his Royal Spice. Meeting with remarkable success he soon established a large mill and this was shortly afterwards duplicated by another at Hull.

About this time Canada was attracting much attention in Great Britain as a cattle raising country and with commendable foresight Mr. Myers decided to establish a branch on this great continent. Since then the history of the Myers Royal Spice Co. in this country has been one of steady, continuous progress and expansion. The firm have met with remarkable success at national and international exhibitions, winning many medals and diplomas, among which may be mentioned the only medal awarded at St. Louis World's Fair for stock foods for horses. It is not really a stock food but a condiment to be used with food, and contains no corn, middlings, etc. Their argument is, why pay ten cents per pound for what costs only one cent? If you desire bulk for your money, take 100 pounds of middlings, or, such like, and mix with 100 pounds of Myers' Spice, you will then get a much superior article to most of the advertised stock foods.

Their Royal Cattle Spice is used for preparing cattle for prize competitions as well as for keeping them in good ordinary condition. It is not a cheap food made simply to sell, but is a condiment for improving ordinary feed, equally beneficial for horses, cattle and pigs.



Mr. Thomas Myers, President of the Myers Royal Spice Co., Limited.

SCARCITY OF HOGS.

The live stock commissioners' branch of the Agriculture Department is now investigating a scarcity in the available supply of Canadian hogs suitable for making bacon. The packers say that they cannot get enough to keep their concerns going and that in Quebec, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick it is not possible to get more than enough to supply the local demand. If the live stock commissioner finds that there is money in this industry for the farmers he will advise them to devote more attention thereto.

Mr. Joseph Sellers, the Union Blend tea representative, is doing a large tea trade.

The joke is on a popular tea man who lately severed his connection with a tea company. He was satisfied to be known as the agent of the company he represented, but his successor, who was formerly his office boy, immediately had the sign changed to "Manager for Newfoundland." The boys are jollying the former agent on his meekness and lowly spirit.

The new hotel project seems to have fallen flat at present.

The Crosbie Hotel will be enlarged by fifteen rooms. This will be pleasant news for the boys and evidences the progressive spirit of the hotel management.

WANTS TO FIND GOOD SALESMEN.

MR. JAMES A. McGUANE, American manager of the Salada Tea Co., was recently found in his handsome new offices at 198 West Broadway, in a rather thoughtful mood. The reporter of the American Grocer asked why the case was thus. Said Mr. McGuane:

"I was thinking about the difficulty we constantly experience in our efforts to obtain more good salesmen in this country. Here is a chance, in selling "Salada" teas in the United States, that any live salesman could utilize to make his thousands a year. But try as we will, there is, or seems to be, a scarcity of men who can both sell goods and who are willing to work, that is as surprising as it is annoying."

"Don't you find the same conditions in Canada?" was asked.

"No!" was the emphatic answer. "We have no such trouble there. Whether the young Canadian is a hard worker: whether he has more "stick-to-itiveness" than his brother of the United States, I can't say; but it is certain that there would be an opening here for bright young Canadian salesmen that I am sure they would quickly take advantage of, had they any idea that such an opportunity was open to them.

"Of course, we have good men, too, here in New York, but the territory is so great and there are such splendid opportunities, that I could use many more good men than at this time I can get on my staff."

"Would you use Canadians in preference to Americans?" was asked.

"By no means. I want all the good American salesmen I can get. But I would use Canadians, too, giving an equal chance to all. True, I am from Canada, originally, but that makes no difference in the matter. I want all the good men I can get. They can come to me from Bagdad or Hong Kong—it doesn't matter so long as they can sell goods."

In which last conclusion, many others will agree with Mr. McGuane's views.—American Grocer.

DID YOU GET ONE, TOO?

MESSRS. S. H. EWING & SONS, Montreal, coffee, spice and tea merchants, handed The Grocer a letter the other day which is of more than passing interest. There appear from time to time in the daily press, reference to the epistolatory appeals of this ingenious Spaniard in durance vile. His mailing list seems to be a comprehensive one. In a few words the letter will explain the scheme. Here is a copy:

Madrid, 8, 11, 1905.

Dear Sir,—Arrested by bankruptcy I beg your aid to recover a trunk with £32,000 deposited at an English railway station being necessary to rise the seize of a valise inner which I have hidden a check of 30,000 francs payable to bearer and the ticket of trunk necessary to recover it.

I will reward you with the third part of amount if you come to rise said seize.

I cannot receive your answer at prison so must be sent to my servant by a cablegram thus addressed:

Antonio Costa, Conde Duque, 6ra derecha, Madrid.

Being not sured you may receive this letter I await your answer to sign full name and more explanations. V.

Please reply by telegraph not by letter and sign your name.

Now what's the game? As this letter was addressed to a reputable business firm it is not unlikely that other firms in Canada may be tried "for to help to rise the trunk." Have any other readers of The Grocer received such an appeal from a poor Spanish prisoner?

RETURNED AT A PROFIT.

The lesson which the Department of Inland Revenue hoped they had taught some dealers of the west who were fined recently for selling adulterated food, it is feared, will not sink very deep for the simple reason the eastern manufacturers, who made the goods, have in nearly every case quietly paid the fine. The fine in no case ran over $12 so that it meant little to the large wholesale houses.

The manager of one of the Winnipeg wholesale grocery firms said yesterday that it was the usual practice for the retailer when fined to remit the bill to the manufacturer and as far as he knew it was always paid. The big wholesalers in Montreal and Toronto only laugh at the present fine.

A Winnipeg dealer said that the fine was absurdly light and that the Government should increase the penalty. As it is now the fine is the same $10 or $12 for the second or third offence. He said that, for instance, peppers cost 15 cents each. They are ground up and adulterated, say fifty per cent. with a mixture that costs but two cents, making the total cost only eight and a half cents per pepper. If the manufacturer sold say three thousand pounds of pepper in a month, he would probably clear $250 extra through adulteration. Naturally, the $12 fine—if the manufacturer happens to be caught—or rather the retailer who bought his goods, happens to be caught—has not much terrors for him.

The manufacturers know they are guilty and invariably refund the retail dealers the amount of the fine. He told an amusing instance of a dealer in Mitchell, Ont., who was fined $12 for selling white pepper. He enterprisingly wrote to every wholesaler with whom he had dealings, twelve in number, informing them that he had been fined $12, and asking them to repay him. Every dealer complied, with the result he cleared $136 on the transaction. If the eastern manufacturers had not felt guilty they would not have paid up.—Winnipeg Telegram.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

THE demand for cheese, noted in our last report, has made further progress and has become more general, which bears out our remarks that the retailers in Great Britain are not carrying their usual supplies and that the consumptive demand has not yet fallen off to any noticeable extent in spite of the ruling high prices.

Stocks on both sides of the Atlantic are light and being held in first hands, the available supplies are visible, especially as the stocks are now mostly concentrated in few hands. The smaller and weaker holders of cheese sold out when they were able to realize a fair profit and even some of the large houses have reduced their holdings so that it has become difficult to obtain a fair sized line of goods from any one house.

A few days ago the representative of one of the large importing houses of London was on the market here. Like so many others in the United Kingdom, he did not know how difficult it was to buy the needed quality in quantity. After thoroughly canvassing every house in the trade, he concluded his purchase at a price which is at present considerably above current market quotations.

Most of the importers of cheese in Great Britain have been on the "bearish" side this entire season. One house in London only a very short time ago published a cartoon in their ad where the Canadian farmers were pictured to hold up the cheese prices in form of an avalanche of snow, rolling down the Heights of Abraham, while the Montreal exporters stood aside looking on. This cartoon was quite characteristic of the prevailing opinion among the British dealers. They actually kept on writing over of the large make in Canada and the disastrous ending which was certain to follow. Whether they were wilfully deceived and misled into this wrong opinion, or whether it was just an idea of their own, is difficult to say, but they did not do their usual share of the business and consequently did not receive the benefit of steadily rising markets.

There is one large house in the United Kingdom which seems to have sized up the situation correctly from the start. They were steady buyers of cheese, particularly on all soft spots of the market, and as they now practically control the majority of the stocks they will probably have a substantial balance on their profit and loss account on the right side of the ledger.

The lack of confidence in the situation on the part of the majority of the British importers made the legitimate order business this season very difficult and unprofitable. Our dealers, to keep up their country connections, were obliged to continue buying cheese at prices above the parity of British markets. By holding these goods until the importers in the United Kingdom were willing to take them at a fair profit, our dealers have, on the whole, not done so badly. But after all the business has become more and more speculative and those houses willing and able to take chances on the future seem to be the only ones to do the business.

During the Summer season, the season of production, it becomes a question whether the production is equal to the probable consumptive demand. Some think there will be a surplus and consequently they speculate on lower prices by selling goods for future delivery. Some think the consumptive demand will be larger than the supplies, and they buy goods, put them into cold storage and await the time when they can sell them at a profit. Speculation in cheese has made such progress that many outside of the trade altogether are now watching market prices daily, and are willing to take a hand in the game. This is unfortunate, as it destroys the legitimate business of supply and demand in an important article of food.

Butter is without change. The market is very firm, but being now dependent on the home consumption, prices move up slowly. There continues to be a scarcity of dairy butter and the usual supply of "fresh western rolls" is short and prices are very close to those of creamery butter.

THE PRODUCE SITUATION.

THAT the present situation of the pork packing industries is a serious one is without question. Canada has made wonderful advancement in her packing industries during recent times, and has captured a not insignificant share of the world's export trade. If, immediately this has been accomplished, the supply, of which so much has been made, should fall short, a set back of serious moment to the industry will have taken place. Yet, this shortage of hogs is the very difficulty which confronts the trade. Just at this most inopportune moment the right to import American hogs in bond has been withdrawn by the authorities, thus adding a further difficulty. Such is the immediate condition of affairs, and one which should be dealt with promptly.

The deeper and more important question, however, is what has led up to the immediate cause for the shortage in Canadian hogs? Last season, it will be remembered. Ontario feed grain crops were short, and their values in consequence soared up beyond the possibility of using them as hog feed. On this account many farmers considered it best to sell off their stock, reserving only sufficient to again fill their pens, some not that; consequently, this season opened up with a short farming stock of hogs, and this shortage has continued. This shortage would have been the result under an ordinary market, but when it is taken into consideration that a great many new factories have been erected and fitted with the most up-to-date facilities for handling stock it can be easily seen that it would be an impossible proposition to have kept them fully supplied from Canadian hogs.

The withdrawal of the import rights, therefore, has worked much to the discomfiture of the hog packers who have been relying on this source of supply as a means of keeping their plants in full running capacity.

The bonding privilege referred to allows the importation of American hogs into Canada without duty. At the packing houses the animals so brought in are counted and weighed by a customs official and are then put through the process of manufacture for export as bacon, etc., to the British and other markets. Of the bulk thus brought in it is necessary that 65 per cent. be shipped out, the difference of 35 per cent. being allowed for losses and by-products in the process of curing. The exported product is branded on the package to distinguish it from the genuine Canadian article, and in the operation of this end of the business the present trouble has had its beginning.

Canadian bacon has earned a well deserved record in the British markets. It had to contest the ground against the American article, but came out a winner several years ago. Now what is claimed to have happened is this: The Canadian exports of the American hogs have by reason of their manufacture in Canada, entered into close competition with the genuine Canadian in the English market. Once having left the branded casks in which the hog products were shipped there remained no mark by which the American article could be distinguished from the Canadian.

One who has an idea of what has taken place recently, states that the Canadian representatives in Britain have posted the Government regarding the possible loss of prestige by the Canadian bacon, should the competition be allowed to be continued. The result was the withdrawal of the privilege, and a consequent activity among the Canadian packers for its restoration.

AS far as Canadian butter is concerned, there is very little to report this week. Arrivals are fast growing smaller, the total receipts from November 6 to present time being only 11,193 cwt., and it is a matter for doubt as to whether henceforth it will be worth while reporting on the butter market here. At present Canadian butter is selling fairly well at 100 to 104 shillings for finest and 106 to 110 shillings for choicest. These prices are about 6 shillings higher than this time last year.

Australian butters are doing exceedingly well, and are realizing tall prices, although the heavy imports of the past few days, amounting to something like 45,000 boxes, have had the effect of toning down the demand somewhat. It is probable, however, that the next few weeks will see smaller imports of Australian butter, and quotations will probably stiffen. At present they stand at 104 to 108 shillings for finest, and 110 to 112 shillings for choicest. These figures are also about six shillings above last year's prices. As a matter of fact, some Australian choicest has made 114 shillings during the past week. New Zealand butter, of which we have not received so much this year as last, and a very great deal less than in 1903, is clearing out on arrival at very good figures, choicest making 115 shillings and finest 106 shillings.

Finer Quality Butter Being Shipped.

The comments made in the editorial columns of The Canadian Grocer of November 17 as to the importance of quality as a feature of Canada's export butter trade, have met with very favorable reception on this side of the water. It is a point which has been discussed so often in this series of reports that it is scarcely necessary to offer further suggestions. This much, however, must be said, that it is satisfactory to note that although market conditions were such as to tempt Canadians to pay less attention to quality (for this is always the way when the market is ready to accept what it can get) they have in reality shipped across finer and more uniform quality than ever. There is room for improvement yet, and it is in the power of the Dominion Government to further the interests of the country by introducing some compulsory form of grading and official supervision of a more stringent nature than is at present in vogue. The New Zealand methods are worthy of note.

Cheese Demand Better and Quality Good

The demand for Canadian cheese has been very active during the past week, and good prices have been obtained, choicest white realizing 60 shillings per cwt. and choicest colored 61 shillings.

The month of November opened with 177,500 boxes of Canadian cheese being held in warehouse for London importers; it closes with 152,958 boxes in warehouse, and within the month 93,119 boxes of Canadian cheese have been received. All through the month there has been fair consumption at good prices, and the quality has been uniformly good.

Bacon Down, Quality Irregular.

The bacon market all round has been somewhat strained, owing to the continuance of high prices. The larger arrivals of Canadian have only been disposed of at a reduction in price, the reduction in some cases amounting to two shillings. The trade should be a little better as we are nearing Christmas; after Christmas we must look for decidedly lower prices, and it will be wise for packers to prepare accordingly.

Inquiries made amongst the retail trade go to show that there has been some dissatisfaction on account of the irregularity of quality and on account of the coarseness of the meat. It is suggested that Canadians treat their hogs more like the English farmers, who are apt to feed them too much with the waste products, and to kill them prematurely. It is, however, difficult for us on this side to make any decided statement as to the cause of the irregularity of quality, but it certainly exists. Danish bacon, owing to the fact that hogs are fed with the distinct object of having them ready for killing by the time they are of a certain age, is so regular and uniform as to leave no necessity for picking out.

Produce.

SINCE our last report there has been considerable activity and prices have generally firmed up on all dressed meats. The scarcity of hogs is being felt, and great inconvenience is being experienced. In country points packers find it difficult to keep their factories on full work.

The reason for this is difficult to explain. Evidently farmers have not been giving the increased attention which is necessary to keep pace with the advancing demand, beside which the quality of arrivals is not showing the same measure of care in finishing which was in evidence a few seasons ago.

Butter.

The butter market is firm, but unchanged. Local demand is not overly active, although orders from outside points are coming in well and this has had the effect of strengthening prices here. Ontario dairy tubs, 20c to 20½c; fresh rolls, 22½c; good to fine creamery, 22½c to 23c, and fancy, 23¼c to 23½c.

We quote:

Fancy Townships	0 23½
Finest creamery	0 22½ 0 23½
Fine	0 21 0 21¾
Medium	0 20 0 21½
Fresh dairy tubs	0 20 0 20½

Cheese.

The cheese market continues very firm. Stocks are getting into few hands; holders are firm and the highest prices are being asked. Quebecs quoted at 12¼c to 12⅜c; Townships 12⅜c to 12½c, and Ontarios 12⅝c to 12¾c. As high as 13c to 13¼c is asked for the finest selected Ontario. Holders' hands are strengthened by the very strong market prevailing in the United Kingdom and some exporting is being done outside of factory prices.

Eggs.

There is no change in the position of the egg market. Prices are steady and ruling from 21c for limed to 25c and 26c for selected. Receipts are light and the local demand good.

It is usually safe to be suspicious of the man who is suspicious of others.

WINNIPEG.

Creamery Butter.

All the country creameries in Manitoba have stopped manufacturing for the season. Compared with the needs of the next few months the stocks held in the city are reported small. Prices are unchanged since last week. We quote as follows:

BRUSH PRICES REDUCED.

The United Factories, Limited, announce that many lines of Boeckh's and Bryan's paint brushes will be lower in price for the coming season. This reduction is brought about principally, we understand, owing to their securing some very large stocks of bristles and other raw materials at exceptionally favorable prices, and this should be especially interesting to the dealer as the general tendency on brushes has been for a gradual increase, owing to the fluctuating market price of bristles, which are becoming scarcer and dearer and which will in all probability lead to higher levels in the Spring of the year when the great demand for and consumption of bristles is on.

TARTAN BRAND CANNED GOODS

THE sign of quality is the Tartan Brand label. Such is the verdict of every grocer who has ever handled this popular line of canned goods. The marks of merit are noticeable on every count. The fruit and vegetables are the freshly gathered article, the syrup is of the clearest order, the tins are of the heaviest plate and the labels artistic in design, happy in conception, rich in lithography and in all the most handsome and attractive of any canned goods on the Canadian market.

It is thirteen years since Balfour & Co. first put on the market the Tartan Brand goods packed in the most careful manner at the factory at Grimsby, right in the centre of the Niagara fruit district, where all the conditions unite to favor this important industry. The location of the factory makes possible the packing of the fruits and vegetables immediately on being picked and so is retained that delicate flavor and freshness which is entirely lost if the goods are not taken care of promptly. At the same time every modern improvement has been adopted so that the factory where Tartan Brand goods are packed might be made a model for any factory in Canada.

The "Tartan" brand display at the Hamilton Horticultural Exhibition, 1905.

Balfour & Co. have staked their canned goods reputation on the Tartan Brand and that in itself is sufficient to guarantee their quality and to explain their popularity with the trade and the steadily increasing demand they met.

Indeed, the firm lose no opportunity of placing the merits of Tartan Brand before the public and the trade. The trade is well acquainted with the striking red letters, "Tartan Brand," that distinguish Balfour & Co.'s advertisement in the special numbers of The Canadian Grocer.

An instance of their appeal to the public was their elaborate exhibit at the Horticultural Society's show at Hamilton recently, a cut of which is appended. As will readily be seen, the base of the pyramid is draped with Rob Roy tartan, while the structure itself is composed of the several lines of Tartan Brand canned goods arranged in a most strikingly effective manner, to which the palms and ferns add not a little. The large card in front sets forth to all and sundry the name of the manufacturer.

As an instance of a fine plan for window or interior decoration this can not easily be excelled. It would make a capital design for the window of any enterprising grocer, and Balfour & Co. will be glad to furnish particulars and instructions which with this picture will enable the grocer to adapt this idea to the space at his disposal.

The Rob Roy tartan is the basis of the design which characterizes Tartan Brand canned goods, but so popular had the brand become, and so intimately connected with the name of Balfour & Co., that other package goods are also being put up and sold by the firm under the Tartan Brand, for instance, package teas, spices of all kinds, soaps, etc. The several lines of package teas are distinguished by the use of several tartans, Rob Roy, McLeod, Gordon and Royal Stuart, and make a beautiful series.

Tartan Brand goods are sold in every part of Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, as well as abroad, a considerable export trade having been developed with the West Indies and the Old Land, where they have met with great favor.

The business in these lines this Fall has been the largest in the history of this well known firm and is a sure indication that the Tartan Brand is a winner.

At a time like the present, when the market is full of brands of canned goods, many of which are of most recent date, and therefore to a large extent untested, it is of the first importance that the grocer sees to it that he has a line in tow which he can place before his customer with the confidence of giving full satisfaction. This he undoubtedly has in the Balfour Tartan Brand, as the many grocers who have sold it in preference to others for many years will testify.

Windsor Salt

must not be confounded with ordinary Salt. In quality, it is as high above the common Salt of trade as can be imagined. It won't cake—it is pure, white, dry. There is no impurity in it because of the care taken in manufacturing. It is sifted, not ground. Every particle of it is a separate Salt Crystal. It pays to sell Windsor Table Salt, because it is so good, clean, pure—

it is all Salt.

SHALL THE PACKERS SHUT DOWN?

THE withdrawal of privilege to bring American hogs into Canada under bond appears certainly to have been done somewhat hastily and without adequate consideration of the seriousness of consequences to the packing industries.

The supply of Canadian hogs has been short for some time. The number marketed this year will fall considerably below that of last year, whereas there should have been a material increase to provide for the natural development of trade. There are several reasons for this shortage.

Packers have had, therefore, to fall back on the free duty privilege, which is explained in an article on the situation in our provision department of this issue. By this means alone have packers been enabled to keep up a reasonable supply for export and hold that market.

No doubt this has its disadvantage in foreign markets by reason of Canadian products holding a distinct classification of their own, much higher than American products, and the Canadian standard has, therefore, been jeopardized on account of the inferiority of American grown hogs. Nevertheless it is of paramount importance that the market be firmly held.

This market feature is undoubtedly a most serious one, as it is of the first importance to maintain the Canadian standard abroad. It appears a very simple matter to deal with, and might be easily met by the authorities insisting upon "skin branding" of all products of American growth, and thus place them out of the line of competition with the genuine Canadian product.

It is to be hoped that the authorities will see their way to meet this situation to the satisfaction of the packers. It is by no means pleasant reading to see the possibility of the shutting down of so important an industry as t..e packing business has become, a circumstance which in all probability will quickly transpire unless something is done.

TEA STANDARDS FOR CANADA.

THAT the question of tea standards for Canada is one that would seem to deserve prompt and proper handling by the Dominion Government is evidenced by the letter of Mr. E. D. Marceau, of Montreal, in another part of this issue. Mr. Marceau is a prominent importer and tea merchant of Montreal, and as such his experiences and opinions entitle him to an expression of views on this important subject. The Grocer learns that Mr. Marceau's case is only one of a number and that an apparent injustice has been done to other tea dealers in the rejection of teas quite up to and even above the apparent hypothetical standard, while other teas considerably inferior have been passed, does not appear to allow of contradiction. The fact that Montreal is the receiving and distributing centre of China green teas should be an argument in favor of the Government placing the trade in a position of doing their business with some degree of certainty and satisfaction.

THE FAT STOCK SHOW.

GUELPH has again proved its title to the possession of the Mid-Winter Fat Stock Show by an exhibition that does the city and the country proud. Nowhere on the American continent can the stock exhibited at the Royal City be equalled, and in few of the British shows.

In the bacon and beef classes particularly might be seen the pink of perfection and the educative value to the thousands of farmers present was incalculable and must result in the continued improvement of Canadian beef and bacon.

THE WHEAT DISTRIBUTION.

ACCORDING to figures compiled in Winnipeg by Warehouse Commissioner C. C. Castle, the bulk of the western wheat crop has now been marketed. On November 30 51,784,980 bushels had already been marketed and he estimated that there were left in the possession of the farmers 36,633,000 bushels. His total estimate of the season's "bumper" crop is therefore 88,418,000 bushels, not quite so large as some enthusiasts predicted earlier in the season but nevertheless the largest crop on record. Moreover, the bulk of the season's wheat crop has graded high, a very important consideration when the grower counts the season's gains.

Not all of the wheat still in the farmers' hands will be shipped out of the west; it is estimated that 14,091,000 bushels will be required for seed and for consumption by country mills, leaving about 22,542,020 bushels still to be shipped. Adding the amount of wheat in store at country points waiting for cars it is probable that more than 40,000,000 bushels have still to come forward. The following table shows in detail the distribution of the crop:

Estimated yield ...		88,418,000
Inspected to date, 30,525 cars 30,525,000
In store, country elevators, C.P.R..13,229,052
In store, country elevators, C.N.R.. 2,165,890
In transit, C.P.R.... 2,129,038
In transit, C.N.R.... 577,000
Milled west of Winnipeg to date 3,159,000
	51,784,980
In farmers' hands....36,633,020		88,418,000
Less required for country mills 5,591,000
Less required for seed 8,500,000
	14,091,000
Balance to market..		22,542,020
Add amt. in store, in transit		18,100,980
Balance available to move by railways		43,643,000

From these figures it is evident that while much has already been accomplished by the railways, there is still a large proportion of the crop for which the growers have not yet received their money. A very large amount of money is still to be put in circulation. The effect of the wheat money in relieving financial stringency has already been very noticeable; bills have been paid and the load of credit has been very considerably lightened. A further improvement will be experienced as the balance of the crop is marketed. The prosperity of the west was never on a more solid basis.

EQUALIZED SUGAR RATES

UNDER the caption of "The Sugar Outrage," the Port Hope Guide of a recent issue says :

"It has been stated not only before the Tariff Commission, but in The Canadian Grocer, the official organ of the guild, and by prominent members of the guild through city papers, that only four per cent. is made on sugar by members of the guild.

"This is not true. The 17th edition of equalized rates, just issued, and in force from December 1st inst., states on page 4 that the freight rate opposite each place must be added to the refinery price at day and time of sale for each 100 pounds of sugar sold. The rule is so thoroughly safeguarded that even should a customer insist on paying his own freight from wholesale house he will be still charged the difference, whether it comes by boat, rail, or other conveyance. For instance, a Port Hope merchant buys sugar in Montreal at $4.50 per 100 lbs.—the 'Equalized Rate' to Port Hope is 22 cents, and if the boat rate was only 10 cents per 100 the price for sugar laid down would be $4.72, not what he had actually paid, 94.60. The same sugar delivered to a Toronto grocer would cost only $4.53 per 100 lbs., and this in spite of Port Hope being 63 miles nearer original points of shipping. American sugar bought in Montreal has actually been delivered by boat in Port Hope at nine cents per 100 lbs., which shows that the wholesaler pockets the difference.

"Therefore, if the wholesaler made four per cent. out of the Toronto sale, what would be the profit on the Port Hope sale ?

"What we are now interested in is whether the courts and the Dominion Government will allow this monster combine, or rather 'Guild,' to continue as 'common carriers,' regardless of the Railway Commission, the Tariff Commission, and Crown Attorney J. Walter Curry.

"As we stated before, when the whole truth is unearthed, the plumbers' combine will be considered as a benevolent society when compared with the Grocers' Guild."

The article is a rare example of zeal without knowledge, and had the writer taken the trouble to grasp the facts before grasping his pen he might have saved his labor.

For some unknown reason a fling is taken at The Canadian Grocer in the very first sentence. We are "the organ," "the official organ," forsooth, of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of Canada.

Nonsense ! The Grocer leaves organship to the party newspapers. Our mission is to speak the truth without malice, and to afford information in our own particular field. It is just possible that the Guide might become an excellent newspaper if conducted along similar lines.

The Guide's allegations are answered in the following letter, which is self-explanatory :

"Editor Port Hope Evening Guide,
"Port Hope, Ont.:

"Dear Sir,—I am to-day in receipt of a marked copy of your paper, the article referred to being headed 'The Sugar Outrage.' I do not know who is responsible for same, but whoever the person is he is either attempting deliberate misrepresentation, or has written the same without knowledge of the matter in question. Several articles have appeared in your paper, which I have had the opportunity of reading, and in nearly every case, so far as my memory serves me, they were at variance with the facts. The equalized rates system of selling sugar is a most fair and popular method, but to those not familiar with trade conditions, and with the system itself, it may not appear so on the surface.

"For instance, you illustrate Port Hope, by endeavoring to convince the consumer that if the boat rate from Montreal was 10c. per hundred pounds, the price retailers would have to pay in Port Hope would still be 22c. over the Montreal price, which is a deliberate misrepresentation of the facts.

"The boat freight rates from Montreal to Port Hope last Summer were 17c. in less than carload lots, and 9c. per hundred pounds in car lots, on the gross weight. The equalized rate on shipments by boat from Montreal is, and was, 20c. per hundred pounds in less than carload lots, and 13c. per hundred pounds in carload lots, but this equalized rate is on the net weight of the sugar, not the gross weight. To be added to the freight rate is 1½c. per hundred pounds cartage at Montreal, and marine insurance equal to 1 1-5c., a total of 19.70, to which add 7 per cent. of the rate to cover the weight of the barrel, the package being equal to 7 per cent. of the gross weight, bringing the total expense for freight and insurance on a less than carload shipment from Montreal to Port Hope 21c. per hundred pounds. The equalized rate being 20c., the wholesaler loses 1c. per hundred.

"If a carload is purchased the sugar is laid down to the retail merchant at Port Hope at 13c. per hundred pounds over the Montreal price. The freight is 9c. per hundred pounds, the cartage 1½c. in Montreal, insurance 1 1-5c., making a total of 11.70, to which add 7 per cent. to cover the weight of the barrel. The total expenditure for freight is slightly over 12½c. per hundred pounds. The equalized rate is 12c., a gain of ½c. per hundred pounds in carload lots, as against a loss of 1c. per hundred pounds in less than carload lots, and the bulk of the business is done in less than carload lots.

"I have no wish to enter into any newspaper controversy over this matter, but believing that the office of a newspaper is to put the matters intelligently before the public, and to be in a position to prove statements they make, I respectfully suggest that perhaps it would be more to the credit of your paper to refrain from such misrepresentations.

"The writer in question speaks of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild as a 'monster combine.' As a matter of fact he does not know what he is talking about. Members of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild are not in any combine, and never have been. The trade court inquiry by any commission appointed by the Government, if such is necessary, and will only be too glad to assist them in every possible way. It can be proved that the profits of those engaged in the wholesale and retail grocery business are not only ridiculously small, but on many lines carried by the trade there is not sufficient margin to cover the expense of handling same, and sugar is one of them.

"Yours truly,
"Sgd., H. C. BECKETT."

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 5, 1905.

The Grocer has given the matter of equalized rates some study, and has discussed them with a number of the trade, by very few of whom are they fully understood.

Indeed, one must have an exceptional grasp of the principles determining railway and steamship rates before he can attempt to give an intelligent account of the system.

In brief, it is a system of selling sugar delivered, instead of f.o.b., and inquiry so far has found the system to be generally satisfactory.

The difficulty lies in the apparent injustice of some rates from a relative standpoint, but it will be found generally that these inequalities are the reflection of inequalities for which the railways are responsible, and for which they have been able to give the Railway Commission a reason that has been accepted.

It is not claimed that the equalized rates are absolutely equitable, but it is claimed that they are as nearly so as is practicable under the present system of railway rates, and that as a result of the equalized rates system the margin between the cost of sugar in Montreal and the cost laid down at any point covered by the system is less than it was before the rates were introduced, and less than it would be were they abrogated. In other words, despite its faults, the system has lessened the cost of freight to all, although, possibly, not to all in the same degree.

If there are instances where the opposite is the case, they have not been brought to our notice.

The Grocer holds no brief for any section of the trade in this matter, and if the equalized rates have worked any real hardships, have made the cost of delivering sugar to the retailer greater than heretofore, or resulted in any inequality, apart from the necessary consequence of the railway rate system, as instanced above, our columns are open for a clearly defined statement of the wrong.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION NEWS

"The Canadian Grocer" the Official Organ.

Address all communications for this department to THE CANADIAN GROCER, 511 Union Bank Building, Winnipeg, Man.

FROM the long and encouraging list of new members published in last issue readers of this paper can appreciate the strong position to which the association has attained in a few months' time. There is now a strong membership in the three prairie provinces and the indications are that in a very short time the association will include in its membership roll every dealer in those three provinces with the single exception of the hardwaremen, who have their own separate organization. This rapid growth presents new problems and new opportunities for activity. An organization including practically all the dealers in three provinces will be very powerful, and if wisely and capably directed, can deal effectively with very many problems with which the individual dealer can do nothing. The large membership list also presents new problems of organization and management.

It is already becoming quite evident to all who have given the matter any thought that a system of organization that was quite adequate when the association included only a few Manitoba dealers is absurdly insufficient when the dealers of three provinces are interested in the movement. There must be more decentralization in the system. Perhaps the time is not ripe for it yet, but very soon each province must have its own provincial organization with its own president and executive and its own paid secretary-treasurer. By this is not meant that the association should break up into three distinct bodies. What The Canadian Grocer suggests is a general or federal executive with representation from all three provinces having charge of matters of general interest, while the local provincial executives will have charge of local affairs. It is already quite plain that it is physically impossible for one man to conduct the organization work in three provinces. Mr. Coulson would have quite enough to do if he were to remain in Winnipeg to attend to the complaints and queries that come to him in every mail. In addition to this he has spent months on the road in organization work and he has more to do than any one man can attend to satisfactorily. Some change is absolutely necessary if the work is to thrive and prosper as it should. This is a matter deserving of serious thought as it must be dealt with at the annual meeting in February. A large delegation from Alberta promises to attend that meeting, and no doubt there will be many dealers from Saskatchewan. A forward policy must then be inaugurated.

But if the rapid growth of the association brings new problems as to organization and ways and means, it also opens up vast possibilities for active and effective work in the common good. An organization including the vast majority of the western dealers must, by sheer weight of numbers, compel respect. Such an organization can go to the Governments and demand legislation to deal satisfactorily with the peddling nuisance. Should the trading stamp evil cause serious trouble an association such as this can easily secure the legislation necessary to stamp it out. It can also deal with early closing and a host of other things. Its strength and prestige will ensure respectful recognition on the part of governments.

But quite apart from legislation there are many ways in which such a large organization can work for the benefit of its members. One important avenue of usefulness was indicated last week. The association can render its members considerable assistance in the collection of over-due accounts and it can protect its members from debtors whose practice it is seldom or never to pay.

The mode of procedure is simple. At the present time dealers in all parts of the country are making out and rendering their accounts. Members of the association will find some accounts long over-due. These they are requested to send in duplicate to the secretary. He will forward one to the slow pay customer asking him to pay at once and telling him plainly that if he does not do so it will be the duty of the secretary, for the protection of other association members, to warn the other members by circular that this long over-due account has not been paid. In most cases this letter has the desired effect of collecting the account at once. If the account is not paid, the association members will be made acquainted with the facts and no matter where that man may go the association members will know of his unpaid account, and if they are so foolish as to allow him credit, they do so with their eyes open. Secretary Coulson is anxious that the members take advantage of this department of association usefulness.

TORONTO'S ADVERTISING SCHEME

TORONTONIANS are awakening to the commercial possibilities of their city. This is good. But what is better, they are discussing practical advertising methods, and a few days ago a conference was held under the auspices of the Board of Trade with this end in view.

Toronto has great possibilities and great attractions, but its weak spot is its municipal corporation. Business common sense is as necessary to the government of a city as it is to the management of a commercial enterprise, but the average member of the Toronto city council is poor in business common sense. When commercial problems are up for solution the governing body seem incapable of grappling with them, and they either kill or maim them by their stupidity or apathy.

Fortunately the Board of Trade is interesting itself in this publicity proposition. Otherwise we fear it would afford another opportunity for an exhibition of municipal blundering. A business council is necessary to deal with business problems.

WIGHT & CO. TO BE WOUND UP.

The parties who were at legal warfare over the assets of Wight & Co. pork packers, have buried the hatchet. All parties have agreed to a consent judgment, which has been affirmed by Chief Justice Falconbridge, by which they agree to wind up the business and to the appointment of E. R. C. Clarkson as provisional liquidator. Assets are all sold to Puddy Bros., Limited, who are to settle the claim of Harris & Co. To meet unsecured claims $1,200 is set aside and the book debts are handed over to the Bank of Commerce. The dispute over the legal retainer ended in the judicial decision that Mr. C. A. Masten was Wight & Co's. solicitor.

CHRISTMAS WINDOW DISPLAYS.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of good window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays of Christmas goods and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

FIRST PRIZE - - -	$5.00
SECOND PRIZE - - -	3.00

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on January 15th, 1906, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the pictures, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

Care should be taken to avoid reflection in the photograph. The best photos are often taken at night.

Mr. Ulman was born on a farm near Eastwood in 1845, where his boyhood was spent. In 1883 he married Elizabeth Lazenby, and about 15 years ago moved to Woodstock. Lily White Gloss Starch?

Live dealers realize that substitution doesn't pay. People enjoy being the judges of what is best for them, and it is wise policy to give them what they want. The extra profit made from trial sales of unknown brands is very insignificant compared with the continuous profit from repeated sales, sure to be the lot of any meritorious article aggresively advertised to the consumer. Lily White Gloss Starch does what is claimed for it, and the present heavy demand is the result.

Its success is a "continuous performance."

GROCERIES.

December 15, 1905.

DOMESTIC trade has shown considerable steadying as far as the wholesaler is concerned. The bulk buying for the Winter season is now practically closed, except that a few buyers at remote points are hastening supplementary orders before severe frost arrives. The great interest now is with the grocer who has laid in somewhat heavy stocks in contemplation of an extra good season. Business generally has undoubtedly warranted the presumption of increased demand. There are few features of importance to note; and as will be seen under the respective summaries, but few revisions in prices.

Canned Goods—The situation remains unchanged; demand continues on steady basis, bulk supplies having been laid in earlier. Spot stocks are falling low and there is a general feeling that other lines in addition to those mentioned in earlier issues, may prove insufficient to carry into next season. We quote.

Sugar—The local sugar market has developed considerable firmness since our last report, all yellow sugars having made a decided advance of 5 to 10 cents per hundred pounds on Monday last. Our prices are revised accordingly.

Now that a movement has been made of a strengthening character there is a general feeling that the present basis of refined sugars is about bottom. Trade prospects, however, are not likely to make any great development in the near future and this feature probably will have its influence against any immediate upward movement, although such a movement is expected by those who know.

It would appear as though the present were an opportune moment for laying in of stocks, although the market for some time has been so uncertain as to make decision in that regard a difficult matter

The New York market reports a very firm condition for raws, with supplies limited. Attention might be directed to the fact that New York prices are now only 8½ points below the parity of European markets for beet sugars. However, unless European markets advance there is very little room for an improvement in the New York raw market. Such an improvement would immediately attract European beet sugar supplies. The New York refined market is reported as extremely firm and a large business has been done but it is not generally thought that advancement will mature in the immediate future.

Coffee—The domestic trade continues to show a great deal of movement, which generally denotes that interest is continuing. There is also more marked discrimination than has been previously the case developing in a selection of coffee, the milder grades coming in for a share of interest. Local prices remain unchanged from our previous report. The foreign situation still denotes strength consequent upon the steadily decreasing world's visible stocks. The opinion which is still current is that the coffee situation is stronger than it has been for some years. Taking the total estimate of the world's harvest, a decrease in supply is manifest. Whether this will be sufficient to reduce the accumulative stock to materially influence the market is a feature upon which is much conjecture. The Brazil crop is reported as having nearly or quite reached last season's stocks. It will be remembered that the early estimates were 12 million bags. It is now put at a probable 10 million, this clearly showing a strengthening position of early estimates. Mexican and Central American are estimated as 15 to 20 per cent. less than last crops. It is calculated that the two million decrease in Brazilian statistics leaves the consumption much ahead of production. Europe has allowed her stocks to decrease in a larger proportion than accumulation of stocks in the U. S. Under these conditions it can easily be seen that the position of the market is one of strength.

Tea—Demand continues good on the home market. It is evident that the feeling on the London market is now being reflected on the Canadian market. Some time ago, at an earlier point in the season, buyers here appeared to doubt the wisdom of accepting the situation as it then presented itself, and many held back from accepting the samples then offered; time has proved, however, that values at that time were well warranted. Good and medium qualities continue to fetch well maintained figures and during more recent sales any samples showing cup qualities were well competed, thus indicating that real quality tea is believed to be scarce on primal markets. Lower grades do not command great attention and weak prices result. This condition refers equally to Indian and Ceylons, and is practically characteristic of the Canadian market.

European sales are now closing down for the holiday season. For some time, therefore, there will be nothing moving, but it is believed that the opening will be on an even stronger basis.

Foreign Dried Fruits— There is no new feature to report in these lines. The primal markets denote continued firmness and prices have advanced at these points, but no movement is reported on domestic markets, probably on account of present stocks being held on basis of earlier buying. Grocers' trade is good and every preparation is made for a good and large holiday season.

Rice and Tapioca—Trade continues good, with prices firmly held. In rice the market is strong on account of good demand; primal markets are also firm. Japan crop, it is believed, will come out about an average ordinary crop. The weather was undoubtedly against both growth and harvest, and has somewhat retarded the work, and probably will show itself in poorer quality, but the general belief is that the shortage has been exaggerated, and that an average crop will be marketed. Tapioca continues very firm and short supply.

Fish—Domestic trade is reported as being very good, in fact in advance of what is usually expected at this season, which is always a good one. Hides— The domestic market has shown an easier tendency during the week under review, which is probably somewhat attributable to the considerably weaker aspect of the U. S. markets, which have now fallen to a level which will probably cease to be of much in-look after their coffee interests. We quote:

Tea—The tea situation during the week shows no material change. There has been some considerable demand for China blacks, principally packlings in boxes from 12 1-2c. to 16c. As these teas are extremely scarce a few Congoes in half chest form have been rapidly picked up to fill orders. Sow mees seconds, young hysons, ping suey young hysons have been asked for, but as holders of same are asking somewhat high prices, owing to the extreme scarcity of the better grades, no sales to any extent are reported. Ceylon blacks have been somewhat quiet during the past week, but it is expected that the market will improve in the course of a few days, as reports are coming in from country points that stocks are now very low and the weather and road conditions are more favorable for an improvement. Ceylon greens are reported 1-4d. higher, and a few pale liquoring teas have been sold at about half a cent per lb. more than a week ago. Japans remain firm with a fair amount of trading reported on the street. There is quite a demand for fannings and siftings at from 5c. to 6c. with the general position strong. Holders of these grades are firm, as no more can be profitably be imported. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits—Business continues with its usual activity at this season of the year and we have no marked changes to advise. Later arrivals of Grenoble walnuts show an improvement in quality over the earlier fruit. California prunes have been in fair demand at advanced prices, owing to the revival of buying in the United States and the small stocks at the Coast. In all other lines prices remain steady as last quoted, while stocks are getting within reasonable compass, so that it does not appear as if there will be any surplus to carry over after the holiday trade is supplied. Rice and Tapioca—Rice is unchanged and only a regular business doing. Tapioca still maintains its firmness and there is not the slightest indication of a recession from the high prices at present asked by shippers. There is not much stock locally held here and no disposition on the part of holders to shade. We quote:

Spices—The market shows no change and business is reported only fair locally. The New York market reports peppers strong, with gingers and Cassias in strong demand. Jobbers report trade as only fair. Nutmegs are still weak and prices in buyers' favor. We quote.

Beans—There is a weakness reported in the bean market. Prices of $1.60 laid down in carload lots appear to be obtainable figures. Supplies are reported more plentiful in the West, with indications that stocks will be ample. Prices may be quoted at $1.70 to $1.75 this week, at which figure business is turning over. We quote:

Choice prime beans	1 70	1 75
Lower grades	1 60	1 65

Evaporated Apples—A firmness is the characteristic of evaporated apples. The high prices which are prevailing has in a measure curtailed the demand, though it is expected that owing to the peculiar field that can only be filled by evaporated apples, that even should prices go higher, the consuming public will respond. At present quotations in a jobbing way are in the neighborhood of 9 1-4c. to 9 1-2c. for winter varieties. Holders in the West are decidedly firm, and in view of the fact that the American market is so high, the outlet there makes them still less inclined to shade for the home market.

Maple Products—There is no change to report in maple products this week. The demand is particularly good in sugars, as this line is in good demand for Christmas and holiday trade. One of the largest maple sugar dealers reports that in his experience he has not seen such a heavy demand for pure maple products. The action of the Inland Revenue Department in securing to the consuming public pure goods has been an incentive to manufacturers of maple products to place these goods on the market in styles and shapes to suit the requirements of the consuming public. We quote:

Honey—The demand for honey through the past week has been fairly good and prices show a tendency to firmness. Comb honey selling freely at 13c. to 14c. as to quality, with white clover at 7 3-4c. to 8c. Buckwheat ranges from 6 1-4c. in a jobbing way to 6 1-2c. and 6 3-4c. usual. We quote:

Fish—The demand for fish of all kinds is brisk. Messrs. Leonard Bros. report that orders are pouring in from all sides and they are well pleased with the excellent position of the fish market. The stormy weather has caused an advance in prices of fresh haddock and cod. White fish is also scarce and prices higher. Frozen herring are meeting with brisk sale at quotations. New tomcods are now beginning to arrive and will be in ample supply in the near future. No. 1 Labrador herrings are scarce and prices higher in consequence. This is particularly so for barrels. Smoked fish, particularly haddies, are scarcer and prices firm. The demand for prepared fish is about as usual. Oysters are advancing in price at producing points, but dealers are still selling at former figures, though if the scarcity continues an advance will no doubt have to be made. Shell oysters are practically finished. We quote:

N. B. Markets

St. John, N.B., Dec. 12, 1905.

BUSINESS in wholesale grocery lines is quiet. Buying is done and there is but little selling. The quietest week in the year is that between Christmas and New Years. In the retail stores everything is now different. The stores look their best and business is at its height. This is the time when in dried fruits, nuts and candies sales almost equal those of the entire year. This is perhaps literally a fact in such lines as figs and peels, particularly the latter.

The annual meeting of the board of trade has been held. H. B. Schofield, president during the past year, was re-elected. J. A. Likely becomes vice-president. It is the intention of the board to give particular attention this year to the encouraging of manufacturing interests. St. John because of its advantages in the way of cheap coal and iron and its splendid shipping facilities, should be, and we believe will be, a large manufacturing centre.

In markets there is nothing of particular interest. Values, except sugar, rule quite firm and in many lines there are high prices.

Oil—In burning oil, prices are still low. This is the season of largest consumption. Prices quite firm at the late advance. Lubricating oils sale is small. Paint oils have little attention, except as some looking forward wish to speculate. While linseeds are still low, market is tending higher. Turpentine continues quite extreme in price. Cod oil firm at full figures. It has been a good season for the producers.

Salt—There is but a fair business. In Liverpool coarse salt, supplies can now be received weekly. Prices are quite firmly held.

Canned Goods—This line has had to take second place to dried fruits. Values are held rather firmer, particularly in tomatoes. It has been a season of low prices. Peas never before as low. In the local maraket increased competition, or perhaps we should say a disagreement among the trade, led to price-cutting. In fruits, few lines sell here, chiefly strawberries, peaches and gallon apples, with a few pears and blueberries. Salmon has just a fair sale. In domestic fish, prices unchanged. There is a good pack of sardines. Other lines just a fair pack.

Green Fruit—This is a busy time. In oranges first shipments of Valencias, Californias and Floridas are offered, but perhaps after all the best fruit is the Jamaica orange which is now at its best. In Malaga grapes this is the active season. Prices about as usual. Lemons are quite firm. Apples seem somewhat dull. Best fruit high and hard to get. Cranberries are very high.

Dried Fruit—This is the busy time; everything moves, particularly raisins. The feature of the season is the high price of the California product and the light stock. There is a good supply of Valencias and Malaga loose. Malaga layers have had a good sale. All the peel of the year is practically sold at this season and the same is largely true of figs. In these last prices have been low. Currants are firmly held and sell freely. Dates have a good demand; prices low. Nuts of all kind are in demand; it is the one big sale of the year; full prices have ruled. Evaporated apples are high. Dried have sold well at good figures. Onions are a little dull.

Sugar—Foreign sugar, that now means Scotch sugar manufactured from British cane, continues to be sold. It is, however, a small business, compared to the Canadian manufactured, which is used. The price is still very low and the market somewhat dull, though perhaps firmer.

Molasses— Prices are certainly no higher, although some grades are firmly held, particularly Barbadoes, which is quite a small stock. There is just a fair sale at this season.

Fish—This is a rather quiet line at this season. Weather so far too open for frozen fish. In some parts of the province smelt fishing has been good, and prices are high. In dry cod, and pickled herring high prices still rule, while smoked herring are firm at the advance. There is quite a demand for prepared smoked herring, boned and skinned. Finnan haddies continue quite scarce.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour prices show no change. There is a steady business. Oats and oatmeal are firm at the very full figures which now rule. Cornmeal unchanged. In beans higher prices are asked. Yellow Eyes, while still low, are firmer. Full stocks are held. Barley and split peas have but a limited deland.

Provisions.

Barrel pork is very firmly held. The best season of demand is over. A good business is reported. Beef unchanged. Smoked meats held at full figures. Pure lard is still high and somewhat hard to get. Refined lard is low and has a good steady sale. Fresh meats hardly begin to show holiday business. Beef is low. Lamb is still holding firm at good prices. Mutton dull. Veal is scarce and not in demand. Pork is high.

N. S. Markets.

THE jobbers say that the volume of business in the grocery trade is good. Sales generally are satisfactory in all lines and the trade in some respects is even better than at this season last year. Prices rule partly steady, and very little change is noted. There has been an advance in the price of oatmeal, which is now quoted at $5.90 to $6.00. Cornmeal is selling at $2.90 to $2.95. The molasses markets are steady and there is a probability with the cold weather setting in, that prices may become a little stronger. Quotations in Halifax follow: Fancy Trinidad, 40c. to 42c.; fancy Barbadoes, 40c.; fancy Porto Rico,, 39c.; extra choice Porto Rico, 35c. to 37c.; choice Trinidad, 35c. to 36c.: Barbadoes, 33c.

Sugar.

The price of refined sugar at present remains steady, and no great change is anticipated in the immediate future. There has been an advance of 10c. made in raw sugar, but it has not affected the local market. The jobbers are not looking for any advance, they have full confidence in the market and they are not laying in any large stocks. Jobbing quotations in the local market are: Cut loaf, in barrels, $5.90; XXX granulated, $4.35; Austrian granulated, $4.25; bright yellow, $4.15; No. 1 yellow, $3.85; unbranded yellow, $3.70.

Apples.

Nova Scotia apples are bringing good prices in the English market this year. Some of the fruit sent to that market this year has brought record prices. C. H. R. Starr, of Wolfville, one of the largest shippers in this province, who was in the city yesterday, stated that one lot netted the shipper $7.85 per barrel, the biggest price ever obtained for Nova Scotia apples in London. He said that there have been higher average prices realized this season, good as it is, but none that equal the figure given above. He said that an orchardist at Port Williams shipped to Northard & Lowe, London, 20 barrels of apples by the Furness liner Gulf of Ancud from this port, which sold as follows: 12 barrels of Coxe's orange pippin at 50s.; two barrels of Coxe's orange pippin at 30s., and six of Kings at 21s. This means a net price to the orchardist for the whole lot of $7.25 per barrel. These varieties are grown in England, but the crop is short there this year. Heavy shipments of apples continue to be made from Halifax, as the demand for the price in the English market continues good, and the high prices realized induce the grower to send his apples to that market. The fruit on this market is only fair, and for fair class apples, $4.00 per barrel is the price asked.

Evaporated apples are also very high, quotations being from 9 1-2c. to 10c. Shipments are large and the dealers say that they expect a further advance.

Butter and Eggs.

The receipts of butter and eggs show little improvement. Butter continues in good demand even at the high prices. The receipts of Winter butter so far this season, are very light. Mostly all the large dealers are importing butter from Quebec and Ontario. The Nova Scotia farmers do not appear to have the butter to place on the market and even if they have it in stock they are holding off for higher prices, expecting that prices will stiffen as the season advances. Usually at this season of the year, large shipments of butter are received here from Antigonish, points in Cape Breton, and also from P. E. Island, but so far this season they are comparatively light. Eggs are in fair demand and fresh laid stock is scarce. Pickled eggs are selling at 23c. to 24c. Fresh laid are fetching 40c. straight, and they find ready purchasers even at this high price.

B. C. Markets.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec., 1905.

CHRISTMAS trade is looking well for the jobbers of the coast cities so far. Some of them feel that they should have had expansion to correspond with the big growth the whole year has shown, but, nevertheless, all are a unit in saying that this season's holiday trade promises to total much larger than last. It is also averred that never before was the trade in more satisfactory condition all round. Upcountry, as well as on the coast, business is solid, settlements are good, and the turnover of stocks very active.

There is, unfortunately, a little tendency to cut prices among the retail trade of the city of Vancouver. Canned goods are being quoted at actual cost, and flour has been cut back to the narrowest margin. In some other lines there has also been the same tendency.

Groceries.

The annual receipts of fancy groceries in some lines have been somewhat delayed. There are no almonds and no Grenoble walnuts in stock yet. These are, however, expected to arrive any day. The California walnuts do not come up to the standard of the Grenoble, and they are priced too high to make it any object to stock with them in preference to the older and better known variety.

Spanish raisins, valencias and Mediterranean loose muscatels, are due today for the first time this season. It is usually a single order that is placed for these goods here, because the California raisins are in control of the market. But this year the attitude of the Raisin Growers' Association, or the "combine," as it is called, has forced prices away up. The Spanish goods are actually cheaper. Valencias are to be sold round 6¼ and 6½c., while the California raisins are selling at 7½ and 8½c. The association is not selling the goods at present on account of their high prices, the independent growers of California, or those not in the combine, getting the orders. Every one in the trade expects to see a big drop in California raisins after the holiday season, it being generally reported that the growers are pledged to keep the price up till then.

In canned goods here a little price cutting has been indulged, as the big concern has been quoting some lines at actual cost, which has led the independent canners to give them a chase. As a result, some lines, as canned peas, have been selling at what it would cost to land them here. Most of the wholesale grocers have stocked up for the season on canned goods, so that eastern market quotations are not controlling here, the usual feature of selling on basis of early buying being still in vogue.

Evaporated fruits are away up, the market being rather unsettled, apricots, for instance, selling at 6c., 8c., and 9c. Evaporated apples are scarce. In other lines there is a fair stock, prunes being perhaps the shortest line. Most dealers stocked pretty well before the prices raised, and as the opening of the season was marked by very low prices, those dealers who bought are fortunate.

Produce.

Fresh local creamery butter is selling here now really as low as eastern stored stock could be. It is jobbing at 30c., while eastern market reports show that it would cost over 28c. to land here. The stocks of eastern creamery on hand are now quoted at 27c., or thereabouts. No heavy stocks are being carried, and as local fresh will reduce in supply from now till Spring, stocks will have to be renewed on basis of eastern prices. It is too early to expect anything in the way of fresh California butter, and New Zealand and Australian butter, which sometimes comes to this market in this season, is reported very high; too high to handle at a profit.

Eggs, stored stock, are selling at all sorts of prices, the prevailing figure, however, being 27c. for recandled stock There are sufficient in the market for present needs.

Local fresh sell retail at 55c., and if a supply is obtainable in a jobbing way, which is irregular at this season, 45 to 50c. can be obtained for the strictly new-laid variety. Oregon eggs, fresh, not candled stock, are too high to bring in, conditions there being about the same as here at present.

Flour.

All kinds of prices are being quoted at the present moment. The retail trade is indulging in a little humorous price juggling on this staple at present, some of them advertising Ogilvie's Royal Household at $1.40 the 50-lb. sack, which is practically present cost. Other dealers are sticking at $1.50 and $1.60, which would be about the right thing at present wholesale quotation of $5.80 per bbl. for the leading brands.

TEA STANDARDS FOR CANADA.

Editor Canadian Grocer :— Referring to the article on "Tea Standards for Canada" in your last number, I may be permitted to say that I concur fully in what you state and I can add that I myself have had refused 250 boxes of Ping Suey, when I can prove that some of the same lot shipped by the same house in Shanghai were passed and one lot inferior also from the same house was passed. This is no idle statement, as I am willing to prove this by putting the samples before six tea men. Again, during the last ten days one lot of 46 half chests of Ceylon green pin head has been refused, while I myself have in stock the same class of goods which were passed a short time ago. I am not in favor of low grade teas, but we must know where we stand and being at the tender mercies of one man who may have his liver out of order, or something else not right, let us have standards and a board of arbitration.

I wish to commend The Grocer for the interest it has taken in this vital matter and I feel satisfied that the tea trade generally of Canada will appreciate the efforts you are putting forth to place our business on a basis of certainty.

Yours truly,
E. D. MARCEAU.

SCARCITY OF BACON HOGS.

It is not easy to say why with the incentive to the production of pork so strong, the price obtained for the fattened animals so high, and the cost of rearing them so low, there should be such a scarcity of bacon hogs in Canada that the Department of Agriculture has found it necessary to direct a special inquiry into the subject.

There was never so keen a demand for Canadian bacon in the British market as there is to-day, and the packing establishments are eager to meet the demand with increasing supplies if they can, but the bacon hogs are simply not to be had. It is said that the packing establishments find the shortage of supply so great that they contemplate closing down their plants for a time.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 14th, 1905.)

CHRISTMAS grocery trade is now in full swing, but another week will see the end of the Christmas rush so far as the wholesale houses are concerned. Cold weather has stimulated all branches of the wholesale trade and shipments have been heavy. Throughout almost the entire grocery list values are steady this week and there are few features of interest. Tapioca continues to advance and it is now quoted at $5.50 per cwt. Walnuts have been advanced owing to the big shrinkage on which the wholesale houses had not calculated.

Canned Goods— The canned goods market is without features of interest. Prices are still quoted as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruits—It is reported on good authority that the California market in apricots, peaches and other dried fruits has been pretty effectually cornered and that higher prices may be expected as a consequence. At all events there is a strong undertone to the California dried fruit market and in usually well informed circles early advances are expected. In fact, Valencia raisins and cooking figs are almost the only items in the whole foreign dried fruit list that are not held at unusually high prices. Consequently there is a strong demand for both. Prices are quoted as follows.

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder Pays a Greater Profit to the Grocer Than any Other Baking Powder He Sells.

Profit means real money in the bank. It does not mean "percentage," which may represent very little actual money. A grocer often has the chance to sell either:

1. A baking powder for 45c. a pound and make a profit of 5c. or 6c., or,
2. A baking powder for 10c. a pound and make "20 per cent profit," which means only 2c. actual money. Which choice should you take?

Royal Baking Powder makes the customer satisfied and pleased, not only with the baking powder, but also with the flour, butter, eggs, etc., which the grocer sells.

This satisfaction of the customer is the foundation of the best and surest profit in business—it is permanent. Do not take the risk of selling a cheap alum baking powder; some day the customer may find out about the alum, and then your best profit in the customer's confidence is gone.

Royal Baking Powder pays greater profits to the grocer than any other baking powder he sells.

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Crest Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

TOMMY ATKINS INTERLUDES

Little Tommy Atkins,
One day was very cranky,
He felt like fighting anything
Be he Russian, Jap or Yankee;
What caused this state of feeling,
This temper far from sweet?
He didn't have for breakfast,
His dish of ORANGE MEAT.

"Tommy" was cranky because he didn't have Orange Meat to eat, but if a grocer is cranky because he hasn't got Orange Meat to sell, when other "Tommy Atkinses" ask for it, he has nobody but himself to blame.

Every grocer in the country ought to keep Orange Meat regularly because it is being widely advertised and continually asked for. Grocers who sell Orange Meat style it: Best Goods—Full Weight, Fair Price. They know that the "High-Quality" standard has never been lowered.

The Jumbo package, selling at 25c., contains 2½ times as much as a package of other foods selling at 2 for 25c., which means that in price the Jumbo package is on a par with the 10c. goods, but that in quality it is vastly superior.

The 15c. package of Orange Meat contains coupons returnable for valuable premiums. The coupons draw trade.

So you see, Orange Meat is a profitable food to handle.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

TORONTO.

WHILST the general conditions of trade are considered good, at the moment of going to press there is a decided lull in activity. This may be in great measure owing to the near approach of the Christmas trade, most buyers having laid in stocks in anticipation.

Millers report fairly good activity, but more by way of execution of orders which have been on hand for some time than on new orders. The demand noted previously from the Maritime Provinces has now slowed off, the reason given being that any goods shipped at the present time would reach their termination just as the busy holiday season was in full swing, hence the marked decrease in orders from these districts. The export market has been particularly dull since our last report. Fewer inquiries have been in evidence and no large orders placed of any particular note.

In cereals arrivals have been coming in plentifully and in condition equal to previous arrivals, but have not been considered equal to last season's showing. Prices generally remain unchanged but firm.

FORT WILLIAM'S NEW MILL.

A NEW plant of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, which is nearing completion at Fort William, will be one of the greatest in the world.

The mill building proper will have a daily capacity of five thousand barrels of flour. At present, however, machinery is being installed for three thousand barrels, and so arranged that the additional capacity can be added as future circumstances require.

In connection with the mill is the large steel fireproof elevator, having a storage capacity of 600,000 bushels, and through which also all the wheat required for the large Montreal mills of the company is passed by loading into vessels. Many of these vessels come directly through to Montreal via the canal system, so that wheat can now be loaded into vessels from the company's own elevator at Fort William without transhipment through to Montreal, and unloaded into the company's big mills on the canals. The wheat which the company grinds in Montreal comes direct from the farmers in the interior through the company's own elevators.

The total frontage on the Kaministiquia River is six hundred and fifty feet, and has water accommodation for vessels to the depth of 22 feet.

One of the largest flour warehouses in Canada is also built in connection with this plant, having storage capacity of one hundred and twenty-five thousand barrels. There is also in course of erection a large cooper shop, having a capacity of 2,000 barrels per day, consequently the company will have practically three independent barrel factories, at Winnipeg, Fort William and Montreal.

The estimated cost of the Fort William plant is over $600,000, and provision has been made in connection with the elevator to allow of additions which can be carried on up to the extent of 2,000,000 bushels storage capacity when necessary. The construction of the plant has been devised to afford the most economical system of handling, and as Fort William is a base of supply for the raw material, the location is certainly unique.

Everything in connection with the plant will be operated by electricity. The development of the great Kakabeka Falls, which is being carried on by Messrs. H. S. Holt, C. E. Hosmer and F. W. Thompson, will supply the power. The total daily capacity of the Ogilvie mills will approximate 15,000 barrels daily. This includes the Royal mill, Montreal; the Glenora mill, Montreal; Cornmeal Products mill, Montreal; Winnipeg flour mill, Winnipeg, and the Fort William mill.

"ALBERTA" WHEAT.

The secretary of the Board of Trade of Red Deer, Alberta, has written to the Trade and Commerce Department asking that the brand of wheat commonly known as soft wheat be called Alberta wheat. The board believes Alberta is entitled to this advertisement. The soft wheat is famous in many lands, but it is doubtful if the Federal authorities can do anything to substitute a new name for it.

JAPAN RICE FAMINE.

Mr. A. McLean, the Canadian Commercial agent in Japan, reports that the rice crop is so serious a failure in Japan that the Government is taking up the question of providing for people who have been reduced to want on account of the failure. The suffering in some parts is very serious and the people are enduring great hardships.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Flour.

The demand for flour has been slow, and trade uninteresting. Dealers have already laid in stocks for holiday season, and orders coming to hand are of small volume. Millers report activity on orders on hand. We quote:

Manitoba wheat patents, per bbl. in bags			4 45	4 85
Strong bakers	"	"	4 25	4 65
Ontario wheat patents	"	"	3 75	4 00
Straight roller	"	"	3 50	3 75

Grain.

The grain situation remains on about same line as our previous report. No new feature has developed, and no change in prices is recorded. We quote:

Breakfast Cereals.

A fair activity continues in these lines, with prices remaining firm. Arrivals of grain suitable for cereal products are somewhat difficult to obtain, which has the effect of keeping prices steady. We quote :

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Flour.

Local flour market is unchanged, with business on the quiet side, although a fair demand is reported from country points. There is no change to note in prices, although the report is that the smaller western millers are shading somewhat. We quote :

Winter wheat patents	4 60	4 80
Straight rollers	4 20	4 40
Extra	4 30	4 70

Manitoba spring wheat patents	....	4 90

Rolled Oats.

The rolled oats market remains firm, with a demand rather on the limited side. There is a fair quantity of stock on hand. It is not anticipated by dealers that any radical change is likely to be made by the association. We quote :

Fine oatmeal, bags	2 55	2 60
Standard oatmeal, bags	2 60	2 70

Feed.

All dealers report good business in feed of all kinds. Manitoba bran, which is quoted at $17 per ton, in bags, and shorts at $19, is having a ready sale. Ontario brand is reported rather scarce and prices nominally $17 to $17.50 per ton in bags. No change in mouillie. We quote :

Ontario shorts	20 00	2350
Manitoba shorts	19 00	19 50
" bran	17 00	17 25
Mouillie, milled	21 00	24 00
" straight grained	25 00	28 00

Hay.

There is no further change to report in the hay situation. The market is easy and the situation seems to be in buyers' favor, as values are low. Dealers report advices of a firmer foreign market, particularly in Liverpool and Manchester. We quote :

No. 1	8 50	9 00
" 2	7 50	8 00
Clover mixed	6 00	6 50

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

TORONTO.

BOTH local and outside points have shown considerable activity since our last issue. Many of the orders placed earlier for future delivery have now been drawn upon, and other orders placed for delivery before severe frost arrives.

Dealers report this year's trade as the best on record. Business has had an extremely healthy tone all through. Goods have arrived in good form and prices have been well maintained. There is a feeling, however, that the margin left for the dealer is getting much too low. Expenses of working are increasing rather than otherwise, whereas farmers are expecting advanced prices, making it increasing difficult for the smaller dealers to provide against the contingencies which are constantly arising. The key to the situation at the present moment would appear to lie in the dealer making for a large bulk trade.

California fruits are arriving plentifully, and in prime condition. Private auctions are being continued as cars of fruit arrive, and appear to be increasing in popularity.

Interest in the apple trade appears to be centred in the export situation, any fluctuation in that market being quickly reflected on the domestic. Latest reports from Europe reveal a weakening tendency. The Liverpool sales report had not reached here, but it is generally felt that prices will be on a lower basis.

The vegetable trade has shown very little interest. A few lines are reported scarce, but it is believed there are plenty on the farms, ready for delivery. A quantity of potatoes have arrived on track, awaiting bidders.

The quotations of both fruits and vegetables remain unchanged.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Fruit.

THE Empress of India, which arrived recently from the Orient, brought the third, and so far the largest, consignment of Jap oranges to be received this season. She had 35,000 boxes, and the market is practically cleaned up even with this big delivery. Of course the lot includes heavy shipments to Calgary, Edmonton, and interior British Columbia points. This is virtually the best lot of this favorite little orange, as the first two lots received were very green. Later on there will be perhaps two more consignments, which will close the very short season in which this fruit runs on this market. While it is here the Jap is a strong seller, and California oranges are almost shut out. As mentioned formerly, the packing of the Japs in small boxes, of size purchasable by the average householder, and the small size of the individual specimens, has a big influence, as well as the toothsomeness of the fruit. Perhaps the short season makes the movement livelier, too. This year the jobbing price is averaging 50c.

Apples have been somewhat lower in price. The Alberta market, which is practically supplied from the Okanagan, buys early, in fact gets advance orders placed. That settles the demand there to a large extent, and at this season fruit can only be shipped in that province by express or by heated car, an expensive method, so the residue of the Okanagan stock comes to the coast market, where its choice quality gives it first place. This year there has been rather more than usual, and prices have declined slightly. Varieties which sold for $1.75 two weeks ago are now going at $1.50. Local lower mainland apples are coming in still, and are bringing from 75c to $1.25 per box. These are not now being shipped in with such random selection as in former years, the Dominion fruit inspector having instilled a wholesome respect for the demands as to quality. Culled fruit is not now being handled, and not being offered. Growers do not find it pay to have refuse branded with their names, as required by the fruit inspection act. They do the culling at home, sending the better stock only.

Malaga grapes have sold well this season, two cars having been brought in. This was a direct importation by Oscar Brown & Co., Limited, from Spain. They sold to the trade at $7.75 per keg.

A car of Cape Cod cranberries arrived this week for Christmas trade.

Vegetables.

There is never a month that ripe tomatoes cannot be obtained on this market. At the present moment the stock, though limited, is from the Victoria hot-houses, and is selling at $3 per 20-lb. crate. A few crates of fresh cucumbers from California are in stock and selling at $2.50. Celery is still of local supply and is quoted at 40c per dozen. It is nearly out, and then California-grown celery will be brought in.

Some potatoes are still being shipped to Australia. On the next steamer, which sails next Friday, a car will be shipped. Really choice upper country product now commands $28 per ton. Lower mainland potatoes were badly enough demoralized, but the recent cold snap caught a good many and froze them badly. The price is all round from $14 to $20. A few potatoes from Yakima, Wash., the Ashcroft district of that state, have been received here, and are quoted at $28 to $30 per ton.

Sweet potatoes are in the market and selling at 3½c per lb.

A FRUIT PRICE LIST.

McWilliam & Everist, Church street, Toronto, have issued a very attractive and concise price list of Christmas fruits. It contains almost every line on the market at the present season. Each item is set forth in its respective grading and price, and forms a very handy reference card.

STANDARD FRUIT BASKETS.

ONE of the largest meetings of fruit growers ever held in the Niagara peninsula took place at St. Catharines on November 29, for the purpose of discussing the question of adopting a standard size of fruit baskets. The present legal basket for grapes, etc., is six and two-thirds quarts. The meeting, however, resolved to make two standard sizes, six and eleven quarts respectively. Parliament will be asked at its next session to amend the fruit law to that effect. Growers were present from many points in Ontario, and the meeting was thoroughly representative of the fruit growers of the province. It was pointed out that many different sizes of fruit baskets as at present means the consumer gets less fruit for his money, because the cost of manufacture of baskets is greater than if there be a stated rule on shape and size. Manufacturers now have to be prepared to make any kind of basket that may be called for. A committee was appointed to decide as to the shape of the new standard baskets. It was decided that these baskets may be used for any kind of fruit the grower desires.

CANADIAN FRUIT IN LONDON.

British Columbia's exhibit of apples at Caxton Hall, London, was the finest seen in England for years. The exhibit covered a space 75 feet long and 6 feet wide and the Horticultural Society awarded the province a gold medal and eight industrial exhibitors' medals of lesser value. The Nova Scotia exhibit also was much admired and the agent general was awarded a silver medal and four other exhibitors also received medals.

REDLANDS ORANGES RUN SMALL.

Advices this week from Redlands, Cal., to New York say that oranges are particularly small this Fall, the crop, in fact, running to smaller counts than has been the case in years, and in the first cars that will be shipped out of Redlands it is anticipated that there will be no 96s, and only a limited number of 126s.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Trade in green fruits has been on the quiet side with jobbers. Retailers have been waiting until old stocks were closed out before stocking up with fresh goods for Christmas and holiday trade. Prospects are bright for a good holiday trade. Sweet potatoes are selling at $4.50. This difference in price on last week's quotation is due to arrival of different varieties, (Vinelands) which are now in demand. The first car of California celery arrived last Friday and was sold freely at $5.00. This is very good considering the quantity of ocal stock still held on the market. Cranberries remain firm and stocks light. Several cars of navels arrived during the week and these show up in better condition, not being so green. We quote:

Vegetables.

There is no change in the local vegetable market, with the exception that potatoes are showing up firmer and prices are advancing. Yellow onions are very scarce and red onions in good demand at $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel. The arrival of new California celery has stimulated business in these goods, although stocks of local production are still fairly good. We quote:

FRESH AND CURED FISH

TORONTO.

HUSTLE and bustle is the way things are going on the local fish market. Everywhere are signs of activity, arrivals are well on time and in full abundance, yet it is often found difficult to keep the demand satisfied.

The arrangements made this season with regard to the oyster market has proved so far satisfactory, the continuous supply comes well to hand each day about noon, and is often disposed of before night. The quality is pronounced as excellent, far in advance of what is usually expected, and trade has been booming.

Deep sea fish appears to be gaining in favor and dealers have their eyes on the "Scotch Lassies" and much speculation is indulged in as to whether their visit will result in adding "Scotch cured haddies" to our already interesting list of fish foods.

The earlier prices are still ruling firm and steady and no change is expected this side of the holiday.

PACIFIC DEEP-SEA FISH.

PROF. E. A. PRINCE, who is in Vancouver at present, speaking of the fisheries on the coast says that he believes the deep sea branch of the industry will become in the near future one of the greatest assets of the province. The business has only been touched very lightly yet, but this neglect cannot continue much longer.

Attention is being attracted to the value of the deep sea fisheries, and information on the subject is being sought.

The halibut is about the only fish which at the present time is taken in anything like commercial quantities in the waters of the Pacific Coast. The industry is capable of extension in this branch, and there are other classes of fish which will yet become more important to the province.

Among them is the herring, which at the present time is attracting a great deal of attention. This is due in large measure to the interest shown by the Dominion Government in enlisting the services of J. J. Cowie, the Scotch expert, who has been engaged to give information on the improved methods of curing fish.

Speaking of the subject of curing herring in Scotland, Prof. Prince points out that the best selling variety of kippers put up by the Scotch fishermen is of a very mild type. This finds a ready sale in various parts of Europe, noticeably in some of the German states, where only the best trade is catered to.

Prof. Prince thinks that the cod fisheries of the coast will become very important. There are evidences that the true cod exists in some of the northern waters, although no systematic effort has been made to prove the presence of the fish in commercial quantities. There are also black cod and ling cod in the British Columbia waters which will all prove valuable.

SCOTCH KIPPERED HERRING.

Merchants were yesterday in receipt of Nanaimo kippered and bloated herring put up under the direction and supervision of Mr. Cowie and his Scotch lassies. The fish sold at two pounds for 25 cents. In appearance the cured herring look fine and it is expected there will be an excellent demand for the local product.

The stores are also displaying a large line of smoked halibut from Vancouver. It has been some two months since this article was last on the market, and now that a satisfactory settlement has been arrived at by the fisheries commission, the supply of cured halibut should be plentiful.

HERRING INDUSTRY PROSPEROUS

If one may judge from the present indications, the herring industry at Nanaimo will be given the biggest impetus in its history this year. The fish are now running steadily, and all the various salteries and curing establishments are in full swing with orders booked ahead for the next three months. One important advancement in the industry over previous years is the opening up of eastern markets hitherto enjoyed exclusively by Atlantic fishermen.

The steamer Squid of the New England Fishing Co., took in seven tons of fish this morning in half an hour. A steamer fouled a large net of the Nanaimo Co., resulting in the loss of a large quantity of herring to that concern.

TO PRESERVE THE SALMON.

The decision of the International Fisheries Commission to advocate a closed season during 1906 and 1908 will unquestionably meet with the approval of the public, says the Vancouver Province. It is recognized that the conservation of the salmon industry in these waters must be assured, and that unless steps toward that end are taken without delay, the red salmon, which is its mainstay, may become extinct. It is to be hoped that in addition to making this recommendation, the Commission will at its approaching sittings formulate such definite rules and regulations for the protection of the fisheries on both sides of the boundary line that slaughterous methods, which in some cases at least have been pursued in the past, will be completely suppressed. All efforts on the part of the Government to perpetuate the salmon by means of hatcheries must practically fail unless the fishermen of both countries have regard to the prohibition.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

CHRISTMAS WINDOW ATTRACTIONS.

THERE is little question but that the coming Christmas time is a most opportune one for the grocer intending to push his lines of confectionery; by falling in line right away he will be able to get ahead of his trade and make a good showing.

A little thought and care will work wonders by way of stimulating trade. The greater number of the public are "followers," not "leaders," and it is well for the storekeeper to ever keep this in mind.

A little novelty in display, especially in the show window, will accomplish a good deal. An excellent idea at a holiday season is the moving figure for the window, of which there are many designs. The attention of the passer-by is immediately arrested, and if a fine show has been arranged a customer is almost certainly scored.

POPCORN SURPRISES THE ENGLISH MARKET.

EVER since that historical occasion when Sir Walter Raleigh's servant dashed a mug of ale into that distinguished courtier's face, English customs, English markets and even English palaces have been subject to invasion from this country. Beginning with tobacco smoking, the Englishman has gradually succumbed to the influence of innovations that had their origin in this country, until now almost anything new that makes its appearance in London is at once put down to American origin.

Latest of all "invasions" from this side is popcorn, which was first really "introduced" into London last Spring. In a little over six months the British appetite has fallen a victim to the habit which has long enthralled the small boy and his sister in this country, as well as those of more mature years, who seek the seaside resorts in the Summer time.

* * *

Not only London has succumbed to "Maizypop," as it is called over there in deference to English diction, in which "corn" means any sort of grain, but the provinces have been calling out for it, and the equipment of the original factory has just had to be quadrupled in order to meet the demand. S. W. Bonsall, who is responsible for launching this peculiarly American commodity upon the British public, anticipates having to obtain much larger quarters in the Spring.

* * *

Mr. Bonsall, who is at the head of a big trunk concern in New York, of whose wares he is the inventor, returned the other day on the Amerika, of the Hamburg-American line, after a month's visit to London, whither he was summoned by a "hurry call" from his manager over there, who, it appears, was almost appalled at the rapid growth of the popularity of "maizypop" among the Britishers.

"The idea of taking popcorn over there entered my mind during a visit to London last year," said Mr. Bonsall. "Before I went over last Spring with my manager and a Coney Island expert popcorn maker, I had arranged to control the exportation of a certain kind of popcorn, the best on the market, and of popcorn machinery for a term of years.

"By letting the people I dealt with see I was in earnest I was soon in possession of a big building in Tottenham Court Road, and waiting until Easter Monday, which is a bank holiday in England, I sent a wagon load of maizypop out to Hampstead Heath, where I knew there would be a big crowd of holiday makers. When I reached there in the afternoon I found no trace of the van, but in a side street near by a great crowd was collected.

"In the centre was the wagon, leaning against which was my Coney Island 'expert,' who was weeping bitterly. The necessary license had been forgotten, and a 'bobby' had prevented the vender from selling the stuff. I ordered the maizypop to be given away, and it was a sight to see the mob fighting for the packages as they were distributed.

"Knowing that the question of the unemployed was a serious one in London, I determined to obtain my street vendors through the guardians of the poor in the different boroughs of London. I stipulated that they should supply me with men who were in need of work and willing, preferably those with families. I bought clean white uniforms, transforming these ragged, miserable creatures into fine, clean, respectable looking men and sent them out, each with a fresh suit of clothes every morning. Each carried twelve dozen packages in a neat basket and was given what they call over there a 'pitch,' that is a certain district which he was to occupy exclusively during the day. As these men were practically guaranteed by the various bureaus which sent them, I required no deposit of any kind from them, but they were trusted with the product until it was sold.

"As a result of my obtaining salesmen through the guardians, together with our treatment of them and disposition toward them, and the facility with which they make money, earning, many of them, more than they had ever made before in a week, and knowing that if I did not employ them they would be dependent on the city for support, the police have recognized my vendors and have favored them. There seems to be a tacit understanding that they be allowed privileges such as are given to no other street sellers.

"The only reason that we have been able to keep up with the demand in London at all is that during the middle of the week there is a lull. Men are paid

"Now one remarkable thing is that notwithstanding the fact that until I went abroad this last time we had absolutely refused to sell our goods outside of London, finding that we could dispose of our entire production in that city, I found when I advertised for agents in provincial papers that 'maizypop' was apparently known everywhere in England, as was shown from the contexts of the vast number of applications received.

"The product we have put out in London differs from the popcorn one buys at Coney Island and such places. We put it up in a kind of package that insures cleanliness, and it is being recognized as good, digestible and nutritious. We manufactured several little things—side lines—when we first started, but we had to give up the candy shop idea entirely and devote ourselves exclusively to maizypop.

• • •

"Maizypop has penetrated even the fashionable West End of London, and in some households is superseding the toast and marmalade which for centuries have been the accompaniment of the Englishman's morning tea or coffee. I was at the Lord Mayor's banquet just before I left, and after Mr. Balfour's speech about the unemployed a knot of men got around me in one of the little rooms adjoining the banquet room and asked me all sorts of questions about my system of employing men. I was introduced to a Member of Parliament, who told me that every member of his family ate maizypop.

"My experience in London has convinced me that notwithstanding the reports we hear that American firms cannot do business over there, the English capital affords one of the greatest fields in existence for American enterprise. Honest American business methods, if rightly pursued over there, will win out every time. It is a city of marvellous opportunities. London is an altogether different sort of place from the provincial cities, which are wide awake and hustling. It is dead, but it can be awakened.

"But let me suggest that any American who goes over there with the idea of 'doing' English tradesmen is making a wrong move. No 'skin game' originating over here can succeed. Any man who expects to fool the London tradesmen is sure to have his eye teeth taken from him.

"Another thing is their intolerable slowness. One has continually to storm and swear at them, to call them all the worst names in the calendar—and it is remarkable what they will stand for—but when they see one is in earnest, they move with surprising alacrity.

"I wanted some special tin boxes made for a salesman. I was told it would take three weeks to get them. 'We have tin factories in America,' I told them, 'from whom I could get what I wanted delivered in London in ten days.' Under threat of cabling to New York I actually got what I wished in three days.

"My manager was beset at first by all sorts of people who wanted to see our plant and get at our methods. His experience with them was such that he refused to let anybody see the inside of the factory. I recently adopted the policy of throwing our works open to public inspection. We are bound to have imitators, but I know that there is no Englishman who would imitate my product but who would adulterate and in the end 'queer' his own business."

Why Some Grocers Have Not Met With Cigar Success

Perhaps you are discouraged with cigar results in your store—think the business is all going the other way. Have you given cigars the same attention you have given groceries? Have you arranged them with the same care and precision? Have you stocked only "good-reputation" cigars?

No grocer was ever known to give up cigar-selling who, first, was "particular" in his selection, and, second, "particular" in the attention given to his selection.

If the grocer was "particular" in his selection he would seek "Ideal Smokers," "Ideal Sellers," cigars whose "taste value" could travel, whose aroma could tell tales of delight to others.

PEBBLE AND PHARAOH

would be the cigars selected. They would be arranged with an eye to catching new smokers, and, of course, business would grow. The "5c." buyers would ask for the PEBBLE; the "10c." buyers would ask for PHARAOH, and the boxes would "go down."

No failure there! It's the difference in cigars that makes the difference. Secure the right kind of cigars and the right trade comes naturally.

PEBBLE and PHARAOH—1,000 assorted—there you are!

"I want my cigars to be known as the cigars that are always good."

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

CIGARETTES AND INSANITY.

"DOES cigarette smoking cause insanity? was the direct question asked by a committee of the Medico-Legal Society of New York of the medical superintendents of the hospitals for insane of the United States, and not a single case was reported in answer," says Dr. Willian B. Fletcher in Medical Progress. "Responses from alienists of Europe showed great surprise, as the subject had never been thought of by them. Personally, I have examined over 200 works on insanity published in English with the essence of German and French literature by translation, and by no alienist or medical writer of any repute is the word cigarette found in relation to causation, nor is smoking tobacco in any form mentioned in connection with mental disease.

"In the past twenty years I have examined over 1,200 cases of nervous disease and insanity where the cause of the malady was given by their friends as the cigarette habit. In not one case have I reason to believe that tobacco had anything to do with the causation of the disease. The patients were all young men, and some of them insane without doubt. Some of them smoked cigarettes to excess; the excess was not the cause of the insanity."

AMERICAN TOBACCO TRUST IN ENGLAND.

AMERICAN trusts of every description have just received a severe blow in England. The decision given in the court of appeal in the litigation brought against Ogdens Limited, the great tobacco firm, by retail tobacconists, will have a far-reaching influence on every American industry which attempts to establish a monopoly in England.

Retail tobacconists are jubilating over their really great victory. They will be able to compel the trust started in England by Mr. Duke to disgorge the best part of $7,500,000 and besides this the trust will have to pay an additional $3,500,000—making the colossal total of $11,000,000.

The next step in this litigation, however—when the assessing of damages goes before a British jury—will undoubtedly be the one topic of conversation among smokers all over the world.

The man who has conducted the fight on behalf of the 4,500 retail tobacconists organized to oppose the Duke combine, is Henry Jerrold Nathan, chairman of the Ogden's Bonus Association. Seen at his office, No. 10 Throgmorton avenue, Mr. Nathan said:

"Our organization— the Ogden's Bonus Association—is the only company ever formed for the express purpose of litigation. We have won, hands down.

"When Mr. Duke came to England four years ago as the representative of the trust, he bought out Ogdens by offering the English tobacco company $1,000,000 a year for four years; and the whole of the net profits; and at the same time, he obtained agreements from 500 tobacconists that they would not deal with any other concern. When he had all these agreements, he disposed of the good will of Ogdens, which, of course, carried the signatures of the tobacconists to the Imperial Tobacco Co. for $7,500,000. He then sent a check to each of the tobacconists, with a circular, telling him he was no longer in business, the check being the proportion of the $1,000,000 for the first year.

"This high-handed proceeding resulted in my forming the Ogden's Bonus Association for the purpose of claiming the undistributed bonus (as agreed by Duke) of $3,500,000 and also the four years' profit. We went to law over the matter and won. Duke carried the matter up on appeal, and every judge confirmed the lower court; in fact, the appeal was contemptuously dismissed, with costs, which are very heavy.

"The action of the American Tobacco Trust in this matter has affected the standing of every American business in England. Up to this time, English businessmen have regarded the trusts as straightforward business enterprises, seeking fields of legitimate exploitation. The deliberate attempt of the tobacco trust to stand from under its obligations has made businessmen in England distrustful of American integrity. It will take English dealers a long time to recover from this blow.

"We are sure of getting our money from the trust, as it is all in this country; and they cannot get out of paying. Naturally, our association is elated at the prospect of getting nearly $11,000,000 out of the trust.

"Our victory will not necessarily reduce the price of tobacco—at least not just at present, though something in this direction may result later on. We have broken the strength of the trust in England. The action of this American combine has hurt American business enterprises very seriously in this country."

THE COMMON CLAY PIPE.

Whilst there are many stores in the big cities that hardly ever have a call for the common clay pipe, in the smaller towns and in the agricultural sections there are vast quantities of them sold annually, and dealers in such localities might find it worth while to occasionally put them in their show windows.

JAPAN TEA ADVANCEMENT.

MR. SHAW T. NISHIMURA. the well known Canadian representative of the Central Japan Tea Traders' Association, who has lately returned from a seven months' trip to his native country, was pleased to grant The Grocer an interview on subjects relating to Japan tea affairs.

"I noticed a great improvement in the tea factories of Japan since my previous visit. There are a great many more and all well equipped factories in the interior of the Shizuka district, where 60 per cent. of Japan tea is planted. These factories are using up-to-date machinery for refining purposes, as well as receiving, sifting and grading the teas. Five or six years ago all this work was done by hand. Some of these interior factories are shipping as much as the foreign shippers in Yokohama and Kobe. From what I saw and learned, the tendency of the Japan tea business is gradually towards the handling of the tea by the native shippers, and no doubt a good success will be made if the planters will endeavor to learn what kinds of teas are suitable for the different consuming countries. Up to within a few years ago all the native shippers were rather inexperienced in business matters and did not seem to be able to exactly catch the idea of what was wanted by importers on this side.

"Most of my time was occupied during my stay in Japan, in visiting the different tea plantations and instructing large factories to prepare samples for me, until I was satisfied myself. I am pleased to say that I now have more suitable teas for this market than have been procurable during the last four years. It is gratifying to know that my work was of great advantage to the shipper, as well as to myself, as the sale of Japan teas during my absence was larger than during previous seasons and at the same time more satisfactory to buyers here. My intention is to make these native shippers in the interior, all well acquainted with Canadian trade requirements.

"The native growers by adopting the plan of picking the leaves daily are able to retain the original flavor of the leaf, while shippers in the large cities, such as Yokohama and Kobe, are compelled to wait until such raw leaf is packed in loose bags and shipped to their factory, which always takes several days from the country points. It is decidedly an advantage to get the tea cured right on the plantation and when the native shippers have accomplished the proper way of curing the tea to perfection these interior prepared teas will have a great advantage and be better teas all round than city factory bulked teas.

"The price of Japan teas this year has been gradually advancing to the end of the season. The crop was 25 per cent. shorter than last year, owing to the late and long Winter, which made the new season open later than usual for first crop teas; and during the second crop for nearly three months there was an extraordinary fall of rain, thus spoiling the style of the leaf and good quality, with also less crop. The third crop was also a failure, the whole aggregating a short crop of from ten to twelve million pounds this year. The shipment to Canada is, therefore, much shorter than last year, which will naturally cause a much higher market than at present, and undoubtedly higher prices later on. When I left Japan in September the market was practically closed."

Asked as to the general development of trade in Japan, Mr. Nishimura said: "I cannot say that since my last trip four years ago I could point to any specific improvement, excepting the almost general use of electricity in the larger cities and consequent change from horse cars to electric cars, also an improvement in the style of building architecture, which is of a western character, but throughout the whole Empire an intellectual awakening is noted. Since the conclusion of the war with Russia all commercial and industrial enterprises have started to wake up, as times during the war were too unpropitious for any ventures. Japan was on the point of awakening to full development some five years ago, after the panic resulting from the previous war with China, when this war with Russia was undertaken, and now that the last great war is settled everything will go forward with a swing of progress. No doubt there was a feeling of dissatisfaction in the Empire that the war indemnity demanded of Japan was waived by the peace plenipotentaries, and numerous serious disturbances occurred expressing disapproval of the public in this matter, but undoubtedly in the end the nation will benefit as the people will be more frugal in their living and more energetic and shrewder in business enterprises, until they get all the national debt paid and bring Japan to a standing where it should be, that is, one of the first-class powers.

"There is a heavy burden on the people of Japan as a result of the very expensive eighteen months' war with Russia, but I feel confident that we will emerge from the troubles and burdens imposed upon the people within a few years."

GOOD ADVERTISING

A department devoted to the improvement of Retail Advertising. The editor of this department will be pleased to answer questions on advertising and review any advertisements submitted to him.

CRITICISM OF A. A. McKAY'S NEWSPAPER AD.

THE specimen advertisement reproduced this week is decidedly in contrast to any of Rowat's advertisements reproduced in this department a few weeks ago. Mr. Martin Garnon, who prepared the advertisement herewith given, and sent a copy of it in for review, says it appeared in their local paper. They run some such advertisement each week.

* * *

McKay's advertisement is successful from the price standpoint, except in one or two instances. The corn item would undoubtedly have been more valuable if "3 for 25c" had been displayed prominently instead of "per can 9c." The arrangement of salt and beans, which on the basis of consistency could have a similar argument lodged against them, are satisfactory because a little salt "goes a long way"; also a few beans.

* * *

A general glance over the advertisement affords a few loopholes for what, in the hands of some critics, might be more than semi-caustic comment. The word "they" could fittingly have found a place in one of the opening sentences. A humorist could make funny deductions from the creamery butter item. Cooking eggs, as a rule, are not guaranteed. The compositor, or somebody else, evidently confused raisins with laces. The statements about sugar are not clearly worded.

* * *

The advertisement covers a lot of ground, but therein lies its chief weakness. It is a question whether many people would wade through so much detail. It strikes me it would have been far better to have run separate announcements—in the same amount of space—one on Friday and Saturday price features, the other on Christmas fruits.

* * *

This change would have minimized the solid appearance of the advertisement and have made easier the driving home of the impression, "Here are the right goods at the right prices. Come out and buy them!"

* * *

As the arrangement is at present, nothing, outside of prices, is particularly prominent. Like the chain, an advertisement is only as strong as its weakest part. Prices in "black face," try as they might, cannot give life to cramped details.

* * *

But even on the present basis the arrangement could have been improved. Christmas fruits could have been set in display type and Florida oranges, Force, sugar, etc., in smaller type. The cross rules could have been omitted and the columnar rules run through, which would have given an unbroken connection to the whole, while permitting subsidiary divisions.

* * *

It is unfortunate that the lay-out of the advertisement is not superior, for Mr. Garnon ostensibly has a clear grasp of grocery details and writes thereof with snap and vim. True, in the heading he evinces a tendency towards the sensational rather than the practical. However, he soon forsakes that tendency and gets down to live facts.

* * *

As timely information for regular buyers at McKay's store this advertisement might account favorably for itself, but, then, that is not the entire purpose of advertising. The chances are regular customers would visit the store on Fridays or Saturdays from past experience, but prospective customers!—how would this advertisement appeal to them?

* * *

To comment on the advertisement's relationship to the prospective customer is to border on phases of publicity always worth remembering—in advertising you have not got the floor to yourself. All eyes are not on your announcement. You can only hope to get a share of attention, and it takes method as well as persistency to get even that share.

* * *

I think that at this time of the year the "Christmas idea" is worth pitching upon in full force. I would subordinate price features, special sales and other counter attractions. The stores that get the biggest returns around Christmas are the stores that give "season" the biggest attention.

* * *

There are times when a reputation for retailing at low prices is not a valuable stock in trade. As long as a certain class of people hold to him the "price" man is safe, but naturally he has to sell more goods than his rival to lop off the extra losses due to the reductions; and can he always be sure he will sell more goods? Prices are assuredly not a weighty factor at Christmas time. The quality of the groceries, the way they are displayed, the treatment extended to the public—these count more.

For Christmas week I think a grocer might run a few advertisements with permanent headings something like "Extra good news for Christmas," "Christmas opportunities at the Best Store," etc. The details, of course, should be changed each time.

In apportioning space I would give preference in both cases to the columnar advertisement, rather than to the "broad" advertisement. The columnar is the prevailing style in both magazines and newspapers and can be made quite effective. For instance, a 7-inch single column advertisement would be far more striking than a 2-inch three-column advertisement, while the cost would be about the same.

The 88th Annual Meeting of the Bank of Montreal

THE eighty-eighth annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal was held in the board room of the institution at noon yesterday.

There were present: Hon. Sir George Drummond, K.C.M.G., vice-president; Hon. Robert Mackay, Messrs, R. B. Angus, E. B. Greenshields, A. T. Paterson, R. G. Reid, Hon. J. K. Ward, Dr. W. Gardner, Messrs. G. F. C. Smith, F. S. Lyman, K.C.; Angus Hooper, George Durnford, Richard White, A. Piddington, Henry Dobell, John Turnbull, B. A. Boas, C. R. Black, Henry Morton G. A. Greene, L. Sutherland W. H. Evans, M. S. Foley, W. Stanway, M. O'Shaughnessy, W. D. Gillean, D. Morrice, A. G. Watson, G. H. Matthews, P. F. McCaffrey, J. Scott, W. B. Blackader, James Tasker, Percy R. Gault, and John Morrison.

On the motion of Mr. R. G. Reid, Sir George Drummond, Vice-President, was unanimously voted to the chair, in the absence of the President, the Right Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal.

On the motion of Mr. A. Piddington, seconded by Mr. Henry Dobell, it was voted: "That the following gentlemen be appointed to act as scrutineers:—Messrs. F. S. Lyman, K.C., and G. F. C. Smith; and that Mr. James Aird be secretary of the meeting."

The General Manager.

The General Manager then spoke as follows:

I purpose confining my few remarks to the balance sheet submitted to you, and to one or two matters more closely connected with banking, leaving the general condition of business in the country to be dealt with by the Vice-President.

The principal feaures in the statement are the increase, since last year, of $2,000,000 in our circulation, an indication of the universal activity in business, and of $7,750,000 in deposits not bearing interest; but of this latter a considerable proportion was a temporary deposit made at the end of our fiscal year, and since withdrawn. Our deposits bearing interest show a satisfactory increase of $16,600,000. Our immediately available assets stand at $68,000,000, a greater amount than, as a rule, we consider necessary, but in view of the rather uncertain future of Continental finance, owing to the state of affairs in Russia and the somewhat boom condition in this continent, it is well to be strong, and in any case we are in a good position to take advantage of any desirable business offering. Our loans and discounts have increased $7,000,000, accounted for partly by the increased demands of the commercial community, and partly by the absorption of the People's Bank of Halifax.

The low rate ruling for call money in England and the United States during our fiscal year affected our profits adversely, as we are obliged to carry a large portion of our reserve in those markets; but of late there has been a decided improvement, which may be maintained during the winter.

Owing to the magnificent crop and the general activity in business, an unusual strain was placed on the circulation, but at the highest point attained by all the banks, about $79,000,000, there was still a margin of $4,500,000; and with the addition of new banking capital and the increase of branches, it seems as if, for some time to come, the circulation provided will be sufficient for the needs of the country. The advantage of the Canadian system has been amply demonstrated during the late pressure for money. Notwithstanding the heavy demands to move the largest crop in our history, the inferest rate to our people has remained normal. We have only to glance at the condition of affairs across

The Directors' Report.

The report of the Directors to the Shareholders at their eighty-eighth annual general meeting was then read by Mr. E. S. Clouston, General Manager, as follows:—

The Directors have pleasure in presenting the Report, shewing the result of the Bank's Business for the year ended 31st October, 1905:

Balance of Profit and Loss Account, 31st October, 1904		$ 583,196 01
Profits for the year ended 31st October, 1905, after deducting charges of management, and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts		1,638,659 40
		$2,221,855 41
Dividend, 5 per cent., paid 1st June, 1905	$700,000 00
Dividend, 5 per cent., payable 1st December, 1905	720,000 00
		1,420,000 00
Balance of Profit and Loss carried forward		$ 801,855 41

Since the last annual meeting of the Shareholders, the Bank has acquired the Assets and Business of the People's Bank of Halifax, with twenty-six branches. The Bank has also established since the last Annual Meeting, Sub-Agencies at the following points, viz.: Altona, Oakville and Logan Avenue (Winnipeg), in Manitoba; Enderby and Nicola in British Columbia, and Hochelaga (Montreal), and is about to establish Sub-Agencies at Fort Rouge (Winnipeg), and Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

The headquarters building on St. James Street is now completed and in occupation.

In response to the desire expressed by a number of our Shareholders, the Directors propose that the dividend should be paid quarterly, instead of half-yearly, viz.: on the first day of March, June, September and December.

All the Offices of the Bank, including the Head Office, have been inspected during the past year.

STRATHCONA AND MOUNT ROYAL,
President.

E. S. CLOUSTON,
General Manager.

the line to see what fluctuations in rates for money the public are subjected to under the system there in vogue.

In March last, the Bank of Yarmouth failed under circumstances reflecting much discredit upon those responsible for its condition, and, for the first time since the incorporation of the Canadian Bankers' Association, that body had to exercise the power conferred upon it by Parliament in 1900, of assuming supervision of the affairs of a suspended bank.

A liquidator chosen by the Canadian Bankers' Association was subsequently appointed by the court sole liquidator. The results have been highly satisfactory, particularly when viewed in the light of what has followed former failures of Canadian banks. The winding up of the defunct bank has been conducted with remarkable expedition and economy, and the rights and interests of the creditors so well looked after that the liquidator has been able, in nine months, to pay all of their claims, with interest added thereto. That no loss to the depositors and other creditors of the Bank of Yarmouth has resulted from this failure is, it must be admitted, largely due to the prompt and creditable recognition by its unfortunate shareholders of their liability for the utter insufficiency of assets to pay the debts of the bank in question.

An interesting event in financial circles was the offering here of a portion of the Japanese loan, the first time in the history of Canada of any foreign loan being issued locally, and, considering the short time at our disposal, the success was surprising.

In conclusion, I may say that the one word written large in the records of Canada this year is "Prosperity." Railways, manufacturing industries, merchants, farmers, all are prosperous. Immigration grows steadily; labor has full employment, and is well remunerated. Probably never before have we had a twelvemonth of such universal prosperity, and it is during a year like this that everyone should set his house in order. Collections should be pressed, and manufacturers should husband their resources and strengthen themselves in every way; for they are to a great extent prosperous by the grace of their neighbors, and when adversity comes to other countries, the American bargain counter will be opened in Canada, and our manufacturers and their employees will surely suffer.

Vice-President's Remarks.

The Vice-President, in moving the adoption of the Directors' report, said:

The position of the Bank is fully exhibited in the statements laid before you and the remarks of the General Manager. Following, however, the practice of many years' standing, I venture to offer a few observations.

The remark has been made before, and is now repeated, that the profits of banking, and consequently the cost to the public of the use of money, are steadily decreasing. This is due mainly, I think, to the accumulation of wealth in the country, the consequent increase of the number of banking companies and of their capital, and the resulting keenness of competition. Proof of this is to be found in the following figures:

1st. As to the accumulation of wealth. The deposits in all the chartered banks in the Dominion, in 1870, were 49 millions of dollars, in round figures, omitting fractions of a million; in 1880, were 85 millions; in 1890, were 136 millions; in 1900, were 305 millions; in 1904, were 470 millions.

The Dominion Government Savings Bank held in the same year (1904), nearly 62 millions, making bank and Government deposits 532 millions.

2nd. As regards banking facilities. Five new banks have gone into operation since 1900, with an authorized capital of $9,000,000. Five have been absorbed into other banks, but their capital presumably remains under other control, and one bank, referred to by the General Manager, with a capital of $300,000, has failed. It may also be mentioned that charters have been obtained from Parliament during the last three years of eleven new banks, with a capital of $19,000,000.

As regards our own Bank, it has been the care of the Directors to advance with the times, and I give you a few figures to show the progress which it has made.

In 1863 the capital was $6,000,000; assets, $15,252,000.

In 1873 the capital was $11,296,831; assets, $34,252,000.

In 1879 the capital was $11,999,000; assets, $36,221,000.

In 1887 the capital was $12,000,000; assets, $42,000,000.

In 1890 the capital was $12,000,000; assets, $46,166,000.

In 1905 the capital was $14,400,000; assets, $158,470,000.

Our branches, which in 1863 numbered 29, are now 100.

General Trade of the Country.

A review in detail of the various trade and manufacturing industries may be summed up in the general report of almost unbroken prosperity. Probably never in Canada and the United States have crops of all kinds been better in quantity and quality.

In regard to one of our staple industries, the lumber trade, I am tempted to express the conviction that we are using up our resources in a most reckless fashion, certain to end disastrously unless we take prompt steps to treat it as other crops, and replant on an adequate scale.

The increase of manufactories, thereby creating a home market for produce of every kind, is most marked. In this city and neighborhood a great number of large factories are springing up, and whatever may be said of our tariff, it unquestionably has had the effect of inducing the manufacture in this country of goods previously imported, with all the advantages of increased employment and circulation of money in this country. A number of these manufactories are branches, or offshoots, of industrial organizations in the United States.

The value of the home market is not sufficiently appreciated, if the statistics published by a recent writer be true, that "Western Canada produced two and a half times as much wheat, twenty-five times as much oats, and thirty-four times as much barley as Canada exported."

The failures in Canada are considerably smaller this year than last, being. 1904, $11,189,223; 1905, $9,511,472.

The feature of the year, however, is the splendid crop which has just been harvested in the Northwest Provinces and in Ontario. As regards the former, the most sanguine anticipations have been realized, and it seems beyond doubt that the following estimates of this season's crop in Manitoba and the Northwestern Provinces are conservative:

Wheat, 90 million bushels, worth on the spot, say, 65c.; oats, 65 million bushels, worth on the spot, say, 25c.; barley, 13 million bushels, worth on the spot, say, 30c.; flax, 1-2 million bushels, worth on the spot, say, 80c.; rye, 1-3 million bushels, worth on the spot, say, 35c. In all, 169 million bushels of grain.

Of course, a proportion of these crops will be consumed by the farmer, as no doubt will all the root crops—of which potatoes alone are estimated at 8,000,000 bushels—as well as hay, but of these I take no account.

At the prices set down, it is not difficult to reach an approximate sum of 75 millions of dollars, or 15 million pounds sterling, to be distributed among a comparatively small population, and won from a soil which was considered barren, and surrendered to the wilderness only a few years ago.

In addition to the foregoing, and not included in the above estimate, 70,000 cattle were disposed of during the year in the Northwest.

Incidentally, I may mention that I am informed by expert millers, that this year's wheat is so good in quality that 7 per cent. less of it is required to produce a given quantity of flour than an average.

It is asserted that the area so far brought under cultivation does not, from the most accurate information obtainable, much exceed 5 per cent., and certainly it is well under 10 per cent. of the area available, and waiting for occupants.

In this connection I may quote here a sentence from an able and well qualified Government officer, who has just completed a wide survey of the Territories. He says:

"The immense wealth so long stored in the virgin soil of the great western country will be gradually developed, and the fact that Canada is destined to rapidly become one of the greatest food producing nations in the world will soon become apparent to all, in the volume of her exports."

The great extensions of the railway systems operating in this country must not be passed over. The Canadian Pacific company is spending vast sums in improvements and extensions. The Canadian Northern is pushing westward, while the Grand Trunk Pacific is preparing for an extension to the Pacific, and the Government of Canada has the necessary powers to duplicate the railway connection between Quebec and Winnipeg, and is now surveying the line.

With general political events we have nothing to do, except as regards their effect on our financial institutions. A note of thankfulness was heard when an end was put to the mighty war in the Farther East.

It was specially grateful to this community when a friendly understanding was reached between England and France, and we trust that the portentious cloud overhanging Russia may be dissipated by wise and liberal measures. Meanwhile, it remains an ominous factor, exciting the liveliest apprehensions among Russia's creditors, and the deepest interest in the whole civilized world.

I can only, in conclusion, echo the General Manager's advice, that the abounding prosperity of our country should be prudently accepted and used.

I move: "That the report of the Directors, now read, be adopted and printed for distribution among the Shareholders."

The motion was seconded by Mr. A. T. Paterson, and after some appreciative remarks by Mr. John Morrison, it was unanimously adopted.

Amendments to By-laws.

The Vice-President then remarked: I have now to ask you to consider amendments to the by-laws, which the Directors deem advisable. The first is an amendment to by-law No. 3, the alteration being to make the number of directors ten instead of nine, as at present. Perhaps you are aware that up to the last session of Parliament, the General Banking Act only permitted the election of nine directors to any bank. They were not to be fewer than a certain number, and not more than nine. That has now been changed, and practically the number of directors is unlimited, if the shareholders so desire. The proposal of the Directors now going out, is that the number be made ten, instead of nine: and the reason will appear a little later in the proceedings. I would, therefore, move:

"That, whereas it is advisable to increase the present board of nine directors to ten, by-law No. 3 is hereby amended by striking out the word 'nine,' as appearing in said by-law, and inserting in its place the word 'ten.'"

This was seconded by Mr. A. T. Paterson, and was unanimously agreed to.

The Vice-President—The next alteration is:

"Whereas it is advisable that power be given to the Shareholders to elect an honorary president, by-law No. 6 is hereby amended by adding to it the following words:

"'The Directors may also, at their said first meeting, elect by ballot one of their number to be honorary president.'"

It is due to you to say that this has special reference to Lord Strathcona. He has occupied the post of President for eighteen years, and last year he expressed a desire to be relieved of it. The Directors were unwilling to have his name severed from the Bank which he had so long and usefully served. The creation of an honorary president was authorized in the amendment of the Banking Act, and under that authority this can now be done. I will, therefore, move that the resolution which I have just read be adopted.

This was seconded by Mr. A. T. Paterson, and was concurred in unanimously.

The Vice-President—It seems proper at this stage that the long and valued services of Lord Strathcona, in connection with this Bank, should be acknowledged by the Shareholders, and I have the honor and pleasure of moving, seconded by Mr. E. B. Greenshields, that a cordial recognition, in suitable terms, be sent to Lord Strathcona expressing the appreciation in which the Shareholders—and they include the Directors—hold him and his services to the Bank.

Mr. E. B. Greenshields—I have very much pleasure in seconding the resolution just proposed. We all feel that the Bank has been honored in the past by having Lord Strathcona as its president. When he first went to London as Canadian Commissioner, he hoped to be frequently on this side of the Atlantic and at our meetings; and it was with much regret that he found himself unable to be here as often as he had expected. Not only should his great services to the Bank be noted; but we also wish to put on record as shareholders of the Bank and as citizens of Montreal and the Dominion of Canada, our very high opinion of him as a man. We feel proud of having had him as president of this Bank, and it is with very great regret that we hear that the connection is to be to a certain extent severed. But we are all pleased that he is to remain with us as the Honorary President of the Bank, and that his name will still be associated with this institution. I know I express the feelings of every shareholder when I say that we all have the greatest admiration for him in his public capacity as High Commissioner for Canada, and appreciate all he has done for this country, but besides this we would like to assure him that we have a very warm feeling of personal regard for himself.

Mr. John Morrison—I give my cordial assent to the motion, for a more deserving gentleman it would be hard to find

The motion was unanimously and cordially adopted.

Thanks Are Tendered.

Mr. B. A. Boas then moved:

"That the thanks of the meeting be presented to the President, Vice-President and Directors for their attention to the interests of the Bank."

This was seconded by Mr. W. Stanway, and was carried unanimously.

Mr. E. B. Greenshields moved:

"That the thanks of this meeting be given to the General Manager, the Assistant General Manager, the Inspector, the Managers and other Officers of the Bank, for their services during the past year."

In making the motion Mr. Greenshields remarked:

I wish to say that the opinion of the Directors is unanimous that in the General Manager, the Assistant General Manager, the Inspectors, the Managers and the other officers of the Bank we have a thoroughly efficient and reliable staff to carry on the work. I had the pleasure last year of meeting a number of the Managers, from Winnipeg to Victoria, and I also know many of those nearer Montreal. I am very much pleased always to see among them a fine "esprit de corps," that inspires the feeling that the Bank of Montreal is the institution to work for, and that ability and conscientious work will always be recognized and rewarded.

Hon. Robert Mackay seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

Mr. C. R. Black suggested that it would be in the interests of the Shareholders generally if the management would consider the mailing of cheques for dividends, as other banks did, now that the dividend was to be quarterly, instead of the Shareholders having to go to the Bank.

The General Manager—I will take that into consideration, and see if it cannot be carried out. I also beg to thank the Shareholders on behalf of the staff for the very kind way they have spoken of us.

The Vice-President—The suggestion of Mr. Black will be referred to the Board.

Mr. John Turnbull moved, seconded by Mr. George Durnford:

"That the ballot now open for the election of Directors, be kept open until 2 o'clock, unless 15 minutes elapse without a vote being cast, when it shall be closed, and until that time, and for that purpose only, this meeting be continued."

This was unanimously concurred in, and a very cordial vote of thanks was accorded the Chairman, who acknowledged the same.

The Directors.

The ballot resulted in the election of the following Directors:

R. B. ANGUS.
E. S. CLOUSTON.
HON. SIR GEORGE DRUMMOND, K.C.M.G.
EDWARD B. GREENSHIELDS.
SIR WILLIAM MACDONALD.
HON. ROBERT MACKAY.
ALEXANDER T. PATERSON.
ROBERT G. REID.
JAMES ROSS.
RIGHT HON. LORD STRATHCONA AND MOUNT ROYAL, G.C.M.G.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held the following day, Sir George A. Drummond was elected President, succeeding Lord Strathcona, and Mr. E. S. Clouston was elected Vice-President and General Manager.

WARNING!

BM&Co. TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

The Triumph!

The success of . . .

GOLDEN RUSSET BRAND

is the best testimony that an article of sterling worth is appreciated.

It is something new to have a vinegar without adulteration of any kind—without noxious acids, flavorings, colorings, etc.

It is something new to have a vinegar made solely from the juice of the choicest apples.

It is something new to have a vinegar manufactured in a scrupulously clean factory and by exact methods.

Such is the story of Golden Russet Vinegar.

EXPERIENCED ADVERTISEMENT WRITERS who are open for a situation are requested to register their names with the MacLean Publishing Co., at any of their offices. Inquiries are occasionally made by manufacturers and wholesale houses who contemplate establishing their own advertising department.

"THE FAIRBANK PLAN"

LOOK INTO IT

and see just what "The Fairbank Plan" is. While we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year advertising the six great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

CEYLON Tea Talks

No. 4

The dietetic value of Ceylon Tea as a beverage is attributable to the well-balanced proportions of its constituent parts.

The alkaloid "Theine" is a most beneficent agent, its presence therefore in proper proportion in Ceylon Tea is an additional important feature.

"Theine" acts directly upon the nervous system, producing an agreeable stimulating action, removing fatigue and drowsiness.

It makes the mind active, clear-sighted, and resistant of depression.

Ceylon Tea (Green and Black) contains a large percentage of that most important constituent, "Theine." As a stimulant, therefore, Ceylon Tea stands Head and Shoulders above all others.

WANTED: A CHRISTMAS GROCER

A plea for the good old days, before the era of competition, when the jolly grocer was a practical philanthropist, and could afford it.
By Katharine Burrill, in Chambers's Journal.

I AM looking for a Christmas grocer—seeking him sadly and well-nigh hopelessly, for I greatly fear the genuine old-fashioned Christmas grocer has ceased to exist. Of course there are still grocers, but they are shorn of their glory. Most of them have turned themselves into brand-new stores; others—more unfortunate—have been ruined by the plate-glass-windowed palaces whose marble halls and popular prices attract the attention and custom of a fickle populace. Stores, be they ever so marble and gorgeous, can never be a Christmas grocer. To begin with, the popular prices are cut far too fine to allow of any conspicuous generosity at Christmas time or any other time; also, the assistants and shopwalkers are merely owned by the management—they do not own the store.

The Opulent Grocer.

Now, the real old-fashioned grocer owned everything; his shop, his tea chests (so fascinatingly Chinese), his biscuit tins, his wife (who kept the books), and his sons who assisted him in the business. Did he choose to present you with a crimson-plush castle filled with French plums, who dared say him nay? Did he give the small person a heaped-up packet of acid drops, and royally return the proffered penny, whose loss was it but his own? When he pressed a box of gaily colored Christmas candles into the expectant hand of the customer's offspring, were they not his own candles to sell or burn or give away as he felt disposed? Generous all the year round with biscuits, with sweets, with crystallized ginger, at Christmas the old-fashioned grocer became positively prodigal, showering his gifts upon his customers with a lavish hand.

How Did He Live?

Looking back, we wonder how he ever made a living at all! The absolute magnificence of his Christmas presents; the sapphire velvet boxes embossed and gilded, lined with white satin and the very best prunes; the flowered-brocade pagodas tightly packed with fancy biscuits, hard but sugary; the delicious French plums, so round and beautiful, with paper flowers pinned in their button-holes! Surely our grocer was no mere ordinary merchant, but must have been a disguised millionaire indulging his childhood's dream of "keeping shop"!

Should Be Falstaffian.

I cannot imagine a thin and generous grocer. All my princely givers were stout. A Cassius-like grocer would be as incongruous as a portly and cheerful chemist! Stage tradition clings round a melancholy and starving apothecary—we know Smike played the part to perfection—and in our hearts we consider a lean and hatchet-faced individual the proper person to dispense drugs and potions. Of course you could have a plump and rosy-faced apothecary concocting beverages for Romeo and Juliet, but it would be an uncalled-for innovation. Equally, of course, you might have Eugene Aram slicing bacon and wielding a cheese-scoop; but he would not be satisfactory. Most certainly he would not give us Christmas boxes. No, I prefer a Falstaffian grocer—"he who drives fat oxen should himself be fat"—and I like to remember my favorite grocer as one of the plumpest, jolliest, butteriest looking men I ever saw. His very voice suggested "the best butter" (with no suspicion of intruding crumbs), so soft was it, so insinuating, so amiable.

Pink Biscuit Wonders.

He kept a particular fat whisper for small people that was positively alluring. The way in which he gently murmured, "And what will little Missie have to-day?" can never be forgotten. Needless to remark, "little Missie" (who had been anxiously awaiting this auspicious moment) became totally incapable of making any choice. Who could choose amidst such an array of bewildering attractions? Then that emperor among grocers would put an end to the agonies of indecision by producing a wonderful composite package containing a pink biscuit, sugar candy, peppermints, a stick of cinnamon, and, to crown all, a French plum of extreme magnitude. Ah me! there are no such grocers nowadays; and even if there were, we, alas! are no longer "little Missies." I doubt our successfully negotiating a pink biscuit; and can any one over the age of ten eat a stick of cinnamon high and dry? Liquorice—another joy of early youth—seems to be a singularly offensive compound, and cocoa-nut tablet has lost its savour.

Marvellous Windows.

The windows were a marvel; banks of raisins and currants, arches of orange and lemon peel, graceful festoons of green and red candles—wonderful candles that were all sizes from very large, unwieldy grandpapas down to tiny babies only fit for a baby's Christmas tree! Then there were packets of crackers in gaudy gelatine papers all the colors of the rainbow, and a great many colors that rainbows have to go without. They were not very good crackers, and, considering their inferior quality, most unconscionably dear; but we knew no others, and were therefore quite delighted with them. The gelatine covers had peculiar attractions that lasted for many weeks, long after the mottoes had been spelt out—and lost—and the pink and white sugared almonds eaten. Could we not turn the whole world into the lugubrious key of blue or incarnadine creation in a wave of crimson by the simple expedient of gazing through pieces of crackling paper?

A Sad Mistake.

It is not mere greed that makes me long so ardently for the return of the Christmas grocer. The joys of French plums have waned and faded, and I do not pine for peppermint balls; but there was something very heartening and cheering about a shopkeeper who gave you presents. Once, be it told—about ten years ago—I thought I had discovered a real Christmas groceryman; but it was a sad mistake. It was the day before Christmas, and with a large consignment of dull groceries arrived a superb box of sweets and chocolates. Visions of my childhood returned; once more I saw brocade pagodas. Full of grateful pleasantness, we cheerfully ate the delicious cates. Alas! the day after Christmas Day there came an anxious and apologetic note regretting that a box of sweetmeats had been sent by mistake; 'twas some one else's order, and "owing to the pressure at this season," etc., etc., etc. It was indeed a blow, especially as the very excellent sweets were no more, and, being eaten, had to be paid for.

Fatal Competition.

I suppose, with the increased competition, it is quite impossible for the grocer of to-day to turn himself into an old-fashioned Christmas, one surrounded by a halo of holly and mistletoe and an atmosphere of Charles Dickens. What a pity there is so much competition; it's so depressing. Competitive examinations are bad enough—so misleading; but competitive grocers! The mean man will, of course, tell you that in the good old days you paid for your palace of prunes—and handsomely, too—in your weekly bills; but I prefer to think the old-fashioned grocer was really kind and generous—as Mrs. Gamp would say, "friendly dispoged"—and in the exuberance of his friendly disposition wished us the compliments of the season in plush and plums.

Little Things Liked It.

Lovers of Cranford—and who cares to stand outside the circle of those who love Captain Brown and all the other dear Cranfordians?—will remember that Miss Matty's system of shopkeeping was somewhat too generous. Did she not add one large almond-comfit to every four purchased by the small child, totally forgetting that each almond weighed a quarter of an ounce? Dear Miss Matty! her answer when remonstrated with was: "The little things like it so much." Even when she was persuaded to stop giving the extra comfit because almond-comfits were not strictly wholesome, she still lost on their sale; for she felt bound to present each small person with a few ginger lozenges or peppermints to act as a corrective to the indigestibility of the almonds! I should not like to think that those kind grocers—of shall we say twenty-five years ago—lost heavily when they presented us with sweets and decorated biscuits. I really hope the teas and the rices and the butters and the cheeses made up for the lavish giving; but I do not believe they deliberately calculated the price of the gifts and lumped it on to the bills.

SPLENDID EXHIBITS AT WINTER FAIR

LIKE the fat boy Joe in Pickwick Papers, there are few of us of whom it may not be said, "He likes to eat." Whether or not this fact is sufficient explanation of the increasing interest in the Winter Fair and Fat Stock Show at Guelph may be left to the philosophically inclined to wrangle over; in any event the visitor to the Royal City in mid-December will see such an array of choice Christmas beef, bacon, mutton, poultry on the hoof, or on the hooks, as will not be met with, we dare aver, elsewhere on the American continent.

The fair is more than a fair. It is a farmers' university. Hither flock year after year the intelligent, the ambitious, the enthusiastic stockmen of Ontario to learn and instruct; to compete with their rivals from the other end of the province, mayhap, in the production of the finest specimen of beef cattle, mutton sheep or bacon hog. Its educative value can not be over-estimated.

The Great Canadian Turkey at His Best.—Fat Stock Show at Guelph.

Improvement Astounding.

The improvement in the live stock of Ontario in the last twenty years, as Premier Whitney remarked, has been astounding, and in this improvement the Guelph fair has been a potent factor.

The fair has outgrown its commodious stone quarters, its lecture rooms, its stock space, its ticket offices, and its hotel accommodation.

Over 25,000 people visited the fair this year. They were earnest, prosperous, intelligent people. They were the cream of Ontario's yeomanry. They had solved the problem of farm drudgery by making farming a science. They were people whose sons and whose daughters are students at the agricultural college a few furlongs out of the city of Guelph. They were people who read and understood the reports of the Agricultural Department and who profited thereby. They were combining pleasure with business, delighting in criticizing the handsome specimens in the various classes as an artist delights in a stroll through the salon or gallery.

Intelligent Farming Pays.

Does farming pay? The answer returned by the Guelph fair is unmistakable. Intelligent farming does pay. There were few lines of care on the ruddy and bronzed faces of the men. The black astrachan fur coats and healthy plumpness of their wives were not indicative of want; nor did the open countenances and healthy, sturdy appearance of the younger generation, who were there in goodly numbers, leave any other impression.

Among the Cattle.

The stock exhibited this year was everything that could be desired. In the Christmas beef class Jas. Rennie & Son won out with a magnificent pair, a milk white steer and a wine red heifer. They were in the "pink" of condition, to pursue this color scheme, and were enough to make our American competitors turn green with envy.

Premier Whitney Admires.

The Hon. the Premier, Mr. J. P. Whitney, along with Mr. Speaker St. John and party, paid Mr. Rennie the honor of inspecting his prize winners. The premier wore a natty brown derby, tan dog-skin gloves, and as he stood with his legs wide apart and hands clasped behind his back critically admiring the handsome cattle, as becomes the premier of the first agricultural province of the Dominion he reminded one not a little of that famous picture entitled "Napoleon at Ratisbon." It was an impressive sight, and when Mr. Whitney gently put forward a pair of dog-skin gloved fingers and gingerly tapped the white steer on the rump the suppressed enthusiasm which pervaded the crowded amphitheatre was intense. In all the premier performed his duties, as the French say, "comme il faut."

The Speaker Silent.

Mr. Speaker St. John was strangely silent. Being a Toronto lawyer he was not expected to be proficient in agricultural science. Indeed, if Mr. St. John has a specialty it is pigs, and one can not maintain the dignity becoming the Speaker of an august legislative assembly while poking a dog-skin gloved finger in the fat rump of a lively Tamworth bacon hog. It may have been, moreover, that ruminating on the disturbance caused in days that are past by one solitary porker down by the Humber, may have discouraged Mr. St. John from poking up anything so formidable as Mr. Rennie's prize white steer. Be that as it may, Mr. St. John did not poke the white steer nor yet the red heifer, while Mr. Whitney did and thereby demonstrated to the great farming community that he was one of them.

The Bacon Problem.

The entries in the bacon hog class were of particular interest in view of the controversy pending over the admission of American hogs in bond for packing and exporting purposes. Mr. J. E. Brethour's Yorkshires, long "bacony" fellows, as usual took the first prize, the Yorkshires, closely followed by the Tamworths, proving the best breed for the export trade. Keen interest was taken in the bacon contest, particularly in the block test. The prize winners are pictured herewith as they appeared after being judged.

In the lecture rooms great interest was taken in the discussion of the bacon question. The farmers complained that the packers by establishing a flat rate for hogs were discouraging the production of the best class of hogs. The man who raised a fat cheap Berkshire got as much as the man who raised the better but more costly Yorkshire or Tamworth. The packers reply that during the last five years under the flat rate the quality of the bacon hog has been higher than before; that the improvement was the result of education. A uniform price throughout the year was asked for by the farmers, but the packers objected on the ground of the variation in the English market. From the unanimity of the farmers it would seem desirable if possible to make a decided difference in the price paid for first class and second class hogs.

The Bonding Privileges.

The bonding privilege was another point on which the farmers and packers joined issue. The packers expressed their desire to use Canadian hogs altogether if they could get them, but it was necessary to keep their factories going full blast in order to keep down the cost of production. The farmers feared if packers could get American hogs they would not pay the price for Canadian. In this case it would appear that under proper restrictions the packers should be allowed to get sufficient supplies even if they have to import American hogs.

Good Fat Mutton.

The sheep pens, which occupied the upper floor of one wing, were a fine sight. The exhibits in all the mutton breeds were well represented and were examples of the highest type of their respective breeds. The competition was keen in almost every case and the whole eloquent of the high standard to which the flocks of Ontario have been brought. To the gourmet who dearly loves his leg o' lamb or roast mutton, a stroll through this section was an inspiring one.

Champion Poultry.

If the classes in the cattle, hog and sheep departments were well filled, what shall be said of the poultry department? One had no sooner entered the building than he was challenged by the clarion throats of some hundreds of lusty roosters from the spick and span little toy bantam to the lordly Plymouth Rock nearly as large as a turkey. A surprising department was that devoted to pigeons. There were hundreds of them in all their varieties and a strong campaign was being waged toward persuading the farmers to go in for raising squabs, a most profitable occupation, it was claimed.

Of equal interest was the dressed poultry department. On your right on entering were banked the prize turkeys of the immense proportions indicated by the accompanying cut. Geese, ducks, chickens of equal plumpness, occupied the tables that lined the room. These fine birds, dressed in the most approved style, served the double purpose of allowing comparison as to the best breeds for market purposes and of showing the unskilled how fowl should be marketed to bring the best price.

A Show to be Proud of.

The show, it can not be stated too emphatically, is a handsome commentary on the agricultural interests of Canada and can be visited by no intelligent Canadian without sending him away filled with a militant pride in the broad acres of Canada and the fine, sturdy men who work them.

PORK PACKERS AND THEIR DIFFICULTIES

MR. JAMES LAING, of the Laing Packing Co., Limited, Montreal, being shown the article in last week's Grocer, "Shall the Packers Shut Down ?" said :

"The Grocer has placed the situation fairly well and I don't know that I can add anything materially valuable to same. The situation for the packing houses is certainly one that would warrant something being done to place the packing industry, particularly as applied to hog products, on a better basis.

"There are not enough desirable hogs produced in Canada to keep establishments of the capacity of ours and other large packing houses fully and properly going, and to my mind it would seem a wrong move on the part of the Government to withdraw the bonding privilege in respect to American hogs at present prevailing. Take an establishment like ours ; we employ in the neighborhood of 250 hands and our pay roll runs well up towards $150,000 a year. We cannot afford to lay off during the short supply season, and with our capacity of 5,000 hogs you can readily see how the scarcity of Canadian hogs would affect a plant of this capacity ; the plant must be kept going and it is only natural that failing Canadian hogs we should have preserved to us the privilege of using the American supplies."

"What remedy would you suggest to overcome this shortage of home product ?" was asked by The Grocer.

"It is difficult to lay down any specific and quick-acting remedy," replied Mr. Laing, "but the matter was lately laid before the Government by the Canadian Packers' Association, as you will have noticed by the papers. I think one excellent move to improve the conditions would be for the Federal Government, either directly or acting through the provincial legislatures, to place the question of the proper breeding feeding and raising of hogs before the farmers as was done in the cheese and butter industries, and look where the intelligent endeavors of the authorities have brought these two branches of farming to.

"The Province of Quebec unfortunately is very much behind Ontario. The farmers here do not seem to realize the value of this branch of their business. The average French-Canadian farmer raises just enough hogs to dispose of the natural fodder and waste that generally accumulates, and I am of the opinion that if it can be shown that the raising of the best grades of hogs will pay him he might be induced to develop this branch.

"To my mind, until we are able to secure a supply of hogs to keep Canadian packing houses fully running, it would be unwise to rescind the bonding privileges. No doubt you will find opinions varying on this point. We certainly prefer to use Canadian products whenever we can get them, and it is to our natural interest to encourage our own country's products and enhance their reputation."

Montreal Packing Co.

Mr. C. W. Bowman, manager of the Montreal Packing Co., Limited, interviewed, expressed himself of the opinion that the question had two sides upon which good arguments could be brought to bear.

"There are features in the packing industry which would seem to warrant the retention of the bonding privilege in order to maintain the running of the packing houses. Then on the other hand the use of American hogs by Canadian packers and the branding of the goods for the foreign market would tend to depreciate the value of Canadian bacon on the British market particularly. The remedy would seem to be to encourage the raising of sufficient hogs in Canada to supply the Canadian packing houses."

One matter touched upon by Mr. Bowman was the matter of irregularity of supplies of hogs by the farmers, and the consequent uncertainty of obtaining a fair average price right along. As it is, farmers find it cheaper to feed hogs during the Summer months, instead of going into the hog-raising business on rational lines and providing supplies for the packing houses. The large Summer supply comes on the market in the Fall with a rush all around, with a naturally bad effect on prices.

"The question of a remedy," said Mr. Bowman, "is one for the Government. It is their duty as well as to the interest of the farming community to place the hog industry on the same basis as the dairy and cheese branches. Only by actual demonstration to the farmers, particularly in this province, where the farmers do not seem to have properly grasped the possibilities of the business, is it possible to get the right results.

"If necessary supplies of proper breed of hogs should be supplied to farmers at such figures as will show them the profits and possibilities, and with proper instructions as to feeding, housing and attention, in a few years or a decade the industry will reach such dimensions as will still further enhance the value of Canadian packing house products abroad.

"Something, no doubt, will be done by the Government, as the complete facts and figures were laid before Hon. Sidney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, by the Canadian Packers' Association, and as the industry is one of the most valuable in Canada for the farmers and producers it is to be hoped that prompt and effective measures be instituted."

Views of the Winnipeg Packers.

Western packers were not much concerned by the rescinding of the bonding privilege on American hogs. Although they have long been handicapped by lack of live hogs, their necessary raw material, very few American porkers have ever been imported. The Winnipeg packers when seen by a representative of The Canadian Grocer last Friday stated that they were not at present affected by the withdrawal of the bonding privilege.

Gordon, Ironside & Fares.—"What effect will the rescinding of the bonding privilege on American hogs have on your business ?" the Hon. J. T. Gordon, of Gordon, Ironside & Fares, was asked by The Grocer.

"None at all," was the response. "Of course we are interested, but not directly."

"How so, Mr. Gordon ?"

"For the simple reason that we are not importing American hogs."

J. Y. Griffin & Co.—When seen by The Grocer, J. Y. Griffin gave a similar reply. No American hogs are brought to Winnipeg and consequently the Winnipeg packers are not directly interested.

Gallagher, Holman & La France expressed themselves in similar terms.

The Canadian Packing Co.

The Canadian Packing Co., London, Ont., in a communication to The Canadian Grocer, give expression to their views on the packing situation in the following manner :

"It seems to us that when the Canadian packers cannot get sufficient quantity of Canadian hogs, we certainly ought to be permitted to import our raw material, and export the bacon of same in bond, in order to keep our establishments going. We are quite sure that no Canadian packing house wishes to kill American hogs if he could get a sufficient supply of Canadian hogs.

"It is a great mistake the farmers are making, in thinking that the importation of American hogs is hurting the price of Canadian hogs. The prices the Canadian hogs are commanding to-day are higher in fact than ever before at this time of the year, and it is also a mistake in thinking, as many do, that the American sides cured in Canada are detrimental in any way to the Canadian sides. In the first place these American sides can easily be distinguished from the Canadian sides, as they are extremely fat, and are only required for a certain trade in England. They also sell for a considerably lower price than the Canadian sides, and have not to our knowledge been sold as anything else but American sides, cured in Canada.

"These American sides have now been made by the Canadian packers for the last six months, and so far our people in the Old Country report that they have seen no danger to the Canadian trade from same ; in fact, Canadian bacon today commands better prices than ever before, having been for several weeks very close to the price for Danish bacon. If the Minister of Agriculture rescinds the bonding privileges it will simply mean that the Canadian packers will in some cases have to shut their doors, and in other cases discharge one-half of their staff of men until they get sufficient Canadian hogs to keep them going.

"Trusting this information will be of interest to you, we remain,

"Yours truly,

"THE CANADIAN PACKING CO."

The Park, Blackwell Co.

The Grocer had the opportunity of a chat with Mr. Blackwell, president of the Park, Blackwell Company, of Toronto, on the subject now occupying the attention of the packing industries, and from him obtained some interesting features of the situation. Mr. Blackwell expressed strongly his conviction of the absolute necessity of the continuance of the bond privileges; in no other way could the foreign trade be held and maintained.

The consumptive demand for home and export of the Canadian packing industry was between 70,000 and 80,000 hogs, whilst the Canadian supply amounted to only 37,000. It can, therefore, be clearly seen that more than half the number required has to be drawn from abroad. If, therefore, the privilege to bring in under bond is removed, it means seriously curtailing the output of the packers, the consequent dismissing of a great number of men and virtually the losing of the half of the export trade.

Touching the question raised at Guelph regarding the danger of introducing disease, Mr. Blackwell very aptly explained that that side of the question could not possibly count in this issue. When once the hogs had reached the factory all such danger was past, as they were slaughtered almost immediately, certainly within 24 hours. The danger, therefore, fell back to the time of their transport from the border line to the factory, and it was evident that phase of objection could not hold water, seeing that hogs had been and were transported continually from Detroit to Buffalo right through Western Ontario without any case of infection ever being heard of or any voice raised against it.

He contended that the whole difficulty of obtaining sufficient stock in Canada sprang from the ignorance of the farmer as to the immense remunerative possibilities of raising hogs. Few farmers knew or even cared to find out the margin of price at which it paid him best to sell the grain he produced, or feed it to his hogs. Instead of this there was a kind of rule with the farmer that the moment grain reached a reasonable figure on the market he sold his grain and reduced his pens, only thinking it worth while to consider hog raising when prices for grain were at bottom. He knew of an instance in which a farmer kept an accurate record of the keep of his hogs which proved that it paid him 50 per cent. better to feed grain to his hogs than sell it. Yet the inducement to sell was so strong on him that he continued to sell his grain, rather than increase his hog raising. What was wanted was that the Agricultural Department take the matter up and demonstrate to the farmers the best manner to conduct hog raising.

With regard to the system of purchasing hogs by an average price instead of grading, Mr. Blackwell was equally emphatic. Farmers had brought this on themselves, he asserted. They gave scant attention to the condition of their hogs, but left them in a great measure to take care of themselves. The result was that some did well and others did not. The scarcity of hogs made it that the packers had to get all they could and the farmers insisted that they take the bad with the good. Hence there was nothing left but to strike an average. Every packer in the trade would welcome the day when he could grade his price so as to discriminate between well grown packing hogs and leggy, indifferent animals.

Packers were not advocating the removal of the duty but only the continuance of the bonding privilege. To remove the duty simply meant ruin to all concerned. It would flood the market with hogs at a price that would make it impossible for the farmer to compete, and would reduce the Canadian products to the lower level of American goods, and be their death knell. All that was wanted was an open door to hold the trade together, which would naturally assist the farmer in building up an industry of perhaps first importance. If the farmer would only look upon his interests and those of the packer as identical, a better state of things would result. The prosperity of the packers meant better prices for the farmers.

Ingersoll Packing Co.

"In regard to bonding privileges, that the packers have had for many years, we may say this, that the contention claimed by the Swine Breeders' Association as to danger of contagious diseases is, we think, going too far. We do not see where there is any danger of hogs being taken to the packing houses, as none of them are allowed to leave there alive after once entering the premises. We have made it a rule, whenever killing hogs in bond, not to even sell a Canadian hog, nor ever have done so, from our stock yards after we commenced killing hogs in bond. If the matter is so dangerous as the Swine Breeders' Association would like to make out, we think it is high time the railroads were stopped taking trainloads of American hogs from one point to another. We would be very sorry to see the Government stop business of this kind, but if there is any danger in the one case, there is far more in the other.

"We do not suppose any of the Canadian packers want to kill American hogs, if they can get enough Canadian hogs, but of course the price one pays for hogs is limited by the English market, and there is no question of a doubt that hogs are scarce in Canada at present, none of the packers having killed their usual quantity since the 1st January last, so therefore it has helped the packers out, being able to get a few American hogs occasionally. We certainly trust the Government will not change our bonding privileges.

"Yours truly,

"INGERSOLL PACKING CO."

The Geo. Matthews Co.

"Operating a packing house is quite different from operating any other kind of factory, as from the nature of our business we cannot lay in a stock of raw material to regulate our working time. Having to buy hogs from hand to mouth, in order to do our manufacturing on economical lines it is necessary that we be able to secure our supplies regularly, and we might mention that with the capacity of this house of 3,000 hogs, if we drop down to a killing of 1,500 hogs it means an increased cost of operating amounting to 20c per hog, so that in competing in the Old Country markets with the packing houses of other countries, it is very necessary that we have our manufacturing cost reduced to a minimum.

"The farmers of Ontario have had two or three years when coarse grain has been scarce and high in price. As a consequence they have not produced as many hogs as they were producing three years ago, and in the meantime the packing houses have increased in number and in capacity, so that to-day the packer is up against the proposition that he cannot secure enough Canadian hogs to work his house on economical lines.

"We believe that in time—say a year or two years—the increase in hogs will be sufficient for requirements. In the meantime, that the packers can operate and keep together their men, we are in favor of importation of American hogs in bond, under Government supervision, and we do not see any more fear of shipping hogs from an American port to a packing house in Ontario, than there is in allowing trainloads of American hogs to go from Detroit through to Buffalo, as has been going on for many years.

"The packers are as deeply interested in the reputation of Canadian bacon and their brands in England as anybody is, and we feel confident that the packers will see that sides, cured in Canada from American hogs, will not be sold as Canadian bacon, if it can be prevented.

"Yours truly,

"THE GEO. MATTHEWS CO.,
"Limited."

The Wm. Davies Co.

"Replying to your enquiry re American hogs: The William Davies Company is in favor of the continuance of the privilege of slaughtering American hogs in bond in Canada for export purposes, with this reservation, that all meats so exported should be plainly skin-branded to show that the product is from American hogs. The decrease in the marketings of Canadian hogs, showing a decrease of about 200,000 hogs in the last six months, has resulted in much hardship to the employes of Canadian packing houses, and in a serious reduction in business to the packer. To relieve both situations, Canadian packers have taken advantage of the bonding privilege, unused since the early '90's, to create work for their employes and incidentally to decrease a ruinous labor charge brought about through short supply.

"It is argued that such importation of hogs is a menace to the Canadian bacon trade for these reasons:

"1. Danger of infection to Canadian hogs.

"2. The use of cheap American hogs by the Canadian packer to unfairly depress the price of Canadian hogs.

"3. Loss of reputation of Canadian bacon through the substitution of American for Canadian.

"The first of these arguments need not be seriously discussed. American hogs are continually passing through Canada in bond en route to Eastern United States points, and no single case of contagion has ever been traced to this traffic. Besides, the trade is surrounded by the most stringent safeguards, under the supervision of the Dominion Veterinary Department. If these regulations are inadequate—they appear most complete—they can always be improved.

"In the next place, American hogs are not more competitive with their Canadian brethren because slaughtered in Canadian rather than American packing houses. A packer can never improve the quality of raw product supplied him. At best he can but pass it on to the consumer as good as when he received it. Further, the product of American hogs is American bacon, no matter where it may be cured, and as such has a place on the English market not one whit different from that which it has always occupied. If, therefore, the product from American hogs must be sold as American bacon, the mere fact that the Canadian packer is able to engage in the slaughter of American hogs in bond, will affect the price of Canadian bacon no more than if he enlarged the activities of his business to take in, for instance, the export of dairy products.

"Thirdly, if skin branding of American bacon is made compulsory, the last vestige of danger to the Canadian bacon trade is removed. This will have the effect of preventing unprincipled agents and salesmen in Great Britain substituting the cheaper, inferior quality of American for Canadian bacon. The American product cured in Canadian houses comes into competition with American product cured in American houses, and will sell at about the same price. Neither product is in the same class with Canadian bacon. They go to totally different trades in the main, and sell at widely different prices. Nor will the total exports of American bacon be increased because a few thousand American hogs are cured in Canada. The export market is a sort of safety-valve to the American packer to keep home prices steady and home stocks within compass. Whether the hogs are shipped alive into Canada or shipped as bacon to England, the net result is the same—a certain amount of produce has disappeared from the immediate available supply.

"Finally, it has surely been accepted in this country as a fundamental economic principle, that if the raw product can be imported into this country, made to pass through a process of manufacture, which at once enhances its value, and affords employment to the Canadian working man, without in any way prejudicing existing industries or channels of trade, such an industry works to the advantage of the people as a whole, and is a trade which should be encouraged.

ANNUAL MEETiNG N. W. C. T. ASSOCIATION.

A Record Attendance.

WITH a membership of 1,843 and a surplus in the treasury of almost $100,000, the Northwest Commercial Travelers' Association is undoubtedly in a flourishing condition. The favorable showing reflects great credit on the management of the association in recent years and the careful husbanding of resources by the astute and watchful treasurer who for ten years has been the custodian of the strong box. With the resources on hand the association are now planning to extend the field of their activities and as a result of the discussion at the annual meeting in Winnipeg on Saturday, December 16, it seems likely that the long discussed project of building a commercial travelers' club will be pushed to conclusion.

Officers Elected.

On Saturday, November 25, officers were nominated at a general meeting of the association held for the purpose in the board room of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange building. The president and treasurer were elected by acclamation, but as a result of the nominations there was a keen contest for the vice-presidency and for positions on the board of directors. Ballots were mailed to all the association members and a fairly heavy vote was polled. The elections resulted as follows :

President—D. J. Dyson (acclamation).
Vice-president—J. E. McRobie.
Treasurer—L. C. MacIntyre (accl.).
Directors—John Horne (retiring president), A. S. Lock, F. H. Nesbitt, Geo. Wilson, Thos. Montgomery, F. M. Morgan, W. C. McLean, G. F. Bryan, F. W. Drewry.

British Columbia officers and directors :

Vice-president for Vancouver — E. F. Gerster.
Vice-president for Victoria — W. W. Duncan (accl.).
Directors for Vancouver—C. P. Egan, F. A. Richardson.
Director for Victoria—J. C. Devlin (accl.).
Director for New Westminster — Fred Lynch (accl.).
Director for Kootenay—Geo. Nunn (accl.).

President Dyson.

In their newly elected president the active Northwest travelers have a man who is one of themselves. The duties of the office are such that it is absolutely necessary to elect as president a man who is not an active traveler. It is desirable, however, that he should be a man who is closely in touch with the boys on the road.

J. E. McRobie, Vice-President N.W.C.T. Association.

Mr. Dyson complies with these requirements. As head of the Dyson Co. his business duties keep him in Winnipeg most of the time, but it is only some eighteen months or more since he was an active traveler, and hence he is in touch with the sentiments of the man who carries the sample grip and has not had time to forget his point of view. Mr. Dyson is justly popular among the travelers for his frank, straightforward character and his kindliness of disposition. The travelers have the utmost confidence in him and they know that the affairs of the association are in safe hands.

Mr. Dyson came west in 1891, severing his connection then with Gorman, Dyson & Co., of London—now Gorman, Eckert & Co. He founded in Winnipeg the Dyson-Gibson Co., which is now known as the Dyson Co. In building up his present extensive pickle and spice trade Mr. Dyson has traveled the territory from Winnipeg to the coast many times and many retailers will be glad to learn in these columns of the honor conferred upon him.

Vice-President McRobie.

Vice-President J. E. McRobie is an active traveler whose good qualities have made him popular in all parts of the west. He is at present secretary-treasurer of the Western Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association and in that capacity spends most of his time on the road . For a number of years he represented the James Robertson Co., Limited, in the west. He was a faithful member of the board of directors last year and there is no doubt that in him the association will have a capable vice-president. His election is very popular among the boys.

Treasurer MacIntyre.

For ten years L. C. MacIntyre has been custodian of the association funds and he has been again elected by acclamation for his eleventh term. Ten years ago, as he mentioned in the course of a speech at the annual meeting, the membership was only 369 ; it is now 1,843. Mr. MacIntyre has therefore seen the association make great strides during his term of office. His re-election by acclamation is sufficient testimony of the high esteem in which he is held by his fellow members.

John Horne, Retiring President N.W.C.T. Association.

A COMMERCIAL AGENT FOR ST. JOHN'S.

In view of the importance of Canadian trade with Newfoundland, the Dominion Cabinet has decided to station a commercial agent at St. John's, and Mr. Ed. Armaud, formerly filling this capacity in Chicago, will be transferred to the Island Colony.

Last year Canada sold Newfoundland goods to the amount of $3,473,713, and bought in return to the value of $1,-054,613.

GROCERS WANT LAWS AMENDED.

It was decided at a meeting of the Grocers' Association, Montreal, to approach the Federal Government next session to have the grocers relieved of the expense of inspection of weights and measures. The Quebec Legislature will also be asked to protect the grocers against the hucksters, who are injuring their trade by selling at the doors of the customers, and a delegation will also ask for a change in the present expensive method of collection in the Circuit Court. A committee was then appointed to consider the amendments required in the law as to grocers' licenses.

NOVEL ADVERTISING LINES.

The N. K. Fairbank Co., Montreal and Chicago, have lately placed on the market for advertising purposes a dummy package of Gold Dust Washing Powder, with the now well known Gold Dust Twins leaning upon the back of the cartoon and apparently discoursing on the fine work they are doing with the contents of the package. It is an ad thoroughly in keeping with the up-to-date material sent out by this firm; and placed on a grocer's counter or show case will prove a good reminder to buy Gold Dust.

Another good line just out by this company is an enamelled door plate in yellow and black, showing a miniature package of Gold Dust and the Twins, and bearing the very seasonable suggestion to "Please close the door." This on the merchant's doors is both ornamental and suggestively useful. No doubt applications to the Montreal offices by readers of The Grocer will secure either of these good designs.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

There is not much change in the situation on cheese since our last report; the market remains not only very firm, but even unusually active for this time of the year. Stocks held here for British account are being ordered forward, new orders are daily coming in and, if this condition continues, we will very soon be entirely bare of stocks.

The strength of the situation was particularly apparent a few days ago, when a lot of damaged cheese ex S.S. Bavarian were sold at auction. A large number of buyers congregated and the prices realized were a surprise to the underwriters and everybody else, which fully demonstrated the keen demand for anything a shade under the price for finest goods.

Even finest qualities have had a good demand, and prices have gradually hardened. Stocks in the different centres of the United Kingdom show a considerable decrease, which means that the consumptive demand is still on, and that the retailers are not overstocked this year. Trade conditions in Great Britain are favorable, and as long as the consumer is willing and able to buy cheese the situation may not only be considered sound, but strong, and prices will naturally advance gradually as supplies become less.

Another representative of a large English importing house made his appearance here a few days ago. Of course he was not here to buy cheese, but just to keep his hand in he took a "few" wherever he could find suitable quality. Evidently the majority of the trade in Great Britain did not believe in the actual strength of the situation, and they find out, when it is almost too late, that they were mistaken the whole season. They lost business and failed to make profits when it was the right time to buy.

There is no doubt the situation right along has been speculative and misleading to the legitimate trade, but, after all, it is astonishing that the majority of the British importers remained on the wrong side, in spite of any straight, good advice from this side of the Atlantic. They realize now that prices are up and stocks getting small; that they need some goods to keep their natural trade supplied, and one after the other is coming on the market, and, naturally, prices keep on advancing.

At the close of our navigation everybody expected a dull and quiet time, but orders coming in from all over the United Kingdom clearly demonstrated that goods were wanted. Available supplies are undoubtedly short, as the bulk of our stocks here are held for British account, and what goods are unsold here are firmly held for higher prices. The present situation is frequently compared with the year 1902, when prices went out very high, and there is every probability this year that we will see a similar wind-up.

There is one danger, which is that everybody here and across the Atlantic is "bullish," and if this is overdone it may finally end in disappointment, but at present the "bull argument" seems certainly well supported by facts.

The receipts and exports of cheese are nearly the same as last year, but the stocks in the country are very much less than a year ago. Prices have been higher right along, but the British retailer has been able to get a better profit on cheese than last year, and, considering that last year's supplies were insufficient for the consumptive demand of Great Britain, it certainly seems natural to expect that this year's stocks will all be wanted before the new season's goods can come on the market.

Great Britain is a large market for all kinds of cheese. Canadian cheese are, to a large extent, similar to the English and Scotch product—better in quality than a good proportion of English and Scotch cheese—and when these run short, as they seem to do this year, the Canadian cheese are wanted to fill the gap. New Zealand cheese come next, but it is generally believed that these will run short also, and at present there is nothing but high prices in prospect.

There is not much to be said about butter. As previously pointed out in these articles, we have no butter to spare for export, and the British markets are now ruled by supplies from Australia and European countries.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

There is no doubt that the packing industries are at the present moment face to face with a critical situation.

We give in another part of this issue upwards of two pages of correspondence which has come to hand on the subject of the bonded privilege withdrawal.

All alike are concerned as to the effect on the industry. There is a steady capacity equal to 70,000 to 80,000 hogs per week all of which can be comfortably placed. With the removal of this privilege packers will have to content themselves with a meagre supply of little more than half that amount, and with little prospect of the situation showing any material improvement for many months. It is a condition of grave and serious moment.

Markets are continuing steady and generally firm, with every indication of good export demand.

Poultry has been occupying a good deal of attention at all points. During the current week, however, there has been a good deal of unsteadiness and prices at present moment are weakening.

The cheese situation is one of continued strength. Factories are closed down and stocks are all held by dealers, who are not disposed to move except at firm figures.

The butter situation has no new feature. A steady demand continues, with supplies hardly sufficient to meet requirements.

Apart from the great question of the moment before referred to, the general conditions are featureless and uninteresting, and are expected to continue so until the opening of the new year.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

The demand for Australian butter continues to be brisk, and prices are inclined to advance. Choicest brands make 110 to 112 shillings; finest, 104 to 108 shillings. Two thousand odd cwts. of Canadian butter arrived on the 2nd inst., and are selling at 106 to 110 shillings for choicest parcels, 100 to 104 shillings for finest. It is worthy of notice that this time last year there was no Canadian butter to be had. The continent is making heavy calls upon the Danish market, but owing to large arrivals of colonial butter the effect is not felt here.

Canadian Cheese in Demand.

There has been a good demand for Canadian cheese all through the week, and brisk business has been transacted at higher prices. Quotations are now 61 to 62 shillings for white; 62 to 63 shillings. These are spot quotations; c.i.f. are higher. At this time last year ruling figures were 49 to 50 shillings for choicest and 47 to 48 shillings for finest. These quotations are full of significance, and verify the statement made elsewhere in The Grocer some short time back that the consuming public in Britain would respond to any advance in price. But the dealers cannot be making much money, since it appears that the addition of an extra penny on the retail price of cheese is robbed of its beneficial effect, as far as they are concerned, by the advanced price demanded by Canadian shippers. However, the retail trade is in no mood for worrying about such a matter just now. "Look to your poultry" is the order of the day.

Opportunity for Canadian Poultry.

It is a pity that Canadian poultry cannot be seen on this market at this time of the year. Indeed, when it is to be had, early in the Spring, it is nothing in comparison to what it might be. The demand is very great for fowls, and Canadian exporters should make an effort to get a larger slice of the business next season than before.

Some reference was made to the poultry market in Britain in a former issue of The Canadian Grocer, but it will bear repetition. When England began many years ago to import poultry, the United States was easily first in supplying fowls to meet the demand, but later on Russia entered the field, and was so successful that it secured the first place as a source of supply. After some while, however, Russian breeders began to cultivate an egg trade with this country, and the result naturally was that the fowls which hitherto had been killed when comparatively young for eating purposes, were now kept on account of their eggs, and the export poultry trade of Russia suffered accordingly. Thus the United States once more secured the first position. Lately, possibly owing to the increased domestic demand, supplies of poultry from the States have been on a decidedly smaller scale, and it is right here that the opportunity occurs for Canadian poultry raisers to step in and get their share of the trade.

Provisions Slow.

Bacon. There is no change to be reported this week. The trade say that there is a possibility of the demand being a trifle better during the next few days, but that the Christmas holidays are sure to interfere with regular business. If it is at all possible, packers should do their best to keep prices down as the high prices now ruling are detrimental to free buying, and they stand to lose money in this way. Quotations are expected to be lower throughout the early part of the year.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.

There is no change of any importance to note in the condition of the provision market. The scarcity of live hogs is a feature the packing houses have to contend with on the moment and prices are consequently firm. Dressed hogs, abattoir killed, $9 to $9.25; country dressed, $8 to $8.25. Bacon is in good demand, although hams are not so active.

Butter.

Butter continues in good demand for local consumption and the market is steady with prices unchanged. Dairy continues scarce and is held at firm prices. Choice creamery 23¼c to 23½c, and good to fine 23c to 23¼c.

Cheese.

The cheese market is strong. There has been considerable inquiry for export and this has had a tendency to make holders firm. Stocks are practically in few hands and this has a still further tendency to stiffen prices. Ontarios quoted 12⅝c to 13c and Quebec makes 12¼c to 12½c.

Eggs.

The egg situation is unchanged; the market is firm and local demand good. Selected stock selling at 24½c to 25c, No. 1 21c and limed 20½c to 21c. Strictly fresh laid 30c to 32c. These latter are very scarce and stocks readily picked up.

TORONTO.

Provisions.

Local trade has manifested considerable life during week under review. Demand has been good, and prices well maintained. Arrivals have been coming in better, but not sufficient to make any material difference to the output. For street hogs markets have shown a slight weakening on our quotations, to the extent of 25c. Poultry has been occupying a good deal of attention. Turkeys have been ruling high but during current week there has been a good deal of fluctuation. Beef, mutton and lamb have all continued in good demand and firm prices.

Dairy Butter.

Supplies from the country are still small and the quality is not all that might be desired. There is a strong demand for good dairy butter and the first class article will command a high price from the local produce houses. The price paid for good dairy butter delivered in Winnipeg is about 20c, but it is hard to quote with exactitude as everything depends on the quality.

HOW LONG WILL WE HAVE GOOD TIMES?

By George Burn, General Manager Bank of Ottawa.

Some years ago the present Minister of Finance in his budget speech asked whether Canada had not about "reached the top of the wave" in prosperity. If one may judge by the increase in the bank clearings and in the deposits of the country, an answer in the negative may very well be given to this query.

I called attention last year to the fact that the deposits of the banks generally had grown at the average rate of a million dollars a week. I find that this year the growth is even greater, the total public deposits in the chartered banks being $69,000,000 higher than a year ago, of which about $14,000,000 is from other countries, held by Canadian banks having agencies outside of Canada. Comparing the 31st October, 1895, ten years ago, with the same date of this year, the growth is $361,102,000, or an average increase per annum of $36,000,000, no small sum, considering our population.

A careful review of the increase, as far as can be judged from the Government returns, indicates that the growth in deposits is general throughout the Dominion.

The current loans in Canada of the chartered banks have increased during the year $34,000,000, or about $20,000,000 less than the increase in Canadian deposits.

The question many people are asking is, how long is this growth in material wealth to continue? It seems to me that so long as we have good crops throughout the country, and prices maintain a fair average, we may expect good times. At the same time we realize that there must be no relaxing of vigilance. The temptations to overtrade, to lay in too heavy stocks of goods, and to speculate in lands, etc., are serious, and not every merchant can resist them. Those of us who have passed through some of what are known as "hard times" know full well that the foundation of many a loss has been laid in times of prosperity.

THE COFFEE SITUATION.

THAT we are in line for an advance in coffees is becoming more and more apparent daily. The statistical position of coffee has never shown a more serious front than at present, and this position is so strong that even the strongest bear interests will not be able to effectually and effectively check the advance in prices in the article, and every confidence is expressed by the large dealers in New York, Havre and Hamburg in the permanency of the ruling strong tone. The United States, as the world's largest user of coffee, is naturally more interested than Canadian dealers, but as the consumption in Canada during the past five years has increased very largely, and is still bounding upward, it is well for all to study the situation closely and weigh carefully as to whether the present is not an opportune moment for laying in stocks.

Mr. G. S. Kutz, an eminent authority on coffees, in reviewing the situation, says:

"The timidity and heaviness resulting from the liquidation and gradual adjustment of a large long interest for December delivery is evidently on the verge of disappearance and about to give way to a feeling of confidence in the future course of the market—a feeling amply justified by the general situation of the article.

"Among a number of causes making for improvement particular mention should be made of the small stocks at seaports in Europe, very scant supplies in the interior and increasing deliveries in this country. The interior of the United States has been buying sparingly, from hand to mouth as it were, during recent months, but is already showing a better demand and will become a liberal purchaser the moment prices begin to show an advancing tendency."

The situation in Europe is looked upon by those conversant with the world's coffee situation as even more pessimistic, and the well-known house of F. Metz & Co., Havre, France, in a circular letter of recent date, commenting on the phenomenal decrease of stocks of Brazil coffee, report that:

"On January 1, 1904, stocks in Europe amounted to 6,420,000 bags, while on October 1, 1905, they were only 3,355,000, thus showing a decrease of 3,065,000 bags within the comparatively short space of 21 months."

The total visible supply of the world of all kinds of coffee on the 1st of November, 1905, amounts to 13,006,841 bags, as against 14,350,926 bags at the same time last year.

The continuous decrease in the production of Brazil coffees has been remarked upon by operators, and this decrease is the result of the policy of restriction in production pursued during late years by the Government of Brazil. From 1902 to 1905, there were shipped from the ports of Rio and Santos as follows:

1901-2	15,439,000 bags
1902-3	12,324,000 bags
1903-4	10,408,000 bags
1904-5	9,968,000 bags

showing a steady shortage every year. As to the crop of 1905-6, which up to last May was estimated between 10,500,000 to 12,000,000 bags, it is now thought will not exceed 10,000,000 to 10,250,000 bags.

In this connection it is well to mention the report of the United States Department of Commerce and Labor on the subject of the world's production and consumption of coffee, recently issued:

"It is believed to be the intention of the Brazilian authorities to bring the production down to 9,000,000 bags, and keep it there, in order to render the industry more remunerative to the planter by aiming at a higher range of prices."

These reports are food for thought and reflection, and especially so when it is an apparent fact to everyone that the consumption of coffee is not only commensurate with the growth of population in coffee consuming countries, but there is also a per capita increase. With the production of coffee falling off, and the consumption increasing, it is not difficult to imagine what the effect will be on prices. As the world's production outside of Brazil is not more than about 4,500,000 bags, to satisfy the growing demand it will require about 12,000,000 bags of Brazil coffees, and the most sanguine reports do not show more than a possible crop for 1905-6 of 10,500,000 bags. It is easy to calculate upon an advance.

TEA STANDARDS FOR CANADA FURTHER CONSIDERED.

"It is one thing to make a statement, but another thing to substantiate it," is a current saying. The Grocer in its latest issues, as well as as far back as June last, has made the claim on behalf of Canadian tea importers that the present system (?) of tea inspection by the Government was an injustice to the trade and a serious detriment to the proper conduct of a business of such vast extent and importance as the tea importing trade. In one of our latest issues reference was made to the loss sustained by a Montreal importer through the unsystematic procedure of the Government tea inspection bureau, and in last week's issue a direct statement of a further unjust ruling was published in the letter of Mr. E. D. Marceau, one of Montreal's most prominent tea merchants. The injustice to Mr. Marceau and the heavy loss sustained by him through inability to deliver the tea in question to his customers owing to advance sales having been made on samples through his travelers, was sufficient excuse for a stronger protest than was made by him.

The Grocer has been handed this week by another large and well known tea house of Montreal a copy of an account sales of a shipment of tea imported from London and which on rejection by the Government inspector was re-shipped to London and sold for account of the Montreal house. The original account sales was in The Grocer's possession but returned to the tea merchants. The shipment consisted of 15 hf. chs. Imperial gunpowder and was purchased at 6½d., equal to about 13½c in Montreal. The tea was pronounced perfectly sweet and good liquoring by a number of local tea experts and superior in every respect to several lots of woody, scummy Ping Sueys that have lately passed the inspector, and in the opinion of those competent to judge, ought to have been permitted entry.

The London house, on the teas arriving there, sold them and the account sales showed 4½d., a loss of 2d., and the entire loss to the Montreal house was £10 1s. 6d. (about $50).

This case amply justifies an investigation in the methods adopted by the authorities invested with the inspection of teas and certainly strengthens the contention that a set of tea standards for use of the tea importing trade is absolutely necessary.

In order to place the above case clearly before our readers and the Government, we publish herewith the actual shipment and account sales referred to, withholding only the names of shipper and consignee :

E. & O. E

How long will this uncertai ty prevail ?

The only remedy is, we claim, the adoption of standards, and the appointment of a board of arbitration as is the case in the United States. There is no reason in the world why Canadian tea importers should be kept in a guessing state as to what to import, and be put to losses in the conduct of legitimate business.

OUR COMMERCIAL AGENCY IN U.S.

In a few months the Canadian Commercial Agency at Chicago will have ceased to exist, by the transfer of Mr. E. D. Arnaud to St. John's, Newfoundland, and with its closing will apparently end Canadian commercial representation in the States. This is to be greatly deplored. Chicago itself may not have been an ideal point for such a purpose, and we can well understand the agent in charge has had an onerous and difficult task.

No one acquainted with the situation would complain at the appointment of an agent for St. John's, Newfoundland, it is a necessity which should not be overlooked, but why the withdrawal of representation in the U. S.? Surely there is ample need to be in touch with every American movement. There are other places beside Chicago—Philadelphia and New York, for instance—where commerce and manufacture are exploited on a scale which has taken years to develope. Surely Canada can learn much from her American cousins' experience. The absence of our commercial agency from such important centres as those mentioned, is greatly to be regretted and it is to be hoped that the matter will meet with the consideration it deserves.

A BLOW AT THE PACKERS.

The decision of the Hon. the Minister of Agriculture to rescind bonding privileges in regard to American hogs is to be deplored, and can not be defended on the grounds set forth as the reason therefor. The health of Canadian hogs is no more likely to be injured by the transit of American porkers from the border to the factory than from the Detroit to the Niagara River, en route from Chicago to Buffalo, thousands passing through Canada by this route every year without any interference on the part of the Government.

The other reason given that bacon produced from American-fed hogs might be sold in Great Britain as Canadian is equally fallacious. Apart from the intrinsic difference in the bacon itself, it would be quite possible to secure the branding of all American-fed bacon in such a way as to make misrepresentation impossible.

The packers are unanimous in desiring to use Canadian hogs, but if the farmers refuse to raise them in sufficient quantities at the high prices that have been ruling it is unjust to the packer to prevent him from employing his full capacity in the curing of the American hog. The effect is sure to be injurious to the farmer. If the packer can only run at half time or capacity, his manufacturing costs must be necessarily higher per hundredweight, and he will be compelled to pay proportionately less to the farmer.

If the bacon produced from American hogs competed with the Canadian article to any degree the action of the Minister might be justified, but such is not the case, as the two classes of bacon serve two distinct classes of trade.

The American hogs cured in Canada and sold in Great Britain would otherwise find their way to the same market but through American packing houses. Is it not better that the labor should be employed in Canada and the profits remain here, rather than in the United States, while our farmers are not in a position to supply the requisite demand ?

The very fact that although the bonding privilege has been available some eight or ten years, the packers had not, up to the present time, availed themselves of it to any appreciable extent, should convince all reasonable persons of the sincerity of the latter in their protestations that they desire only the Canadian hog if they can get him.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Fisher may yet prove amenable to the reasonable request of the packers, and continue bonding privileges under such conditions as will prevent the possibility either of the dissemination of disease or fraudulent substitution of American for Canadian bacon.

WHEN WILL LOBSTER CANNERS AWAKE?

Much has been said from time to time on the imperfect canning of lobsters. Quite recently The Grocer drew attention to the subject, and again has it been brought to our notice, this time from, perhaps, a more practical standpoint.

The canning of shell fish is well known to require an extraordinary amount of attention, and lobster, by reason of its delicacy, requires the greatest of all care. Now, when all this has been attended to, and the process has produced a perfect article, is just where, so we understand, most lobster canners are making a mistake by using a can which, whilst being satisfactory in all other respects, and good for other descriptions of canning, will not resist the peculiarly sensitive chemical process which arises and is only associated with such as lobster canning.

The fact that a certain class of "can" has been used since the industry started is no argument. Every industry is on the advance, knowledge is being acquired at every turn, and why not this industry ? Experience has proved the present system to be imperfect, and every "can" of lobster made finds ready sale, and if the public were certain of getting a good article every time much more would be bought, or a better price be obtained. As it is, however, nothing is more annoying than to open a "can" of lobster and find it putrid, as the writer himself has found on several occasions, and nothing more effectually kills an industry. Explanations afterward do not remove the feelings of disgust.

Among themselves commercial men are plain speakers and their criticisms are frank. The only criticism of Mr. MacIntyre's administration has been that he is over zealous in his protection of association funds, and surely that criticism is about the highest compliment that could be paid to a treasurer. Even his failings seem to "lean to virtue's side."

Mr. MacIntyre came to Winnipeg from Victoria county, Ontario, in 1882. For 10 years he was a traveler for Turner, McKeand & Co., wholesale grocers, of Winnipeg, and for the last 13 years he has been manager of the Paulin-Cham-

President's Report.

The president's report, which was adopted unanimously, showed a very satisfactory condition of affairs.

The total membership is now 1,843, showing an increase for the year of 16 per cent., being a total of 293 new members. The membership is apportioned as follows: Winnipeg, active, 1,429; Winnipeg, honorary, 30; life members, 2; British Columbia, active, 382.

The directors have held fifteen meetings during the year, with an average attendance of eight members.

The association has to mourn the loss of ten members, namely: Messrs. C. Jacobs, J. E. Code, W. W. Hicks, J. A. Webber, W. C. Hourston, W. T. Johnstone, S. C. Burton, J. M. Laver, K. P. Wollaston, and R. J. Whitla. The total claims on the mortuary fund this year amount to $1,450, some $600 less than last year.

The British Columbia branch of the association cootinues to flourish and increase in members, the total this year being 382 as against 306 in 1904.

The association's liability under the mortuary benefit by-law now amounts to $350,420, an increase for the year of $63,795.

A branch has now been opened for the issue of certificates in Calgary, with Mr. Chas. J. Packham as assistant secretary in charge. Any members of the association making their headquarters in Alberta will apply to Calgary office for certificate for 1906.

The board have this year made two grants to hospitals, namely: $250 to furnish a ward in the new Vancouver hospital; this is at the urgent request of the British Columbia members, this ward to be always at the service of commercial travelers. At the Winnipeg General Hospital the ward which was equipped by the association some years ago was found in need of new furniture, etc., and was therefore refurnished throughout at a cost of $218.

The board have made every effort in conjunction with the other associations, boards of trade, and other representative bodies to have disallowed by the Dominion Government the obnoxious tax on travelers recently put in force both in British Columbia and Quebec, so far without avail.

At the invitation of the Eastern Canadian Passenger Association the board authorized the president and secretary to attend a meeting in Montreal of the presidents and secretaries of all the associations of commercial travelers in Canada and the Eastern Canadian Passenger Association, to discuss the present method of granting rebates by the issuing of certificates by each association. The railway companies have for some time been desirous of securing greater uniformity and no duplication of numbers, and suggested that all certificates should be supplied by the passenger association to each commercial travelers' association in consecutive numbers and absolutely uniform. This proposition did not commend itself to the delegates, as in the first place it would be likely to cause the several associations to lose their identity, and being, secondly, likely to cause some complication in connection with the association insurance. There are many other points of importance which should be considered before definite action is taken. The delegates therefore asked that action be deferred until next year, and it was so decided, and there will be another meeting of delegates called early in the new year by the secretary of the Eastern Passenger Association, of which all delegates will have thirty days' notice.

The delegates were unanimous in condemning the travelers' tax, and passed a resolution in Montreal which was forwarded to the Dominion Government, copies being sent to the premier and other ministers.

The accident and disease insurance of $1,000 on each member has again been renewed with the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, tenders having been taken and theirs being the most advantageous.

In conclusion, the association is congratulated on its splendid showing this year, and there is no doubt that it will continue to grow and prosper under the management of the new board.

(Signed) FRED. J. C. COX,
Secretary.
JOHN HORNE,
President.

In Flourishing Conditions.

Mr. MacIntyre's report showed the finances of the association to be in a flourishing condition. Owing to the sale of the Lombard street property the assets increased during the year by $35,421.51. The normal increase was more than $3,000 larger than in any previous year. The net surplus is $97,709.73.

Club Room Proposal.

At the general meeting in November a committee was appointed to inquire into the practicability of renting recreation or club rooms in Winnipeg for the members. A. L. Johnson, chairman of the committee, presented a report showing the cost of rental of two or three suites of rooms in Winnipeg. The members thought the rental excessive and after long discussion it was decided, on motion of L. C. MacIntyre and A. S. Lock, to authorize the executive to purchase a lot and proceed to build a club house.

L. C. MacIntyre, Treasurer N.W.C.T.

CELLVLOID STARCH

Is that kind of a combination for the dealer.

When a stock of this well-known brand of Laundry Starch is put in, the grocer feels that he is not taking any long chances. It is distinctly a case of "backing the favorite." He knows it will "move"—and quickly: no bargain sales from tubs at the season's end of miscellaneous nondescripts. What a satisfaction it is to sell a Starch that you know from trial in your own home to be the "real thing."

Attractive packages, heavy advertising, everything in fact that could be done to help the grocer has been and will be done continuously.

Sugar—The sugar situation is one of uncertainty. Domestic trade is well maintained, present prices being considered a good basis for purchase. Supplies, however, are barely sufficient to meet all orders.

Syrups and Molasses—Trade in these has been of small volume and uninteresting. Previous quotations remain unchanged.

Coffee—Domestic trade has shown considerable shrinkage during the week under review, probably on account of stocks having been well laid in in advance. New York market reports denote a steady tone with demand slightly improving; recent sales closing on even firmer basis. The advices received from the European markets were encouraging, both Havre and Hamburg showing fair advances, and the movement of the Brazil crop was running at very moderate figures.

Tea—The local demand for tea has been steady, but of an uninteresting character. Good quality teas continue scarce and command good prices. Reports from London market continue to show strength.

In recent Indian sales good and best qualities were in poor volume. Common tea continued quiet and unchanged on its previous low basis. The feature of the sales was the renewed demand experienced for good and fine grades with quality in cup or appearance, and prices for these, as a rule, tended in sellers' favor. Tippy broken Pekoes again met with good support, and for the most part about recovered the slight decline recently noted.

In Ceylon teas the sales as a rule have passed with fairly good spirit, the general tone in the room being rather better this week than last, but any alteration in values has, on the whole, been against the seller.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 19.

Christmas is all but here. We have been fortunate in having snow and hope to have it over the holiday. It greatly helps business in the city. In the country it is a necessity. There, there can be little or no business without snow.

The Board of Trade has appointed a committee to thoroughly advertise the advantages of the city as a manufacturing centre, and to place definite information before those who are looking for the very best place to start manufactories. At a meeting called in the above interest a resolution was carried favoring exemption of taxes for ten years where manufactories are started, not competing with concerns now here. While considering there are many better reasons why St. John should be chosen as one of the best localities for manufacturing, as the climate, the high class labor obtainable here, our position as an open port all the year, cheap coal, etc., these are inducements which count and show that the city is in earnest in its intent to get manufacturers to locate here and is prepared to help in every way possible to make these enterprises a success.

Canned Goods.

There is little of particular interest. Vegetables, on which prices were cut very low, are more firmly held. Several firms did not enter the competition. In fruits a slightly better sale owing to the holiday season. Salmon rather quiet. While lobsters are high, there is a fair supply. In domestic sardines, a fair stock. Haddies, kippers and clams, rather small supply. There is some excitement in canned meat owing to cut prices being quoted by some American packers.

Green Fruit.

The holiday season means an improved demand. Jamaica oranges have a large sale. The quantity of Valencias imported has been smaller than usual. Californias are high. Floridas firm. Lemons are firm. Grapes have a good demand. Apples are rather quiet; best grades are high. A feature of the market is the extreme price of cranberries.

Dried Fruit.

The season is about over. Large quantities of nuts, particularly walnuts, have been received during the past week. Our wholesale grocers do not give much attention to nuts outside of this season. In dried fruits stocks are not large, particularly in prunes and seeded raisins. The high price of the latter has affected the sale. A large quantity of New York seeded have been brought here. In currants there is a steady sale at quite full prices. Those cleaned here command the best price, though large quantities of imported cleaned are sold. Figs have sold freely. Dates have also had a large sale. The sale of peels about over. Evaporated apples are higher and the supply light. Dried have a better sale than usual. Onions show little change.

Sugar.

Price is still low, sales quite large, stocks still small. It is said market is rather firmer, but there is little confidence.

B. C. News.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 14, 1905.

A meeting of the committee of the Board of Trade of Vancouver has been held and the reply of the board to the Canadian Pacific Railway's statement to the Railway Commissioners formulated. This will be sent on to the Railway Commissioners at Ottawa. This reply, or rebuttal, covers the ground taken by the Railway Co. point by point and comparison is instituted as to rates, off-setting the company's comparisons.

Another point the board dwells on is that no special rate is asked which would permit shippers here to bring goods from the east and then ship them back across the mountains to Alberta points. On the other hand the point is made that the shippers here object to goods being shipped east across the mountains as far as Winnipeg and back to Alberta points at as low or lower rates than shippers here can ship direct.

In the meantime the boycott is being vigorously pursued and no knowledge of any defection from the ranks of the merchants' league is heard of. The trade generally expresses the opinion that the reply of the railway company is weak and trifling, and altogether unworthy of so great a concern, and of such an important question.

A produce market for Vancouver is a question on which a plebiscite of the ratepayers is to be taken, when the municipal elections are being held in January. The by-law to raise money by way of debentures was turned down in council, and as a last resort the supporters of the market secured the passing of a motion to submit the question to a plebiscite. A favorable site, with both rail and water facilities, can be secured it is thought, though a site on False Creek, offered by the C.P.R. at $55,000 was refused by the council.

In sugar there is a flurry of interest aroused by the published statements of Ray Knight(head of the Knight Sugar Co., of Raymond, Alberta, a Mormon beet sugar concern, the statements being that there is a combine between the B. C. Sugar Refinery Co., of Vancouver, and refiners of Eastern Canada, to put the Knight Sugar Co. out of business by close prices in the field the latter seeks to sell its product in. Mr. B. T. Rogers, manager of the B. C. sugar refinery, replies in the daily press here, that there is no such combine, that in fact it would be absurd for the other refineries to attempt it, Montreal being so much farther from the field in question than Vancouver. Mr. Rogers explains the present low price of sugar by pointing out the important fact that where German beet sugar showed last year a shortage of millions of tons, there is this year just as much of a surplus. Hence, prices are lower all over the world than they have been for the past year or two.

The expected deliveries of Christmas groceries, such as almonds, Spanish raisins, etc., have been received and distributed this week, and no surplus was left in hand.

N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 19, 1905.

Jobbers report the Christmas trade a little backward so far this season. At the close of last week business was not quite up to the average. Purchasers appear to be holding back, but for what reason the trade cannot explain. There is no change in the price of sugar here so far, but the dealers are looking for an early advance out of sympathy with the other markets. Dried fruits are cheap here this year. Good raisins (loose) and currants (cleaned) are being sold here at retail four pounds for 25c. The quality is good and the stock new. One dealer here is selling Bensdorp's cocoa for 20c. a tin, and in making a specialty of it. The trade is a little puzzled as to how he can quote such a price on a standard article like that referred to.

The high price of butter and eggs this season prevents the consumer from buying these articles for home use in making pastry and cakes. In most cases the consumers say that it is cheaper to buy their pastry and cake already made than attempt to make these articles at home. The dealers are, however, looking for better business during Christmas week.

The stores in general are making a better display in their windows than heretofore. Competition is becoming keener in all lines of trade, and each is striving to do better than his neighbor. On some of the streets the storekeepers, at their own expense, have had many new electric arc lights placed in position, and the effect has been most beneficial to the trade.

Provisions.

Hogs are very scarce here and the price high, 8 and 8½c. being the price quoted. All hog products are firm in consequence of the condition of the market. Poultry is scarcer on this market this season than for years. The supply for Christmas will be short. Local dealers have been scouring all over the province and Prince Edward Island to get sufficient stock to tide them over the holidays. Those who eat turkey for their Christmas dinner will have to pay at least 25c. per pound for it, and some jobbers even predict that the toothsome bird will bring 30c. In all parts of the province the scarcity is the same, and in even the poultry raising districts in the western counties there were not sufficient turkeys raised to supply their own people. Dealers from country towns were in the city during the week buying up any available stock at advanced prices. Geese, ducks and chickens are also high.

The receipts of produce here during the week have been very heavy. Vessels arrived with 19,222 bushels of potatoes, 1,182 bushels of turnips, and 6,944 bushels oats. Some of them from the island ports landed a few hogs and some cabbage. Potatoes are selling at 20c. ex vessel; turnips at 25c., oats 44 to 50c., and cabbage at 50 and 60c. per dozen. These will probably be the last heavy receipts for the season.

DOMINION COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

THE annual meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association was held on Saturday evening, December 16th, at Karn Hall, Montreal. There was a good turnout of the commercial missionaries and the hall was hazy with the fumes of the Concha Regalias. It was also haze with something else besides the fragrant perfume of Havanas, and things at one time were very lively. Of this more anon.

President Jas. S. N. Dougall occupied the chair. With him on the platform were Past Presidents Hon. J. D. Rolland, David Watson, Max Murdoch, Jas. Robinson and Messrs. W. J. Egan, Fred L. Cains, E. D. Marceau, R. C. Wilkins, Jos. Rosseau, Jos. Dubreuil, Fred Dugan, W. B. Mathews, Arthur Terroux, W. Hayes.

Successful Year's Work.

The report of the board of management showed a present membership of 5,185, an increase of 370 during the year. Since the last annual meeting forty-eight members had died. Their average age was fifty, the average week-end tickets are now granted by the railways to all stations, so that commercial travelers on presentation of their certificates can purchase tickets to any point good to start Friday p.m. and return the following Monday at one first-class fare.

The total receipts for the year were $86,329.65, which with a balance of $10,217.09 last year made a total of $96,546,74. Total disbursements were $91,769.73, leaving a balance of $4,777.01. The year's operations resulted in a surplus revenue of $12,263.17, making the present surplus or capital of the association, $254,754.32. The report was adopted.

The educational report was read and adopted. The board of trustees was re-elected.

It was moved by Mr. James Robinson, seconded by Hon. J. D. Rolland that clause 2 of article 7, of the by-laws which reads "It shall be the duty of the treasurer to see that all funds are promptly deposited with the bankers of the association" be amended by adding "who shall be appointed by the board of management." The motion was carried.

Mr. Fred. L. Cains,
President of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

Generous Aid to Hospital Fund.

The hospital committee's report was read by Mr. David Watson. Only $382,75 had been received during the year. The amount on hand is $935.32. Mr. Watson made the announcement of Mr. Robinson's offer to contribute $1,000 if the members would raise $2,000. There would then be nearly $4,000 on hand, which would allow for the endowment of a cot in both the General and Notre Dame hospitals. The offer was received with great enthusiasm.

Mr. E. D. Marceau,
Vice-President of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

Mr. Woods then brought to the notice of the meeting the rumors that had reached his ears respecting irregularities in the election for president. He said he had heard from a reputable gentleman present that voting papers had been hawked about and that there had been a good deal of vote soliciting, which was highly dishonorable to the association. He asked whether it were possible for a candidate, or his friends, to secure more than one ballot from the secretary and go around in this way.

The secretary, Mr. H. W. Wadsworth, said that 5,200 ballots had been printed, so that the extra number had been very small.

Evidence of Vote-Soliciting.

The chair then vigorously demanded of Mr. Woods that he substantiate his statement or apologize.

Mr. Woods then named Mr. Robinson as his informant, who said he did not know how it could have happened, but he had seen a man with several ballots in his hands soliciting votes.

A great deal of heated argument followed. Mr. W. J. Egan, the defeated candidate for the presidency, told how he had secured fifteen extra votes in the secretary's office in order to find out if the thing were possible, after having heard of the soliciting of votes by friends of Mr. Cains.

Mr. R. C. Wilkins,
Treasurer of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

The secretary said he did not think 125, which was all that remained over, was a large number of extras for over 5,000 men. He said that if Mr. Egan had secured fifteen at his office twelve of them were without his consent.

Mr. Wilkins did not think it a very great crime if extra ballots were distributed and votes solicited. He felt sure no member would forge another's name.

Will Investigate Election.

It was finally moved by Mr. Charles Roberts, seconded by Mr. Friedman, that a committee be appointed consisting of the five past presidents to investigate the conduct of the last election and the distribution of ballots. After the question was further discussed with a great deal of warmth ,the motion was carried.

The committee consists of Senator Rolland, Mr. M. Murdoch, Mr. Jas. Robinson, Mr. T. L. Paton, and Mr. Jas. S. N. Dougall.

The report of the election scrutineers, Messrs. Riddle and Stead, was then made. For president, Mr. Fred L. Cains had received 2,191 votes; Mr. W. J Egan, 1,053. Vice-president, Mr. E. D. Marceau, and treasurer, Mr. R. C. Wilkins had already been elected by acclamation. The new board of directors, with the number of ballots each received, is as follows: James Thompson, 2,333; W. J. Cleghorn, 2,226; E. S. Bois, 1.875; J. B. Giles, 1,684; A. Terroux, 1,610..

The annual banquet of the association was held on Monday the 18th at the Windsor, a detailed report of which will appear in our next issue.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 21st, 1905.)

VERY few changes are to be recorded this week as values are steady throughout almost the entire list. The Christmas rush is now over so far as the wholesale trade are concerned, and there is not much activity at present. A further improvement is reported in collections, but there are still some complaints about certain districts where there have been delays in getting out the wheat.

Yellow sugar has been advanced 10c. per cwt. very much to the surprise of the trade who were looking for a decline. Granulated continues steady at the figures quoted for some weeks past.

The railways have announced that they are increasing the weight of carloads of salt to 40,000 lbs., the old weight being 30,000 lbs. The change goes into effect on Jan. 1st.

Canned Goods—New canned chicken, turkey and duck (Aylmer and Delhi brands) are now on the local market and quotations will be found below. Otherwise the canned goods market is steady and featureless. We quote:

George Cann, 2nd vice-president.
Chas. Bremner, treasurer.
W. R. Hill, secretary.

A. M. Anderson, general merchant, Franklin, Man., has compromised at 65 cents on the dollar.

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Crest Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

IS YOUR TRADE LARGE?

Do you sell

ORANGE MEAT?

Do you sell it in good quantity? Have you occasional customers or regular customers? Do you keep both the Jumbo package and the regular package? Do you hang up the posters? Do you display the food prominently?

ORANGE MEAT

is a great seller. The fact that the output has been doubled proves this.

A grocer who is not geting a goodly share of "Orange Meat" business should consider well the above questions.

Made from the finest grade of wheat, in a spotlessly clean cereal plant, and put up with the greatest care, is the ideal breakfast food for a grocer to carry.

ORANGE MEAT

Order a larger quantity and set to work to capture more trade.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

GENERAL CONDITIONS.

The situation in the grain and flour markets generally is somewhat disappointing. Naturally at this season of the year there is a tendency to slow down on account of holiday time, but the condition which has evolved from the extreme delay in delivery by the railroads has made the situation one of anxiety. At one office at which The Grocer called an invoice was just being entered for shipment to England, the order for which was placed early in October, the dealer remarking that in consequence of this delay there would be no margin whatever left for him on the transaction.

Reports from the mills generally are that while they are doing a fair local trade, they find orders for domestic shipment very limited, and although there has been a better inquiry for export for Winter wheat flours, the light offerings and high price of Winter wheat have prevented any business of moment being put through.

There has been a limited sale of export flour from Manitoba wheat, 25s Glasgow freights being the ruling price for straight grades.

Flour brokers reported active cable inquiry for Winter wheat flours but were unable to offer any, on account of light supplies and the difficulty in some instances of getting delivery of flour already bought. One broker says he has flour purchased October 2 at $3 per 196 lbs. in his sacks, for prompt shipment, for which he had freight engaged at the time, that is only now being delivered to him and he will have to pay 5½c per 100 lbs. higher freight, and may be penalized as well by the Old Country buyer for delay in shipment.

The demand for Winter wheat from the mills has been very limited, but exporters were in the market all the week, and sales of both white and mixed are reported to have been made at 80c middle freights.

Dealers report the demand from millers for Manitoba wheat has been the lightest they have experienced for several months.

A MONSTER FLOUR MILL.

The Western Canada Flour Mills Company, which has mills at Goderich, Ont., and Brandon, Man., is now erecting another of the great capacity of 4,000 barrels per day at Winnipeg.

In order to have the flour mill up-to-date in every particular, the company will operate by electricity, and has just awarded the contract for the necessary equipment to Allis-Chalmers-Bullock, Limited, of Montreal. This contract includes two synchronous motors of 500-horsepower capacity each, and a number of smaller motors, which, ranging from 5-horsepower to 300-horsepower, aggregate 750-horsepower.

The mill, which was designed by Mr. R. J. Megaw, will be of the most modern type, and the electric equipment necessary makes one of the largest orders for this class of work ever given in America.

A RECORD FOR FLOUR MILLS.

The record run of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, was made on November 30th, when 5,163 barrels were turned out at the Royal mill in Montreal. When it is considered that this was done with one run of stone short, it is easily believed that the full capacity of 6,000 barrels daily will shortly be reached. This is the largest output of any mill in the British Empire and the Royal mill at Montreal is now the largest mill in the world outside of Minneapolis.

Mr. Emerson Reid's large flour mill at Portage du Fort, Quebec, was burned to the ground recently. The flames were first noticed coming from the roof. Everything was done to save the building, but only a small quantity of flour was saved. The origin of the fire is not known.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Flour.

There is no change to report in the flour situation. The demand is fair, both locally and from country points, the latter, however, only for small lots. Western millers, it is reported, are firm in their prices, and no cutting is in evidence. We quote:

Winter wheat patents	4 60	4 80
Straight rollers	4 20	4 40

Manitoba spring wheat patents		4 90

Rolled Oats.

Owing to the good supplies of rolled oats at present on hand, the market has shown a tendency to weakness, though no changes are as yet reported. The association has not as yet made any changes in prices quoted last. The demand for rolled oats is considered fairly good. We quote:

Fine oatmeal, bags	2 55	2 60

" 80-lb. bags		2 65

Feed.

There is good demand all along the line, but more especially for bran. Ontario bran is scarce on this market, stocks being difficult to obtain from millers. There is a good demand for Manitoba bran, which is selling around $17 per ton in bags. Mouillie is unchanged, with fair demand. We quote:

Ontario bran	17 00	17 50
Ontario shorts	20 00	25 50
Manitoba shorts	19 00	19 50
" bran	17 00	17 25

Hay.

There is no change to report in the hay market this week. No. 1 is more called for, as well as choice No. 2. Stocks of low grade hay are plentiful but not much in demand. We quote :

No. 1	8 50	9 00
" 2	7 25	7 50
Clover mixed	6 00	6 50
Clover, pink	5 50	6 00

TORONTO MARKETS.

Flour.

Trade has been slow and somewhat uninteresting during week under review. Domestic trade has shown considerable decline as regards activity, whilst prices maintain a steady but not over firm basis. Supplies are arriving in much better volume, and dealers are now enabled to fill outstanding orders. We quote :

Strong bakers " "	4 25	4 65
Ontario wheat patents " "	3 75	4 00

Grain.

The grain market is developing more interest, the endeavor of the railroad companies to bring forward more regularly is reflecting itself on the domestic trade and a better condition is the result. Millers are reporting heavy arrivals, and full work is now anticipated for some time to come. Prices are showing a tendency to fluctuate, and quotations are 1c. to 2c. lower in this week's report. We quote :

Breakfast Cereals.

The market has shown a deal of unsteadiness lately, which culminated on Monday last by a drop equal to 25c. per barrel on all cereals. Plenty of arrivals are reported by local mills, in good condition and quality. We quote :

Bran Waste is One Great Difference Between Good and Poor Flours

The food part of flour is "protein."

Protein makes brain muscle and brain. There is no protein in bran.

Bran is the outside part, the husk or "bark" of the wheat.

Bran is the part of the wheat which is absolutely without food value to the human system.

Bran represents part of the difference between "Royal Household" Flour and whole wheat flour or cheap inferior flours that are poorly milled and not thoroughly purified.

No other flour in this country is so thoroughly and completely separated from the waste as is "Royal Household," because no other mills are so well equipped or exclusively devoted to the production of scientifically pure flour as "Royal Household" Mills.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

FEATURES OF INTEREST.

It could only be expected that business would make considerable strides as the holiday approached. Reports from all points of the Dominion denote that anticipations have been fully realized. California has shown her hand by sending some prime early arrivals to the Canadian market. Strawberries of fair size and in good condition can be had on the Toronto market. Some fine pears are also on sale, but only of very limited quality. Pomegranates and kumquats are also in evidence.

At Montreal there has been active demand for oranges, and all good qualities appear to command good prices. Cranberries all along the line are scarce and difficult to get.

Vegetables from the south have been attracting attention and commanding good prices.

CONVENTION OF FRUIT-GROWERS

Quebec.

The annual convention of the Pomological and Fruit-Growing Society of the Province of Quebec commenced its session at Richmond, the president, Mr. J. M. Fisk, of Abbotsford, reviewing the season just closed. He remarked that although the apple crop of the Dominion was less than that of 1904, the exports were larger, and were estimated to be worth $2,500,000. Up to the close of navigation Montreal was credited with exporting more apples than any other port in Canada or the United States. The Eastern Townships contained large tracts of land where soil was well adapted to growing apples, and wherever the sugar maple thrived the apple could be grown. The San Jose scale and the gipsy and brown-tail moths were dangerously near this province, and their introduction should be guarded against. An entomological department in connection with the society was needed. The committee of resolutions should memorialize the Provincial Government for a special grant with this object in view.

Mr. Mackenzie, M.L.A., welcomed the society in the name of the people of the district, and promised his support at Quebec in favor of the grant referred to.

Mr. R. Brodie, Westmount, contributed a paper on "How to Set Out an Orchard." In the past the great fault had been too close planting, so that when the trees got to the age of fifteen or twenty years they got overcrowded, the branches got interlaced, and most of the fruit was off color for lack of sunshine. Soil of a limestone texture produced the finest and best apples. He spoke of the necessity of good drainage, natural or otherwise, and recommended the planting largely of McIntosh Red, with Wealthy as fillers. To these he added Fameuse, Alexander, Wolf River, Milwaukee and Golden Russet, with Ben Davis, Scott's Winter and Peewaukee as fillers.

Mr. J. C. Chapais, St. Denis, read a paper giving some interesting notes on an object lesson in fruit packing, after which the question: "Shall we cultivate apple orchards or leave them in sod?" was fully discussed. The general opinion seemed to be that in this province, where the climatic conditions were peculiar—great rainfall and severe Winter—it was better to have the orchard in sod.

In the evening a paper was read by Mr. Auguste Dupuis, director of the experimental stations in the Province of Quebec, on "Experiments with European Plums and European Varieties Originating in Canada and the United States."

Mr. W. Saxby Blair, assistant horticulturist, McDonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, spoke on the care of the apple orchard for the first ten years.

Mr. H. L. Gulline, of Granby, exhibited a folding fruit packing box, and explained its advantages. The meeting passed a resolution recommending it to the notice of all fruit shippers for trial.

Nova Scotia.

In the annual address to the Nova Scotia Fruit-Growers' Association at Annapolis on the 13th, the president, Ralph Eaton, of Hillcrest orchards, Kentville, extended the congratulations of the society to the officers of the New Brunswick Fruit-Growers' Association for having started during the year their provincial organization. He claimed that it was absolutely necessary for an appreciable development of the fruit industry that the association should exist and he spoke for it the hearty support of the New Brunswick Government, also giving assurance that the association of the sister province would be glad to help and encourage it in every way possible.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Business during the week has shown more life than in the previous two weeks.

California navels are arriving quite freely and are in good demand, selling at $3.50 to $3.75.

Jamaica oranges, however, are in best demand among the wholesale jobbing trade, selling at $3.50 to $4 per barrel in quantities. This is due to the superior condition of the fruit.

California celery is advanced 50c per crate, owing to light supplies. The demand is good.

Two cars of Mexican oranges arrived on Monday and sold at prices ranging from $2.15 to $2.25 for sound stock.

Lemons are selling well at $2.50 to $2.75 and expected to go higher before the new year.

Cranberries are high and advancing. Stocks are very short in the States, where $13 per barrel is being realized today. It is expected by dealers that it is not unlikely $15 per barrel will be reached here.

Vegetables.

The arrivals of early vegetables from the south has livened up the trade somewhat in these lines. Supplies, however, are not large, though the demand is good. Cuban tomatoes are selling for $4 to $4.50. Boston cucumbers, $1.75 a dozen. Boston lettuce, $1. Potatoes are reported firm with prices ranging from 57½c to 65c. per bag of 90 lbs. Inquiries for potatoes are arriving from Western Canada and several shipments have also been made to United States points. California celery advanced 50c per crate over last week's quotation.

Green Fruits.

Business on the fruit market has been exceedingly active since our last issue. As the holiday draws nigh activity increases. Dealers seem to scarcely have time to give each recurring day its necessary attention. Several special lines have arrived for the Christmas trade from California, but as the prices are nominal quotations are not given. Among these are pomegranates, kumquats, strawberries and pears. The quality of these is exceptionally fine for this season and they are readily disposed of.

Green Fruit.

A car of prime ripe bananas arrived in from Limon, Central America, for the Oscar Brown Co., Limited, this week. This fruit is now selling at very low prices, the season of course having its effect, so many other varieties being in the market.

The Jap oranges received by steamship Empress of India have practically been absorbed. There will be another shipment received on Christmas Day, by the next Empress to arrive, and one more lot after that closes the brief season for this popular little fruit.

The first car of choice navels from California arrived this week. The quality is very fine, and the fruit is well matured for this season. Indications are that prices are not going to be very high on California oranges this year, despite the fact that with last year's enormous crop prices then were lower than ever before. This year's crop is not so large, but the fruit is very much better quality and smoother texture.

Pineapples are arriving regularly by every Australian steamer, the shipments coming from Honolulu. They sell at from $3.50 to $4.50. Malaga grapes and Cape Cod cranberries have moved well this week.

All apples selling so far are B. C. grown fruit. This week two cars of prime Coldstreams, from Lord Aberdeen's famous Okanagan ranch, arrived for the holiday trade.

Vegetables.

On December 21 when the Australian steamer Miowera arrives she will bring from Honolulu a consignment of ripe tomatoes and green cucumbers for this market. Last year a small experimental shipment was brought in, and this is likely to be but the first of several. The hot house tomatoes from Victoria which have been on the market in the coast cities have been selling well.

The potato market has been very quiet of late, nothing moving in the way of foreign shipments, and local demands being ordinary. Prices are about the same as last quotations.

POINTERS FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS

SUCCESS IS POWER.

"STRENGTH is success. Strength to be, strength to do, strength to love, strength to live. It is not happiness, it is not amusement, it is not content. These will come, but they are not the object."

That is Dr. Edward Everett Hale's definition of success. Success, he continues, is the real object in life. All the other definitions fail. When people say that men live to be happy, they do not express what they mean. A man's real motive should be the use of every power he has to the best he can achieve with it. And we shall gain a great deal in the management of life if we can keep this motive and this object in mind. "I mean to train my hand and my eye to the best they can do. I will make the best of my body." And so again, "I mean to train my mind for the best it can do, to reason, to remember, to plan." And that he may keep body and mind up to the mark in this way, a man resolves to keep his soul, which ought to be master of mind and body, to the very best. "Here am I," the man says. "The body and the mind are my two tools. They shall be the very best I can make them, and shall meekly obey me, who am their master."

In endeavoring to solve the great problem, it is well to keep Doctor Hale's wisdom in mind. Success is power. Deep in the human mind is the desire for power. All wish to attain to some measure of it. The soldier who fights a good battle and is victorious is powerful. The mechanic who is the master of his trade is powerful and is a success. Every man who has developed his faculties to the best of his possibilities must be, and is, successful. There is no need for any man to envy another because that other has achieved greater fame, made more money or stands more prominently before the public in a political capacity.

Every young man should determine to be practical—even poets can be that. Every young man should learn to concentrate. The better his education, the farther along life's highway he will get in the span of years allotted to him, be they few or many. The education is the foundation. He should know himself. He should study his capacity and his limitations. A man undersized cannot be a soldier, nor a man with a crippled leg a sprinter. So there are limitations to the range of mental capacity. Knowing himself, he should strive to utilize whatever ability he possesses to the utmost. Concentrate upon a purpose and stick to it in the face of all obstacles. Hold to the theory that every man has a right to succeed—to use all his powers to the best advantage. Happiness and content will be met with at many a turn along the way.

MAN'S CHIEF PERIL.

The chief peril to which man is exposed is that of profanation of what is holy, from which he is shielded by shutting him up in the circle of his senses and restricting him to the shallows of his reason. Within that circle, and in those shallows, he acquires what he believes is wisdom, pursues what he names ambitions, suffers what he fancies are pain and sorrow, wreaks what he intends for revenges, commits what he calls sins, indulges what he mistakes for love, and, in a word, lives what it is given him to imagine is human life. Yet in all that span of existence there is but a handful of hours when he truly lives the life that is his own and not a pretence, an evasion, or an error; and those few hours appear to him—save at the instant of their revelation — as hallucinations. Nevertheless they are the porticos and pillars, halls and gardens, sun and stars of this heaven; which he pragmatically and complacently puts away from him and turns himself to what seems to him his heaven, but is his hell. Truly, this is a pity and a loss!—Julian Hawthorne in the Century.

THE MAN WHO CHEATS HIS WORK

AN employer of thousands of men was asked what thing in all his large operations gave him the most concern. "The man who does a little less than is expected of him," is the reply. "He is the dangerous factor in all business. The absolute failure we readily discover and discharge, but the 'almost' escape detection for months and often for years, and they make our losses as well as our fears," and with a very serious smile he added, "The drip in business is worse than the leak."

Thousands of men fancy they are fulfilling their duty to their employers and to their tasks by keeping hours and performing just enough to hold on to their positions. They have an idea that to do more would be to give larger service than their compensation required. They object to what they believe would be extra values. "The old man shan't get more than he's paying for" is the vernacular.

Possibly it never strikes these trimmers that in cheating their work they are doing double damage; they are injuring their employers much, they are robbing themselves more; they are, in fact, losing everything in life that is worth while. They fare worse than if they did nothing at all, for time with all its precious values slips entirely from them and leaves no substance or satisfaction. Half doing soon brings undoing. It is the nine-tenths doing or the ninety-nine and one-hundredths doing that bleeds business and saps character.

THE NO TRAVELER TOWN.

I stood at my desk, at work so hard,
With headache wretched and nerves all jarred,

When up to my elbow, all spick and span
With grip in view steps a traveling man.

In my haste and anger I wished right there
That I lived in a town where no travelers were.

How much better for business, I said,
'twould be
If from you blame travelers the town was free.

My wish that night came true, it seemed,
As far o'er the line to a town I steamed.

The train pulled up from the town about
A mile and a half, and I there got out.

Away back somewhere a few years gone
Commercial travelers from here moved on.

The trains came in and no one to meet,
For ne'er called at this town did the travelers neat.

Two years went by and no business here
So the trains went round by a switch for fear

They'd wake the dead in this dead old town,
From which the travelers were all turned down.

At last the farmers quit coming in;
No new stories to make them grin.

The young ladies left, for no evening train,
Where travelers winked while they winked again.

Hotels moved out, then the merchants, too,
And none now left for church and pew.

And the last to leave was the old town clerk,
He was now out of money as well as work.

And thus read the notice: "Here rests a curse;
When the travelers left we grew worse and worse."

I waked from my dream to welcome all,
Yes, every traveler that should on me call.

For they do truly make all towns great
By keeping them posted on what's up-to-date.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

STOCK UP CAREFULLY.

In the handling of confectionery it is of the greatest importance to be absolutely sure of the quality of the various lines you offer your customers.

The tendency of the grocer is just to handle these goods without much regard to either distinctive feature or quality. No grocer can possibly expect to make his confectionery department the real success it should be unless he discriminates as to the goods he sells.

The way to establish reputation; and a reputation which will last and continue to attract trade, is to handle only superior goods. Better far be content with a very moderate profit and have the fullest confidence of your customers, than to serve them with what appears at the time to be an attractive article and afterwards for your customers to be seriously disappointed therein. To carry out this does not of necessity mean that you are purchasing the most expensive goods on the market. The grocer who will give the necessary attention to the markets of the many confections which are offered for sale, will discover that many of these lines are placed on the market by irreproachable wholesale firms who make a strong feature of giving the best possible quality, and rely almost exclusively for their profit on the cuteness of buying their raw material.

A well displayed show counter of fancy confectionery, which has been purchased by the grocer with the most absolute care and scrutiny, cannot fail to attract to his store a continual and increasing stream of trade. The younger members of the community, who are the great buyers of sweetmeats and confections, are, without question, keen to know a good thing when they see it and if they are once pleased will place that implicit confidence, peculiar to children, in the person who has treated them well.

A FEW USEFUL FORMULAS.

Fancy Prepared Mustard.

Twenty-five pounds dark mustard seed (Trieste seed is best), 10 pounds yellow mustard seed, 10 pounds yellow mustard bran, 5 pounds salt, 1 pound turmeric, 5 ounces ground coriander seed, 1½ ounces celery seed, 2 ounces ground cloves, 2 ounces ground cummen seed, 2 ounces ground nutmeg, 2 ounces cayenne pepper, 1 ounce powdered bay leaves, 1 ounce ground fennel seed, 10 ounces parsley herb (either fresh or out of brine), 2 ounces thyme, 5 ounces shallots or onions, 2½ ounces garlic, 30 gallons 40-grain vinegar, grind. If a very bright color is required add 2 ounces yellow mustard color.

Anchovy Mustard.

Anchovy mustard is made the same as fancy mustard, only add 8 pounds salt anchoves. Cut the anchoves up fine, add to the above mixture and use only two pounds salt instead of five pounds, as the salt in the anchoves will make up the required amount of salt.

Prepared Mustard.

Use 45 pounds dark mustard seed (Trieste is best), 12 pounds yellow mustard seed, 37 pounds dark mustard, 21 pounds yellow mustard bran, 12 pounds salt, 2½ pounds turmeric, 12 ounces ground coriander seed, 6 ounces ground celery seed, 6 ounces ground paradise seed, 6 ounces ground cloves, 6 ounces cinnamon, 2 ounces ground bay leaves, 2 ounces cummen seed, 7 ounces cayenne pepper, 2 ounces yellow mustard color, 90 gallons 40-grain vinegar. Grind.

Another Form of Prepared Mustard.

Use 30 pounds dark mustard seed (Bombay or California seed), 16 pounds yellow bran, 20 pounds dark mustard bran, 5 pounds turmeric, 1 pound ground coriander seed, 6 ounces cayenne pepper, 8 ounces ground paradise seed, 4 ounces ground celery seed, 4 ounces ground bay leaves, 1 pound cloves, 12 pounds salt, 42 gallons 90-grain vinegar, 50 gallons water, 30 pounds wheat flour, 2 ounces yellow mustard color; to 50 gallons water add 30 pounds wheat flour.

First make a thin batter of the flour by adding a small quantity of water at a time, stirring well; in this way the flour will not become lumpy; then add this batter to the remaining water; also add the yellow color and cook until it makes a heavy starch, then add this to the spices, vinegar, etc., and grind. If preferred 40 pounds of cornmeal may be substituted for the flour, but either should be cooked or the mustard will get dark after a time.

An Imitation Mustard.

This is an imitation mustard. Fifty-five pounds wheat flour, 4½ pounds turmeric, 12 pounds salt, 4 ounces cayenne pepper, 3 ounces artificial oil of mustard, 2 ounces oil cloves, 2 ounces oil cinnamon, 66 gallons water, 34 gallons 90-grain vinegar, 1 ounce yellow mustard, 3 ounces sugar color, 3 ounces preservative. Mix flour, turmeric, salt, and cayenne pepper, and then add enough of the water to make a thin paste, put this in kettle with the remaining water and vinegar, cook until the mixture has a body about as thick as heavy molasses, add the yellow color as soon as the mixture is thoroughly hot through. Take out of the kettle when cooked enough, stir frequently until this mixture has cooled to about 160 degrees F., then add the oils and mix well.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE SHOULD BE SAUCE FOR THE GANDER.

Editor Canadian Grocer: Sir:— In your issue of December 9 "Old Time Reader," in advocating the usefulness of the wholesale grocer, overlooks the fact that there are but two, possibly three, exclusively wholesale grocery firms in the whole Dominion, and not one of these is to be found in the city of Montreal. The departmental stores, whose importance "Old Time Reader" greatly magnifies, compete in the open; their prices, always high enough to leave a handsome margin of profit, are published broadcast.

The wholesaler, by professing to be what he is not—the friend and protector of the retailer—and under cover of the guild, competes in a most unfair way with the retail grocer. When Mr. Wholesaler is taken to task he will with the greatest sang froid excuse himself by saying that others do the same thing. To blame others for one's misdoings is a poor way to seek forgiveness. The wholesale houses in Montreal cater to the trade of small and large boarding houses, restaurants, beaneries, public or private institutions; whether the inmates number two persons or two hundred persons, it makes not a particle of difference; nine-tenths of the parish priests of the Province of Quebec, hundreds of families, all their employes, their relatives near and distant, their friends and the friends of their friends. The retail business done by some of the wholesale houses in this city is now so extensive as to require a special ledger for that department.

Some time ago the Grocers' Association of Montreal appointed a deputation to call on the wholesale houses for the purpose of getting them to agree not to supply consumers. To the disgust and astonishment of the delegation they were given to understand that under no consideration would they (the wholesale men) countenance any movement which would encroach on their right of buying and selling through whatever channels suited them best. In this contention they are perfectly right, but they are committing an act of conspiracy in attempting to prevent others from enjoying the same privileges.

For sixteen years the writer had dealings with an English firm, but this year his order was declined with the closing remark in their letter that they very much regretted the action of the guild.

It follows from these facts and the evidence before the Tariff Commission that the guild is nothing short of an organized conspiracy to restrain competition by preventing those outside the "charmed circle" from buying and selling in the best markets.

It is so decreed by the guild that any retail merchant who has the ability and financial means to do a large business and possibly in turn become a wholesale merchant, must limit his operations to a small retail business, and since he is compelled to buy from the wholesalers and then compete with them in selling to consumers and others, what then are his chances of success?

No wonder that during the past six months over fifty retail grocers in this city have failed, and knowing ones say that there are many more to follow.

It is to be hoped that all who have at heart the welfare of the retail trade will lend their assistance to the Government in putting an end to the disgraceful tactics of the guild.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION AT EDMONTON.

The Tariff Commission opened in Edmonton before a large meeting. With one exception, as presented by a deputation from Wetaskiwin, the general expression of opinion was plainly free trade. The Board of Trade of Edmonton and Strathcona, the Alberta Farmers' Association and the Canadian Society of Equity maintained a strong plea for reduction of the tariff, more particularly on lumber. The sitting was completed shortly after noon.

The Edmonton Board of Trade presented a memorandum to the Commission embodying the views of that organization. The general sentiment of the memorandum presented was strongly in favor of a general reduction in the tariff along all lines. To quote: "While it is admitted that customs duties are necessary for revenue purposes and that a certain amount of protection to Canadian industries may be advantageous, it is maintained that there is a limit beyond which a protective tariff cannot be carried without unduly and unfairly pressing upon the consumers for the benefit of the manufacturers. It is maintained that the limit has at least been reached, if not already passed."

Attention was called to the heavy freight charges in the west, and specific mention was made of fruits, cotton goods and lumber, on which an increase of duty is asked, requesting that these be rather reduced.

CANADIAN PRODUCE CORPORATION.

J. Burbidge, a director and creditor of the Canadian Produce Corporation, applied for a compulsory winding-up order on the ground that the company, formed to deal in Canadian produce, did no business, and had not done any for twelve months. Counsel opposing the petition said a voluntary resolution had been passed and no allegation had been made which entitled any creditor to a compulsory order. The petition was dismissed with costs.

Why Some Cigars Sell and Others Stay in the Box

If you keep a variety of cigars you will have noticed that there is always one box a little less full than the other boxes. No matter how many times you have ordered, or how differently you have arranged the display, the result is the same.

Mr. Grocer, that "difference in the box" is the Individuality, the "make sell" quality of cigars. That Individuality and 'make-sell" quality hinge on a certain kind of growth and a certain kind of manufacture.

PEBBLE and PHARAOH

Cigars "leave the box" quickly because they have that Individuality and "make-sell" quality that come as a result of the certain growth and certain manufacture.

The Pebble and Pharaoh Cigars are just as sure to be the "fewest in the box," when they have graced the case awhile, as they are sure to give "the curl of smoke that delights,' when the man who "knows" has bought them.

If you are interested in cigar-history, cigar-excellence, cigar-opportunity, you will not fail to write me about the Pebble and Pharaoh Cigars.

GROCERS' HOW, WHEN AND WHERE QUERIES WELCOMED

Grocers may order some goods without the "Reason Why" attitude, but when it comes to tobacco each grocer is out with, "How do you know I can sell this tobacco?" "When was the quality of the tobacco proven?" "Where am I to get continuous trade from?" We welcome such queries. We know that with the answers are sure and certain.

T. & B.

We know, first, that you can sell this tobacco, because other grocers, similarly placed, are selling it. Second, the quality of T. & B. was proven from the first, and the best evidence of this is the increased consumption. Third, with T. & B. in stock you will get continuous trade because T. & B. smckers are regular, "will-take-no-other," smokers.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

ARE YOU LOSING A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY?

It is at this season of the year and especially during the two weeks preceding the Christmas holidays that the grocer loses a lot of business through the absence of a cigar and pipe department in his store. That grocers generally lose a goodly sum throughout the year through neglect of this branch, has been established beyond a doubt by those up-to-date merchants who have installed a cigar, cut tobacco and cigarette show case, and pipe racks and cases.

There are many, in fact, the majority of women, whose husbands are users of the weed in some form or other, and as they do their shopping at this festive period would readily buy a handsome meerschaum or briar pipe, a box of cigars or other smoker's paraphernalia, preferring to do so in the grocery store to entering a tobacconist's, where men only usually "do congregate."

There are, of course, certain customers who from principle, prejudice or misinformation on the subject would object to this feature, but their number is small.

The question of the banefulness of tobacco is one with which the merchant has no concern. There are even people who consider the use of tea injurious, as is being demonstrated now by the opinions of experts in the columns of the New York Herald, but still tea will be sold right along.

The husband also would find the grocer's a pleasant place to drop in on his way home, for his favorite brand of cigars and tobacco, and he too at this time would prefer to buy a friend a box of 25s or 50s at the grocer's, or mayhap a nice pipe.

In speaking to a representative of one of the leading cigar manufacturers in the east last week The Grocer was told on asking if it was the traveler's opinion that the grocery trade were taking a more up-to-date view of the question of handling cigars, etc. :

"More? Why, my trade, particularly in Western and Central Ontario, with grocers, has quadrupled itself this year. I find that this grocery cigar trade is spoken of by my customers as one of the most profitable features of their business and one that requires less attention and shows more profit than in the putting up, weighing, delivering, etc., of the staple lines. With only ordinary, intelligent care, one man has disposed of over a thousand dollars worth of my goods alone, besides having bought a number of other well advertised and reliable lines. There isn't a salesman calling that doesn't buy one or a quarter's worth of cigars, even if it is palpably done as a friendly overture towards the grocer's trade."

This opinion is one worthy of reflection on the part of Grocer readers. The profit on cigars, tobacco and pipes is good, the stocks easily replenished and at small expense. Think it over and with the resolutions for improvement that you make next week, put in a small trial stock of cigars and watch your profits grow in 1906.

A CLAY PIPE DISPLAY.

While there are many stores in the big cities that hardly ever have a call for the common clay pipe, in the smaller towns and in the agricultural sections there are vast quantities of them sold annually, and dealers in such localities might find it worth while to occasionally put them in their show windows.

Common clay pipes can be arranged in a variety of effective forms. One of the commonest is to lay them out on a dark colored background in designs of stars, crescents, diamonds, four-leaf clovers, and anything else that the fancy of the window dresser may suggest and his ingenuity be equal to. In this way, a most attractive display is made, which will add materially to the other inducements of trade, and help swell the sales.

ADVANCE IN TOBACCO.

Tobacco prices have jumped up, and local manufacturers of cigars are considerably exercised over the outlook. The new crop of Sumatra and Havana is now on the market, and one manufacturer stated that the prices quoted are thirty per cent. higher than last year.

Short crop and fine quality are given as the reasons for the growers' higher demands. The matter is largely in their hands. Havana tobacco has no successful competitor as a filler, and Sumatra wrappers are in much the same position.

The increase in price comes out of the manufacturer entirely, they say. The price of standard cigars is not likely to change because of the fluctuation.

STRAINING AT GNATS AND SWALLOWING CAMELS.

Editor Grocer :— It is only a few weeks ago since we heard a howl up under the western mountain over a sugar combination which enables the combinsters to make a profit of 4 per cent., and now there is an echo down under the eastern mountain in the shape of an article in the Montreal Herald of December 1 portraying the iniquities of a canned goods combine. This article so grossly misrepresents the situation that in the interest of the canned goods business we feel constrained to ask the use of your columns to reply to it. Before going into the subject we would like to call to the attention of the editor of the Herald the fact that our two principal railroads, who between them take nearly one hundred million dollars yearly out of the public, have an agreed uniform rate to every competing station in the Dominion. Our insurance companies have an agreed rate among them to charge everybody exactly the same rate. Our banks have an agreed rate among them to allow depositors exactly the same rate of interest ; they also charge all borrowers about the same rate of interest. If these are not combines what are they ? We are not calling attention to them to find fault, but to show how these gentlemen of the press sometimes strain at gnats and swallow camels. In regard to a canned goods combine, we state there is no such thing in existence. While there is a stock company with headquarters under the western mountain, formed through the amalgamation of a number of the leading canners, no stretch of the imagination could call it a combine. While we are not in sympathy with their tortuous way of doing business, we know that with a dozen independent factories in the country it is not possible for them to make a combine in this business.

In this two column more or less sensational article in the Herald it states tomatoes could be bought in the United States last year for 60 to 70 cents, while in Canada they brought from $1.30 to $1.40 per dozen. Here is a misrepresentation to start with. The highest price charged by canners last year for this article was $1.15, 10 per cent. off, freight paid to any wholesale competing point in Ontario or to Montreal, in the province of Quebec. After all these deductions were made, including brokerage and cash discounts, it left about 94c a dozen for tomatoes f.o.b., instead of $1.30 to $1.40. Now in regard to the United States price ; it was 62½c f.o.b., at least this was the price we paid for 8,000 cases and we bought in the best market obtainable in that country. Now see how quickly the thing reverses itself. The pack of tomatoes in Canada this year has not netted the packers over 75c f.o.b., while to-day tomatoes are selling for $1 f.o.b. in the United States with plenty of people predicting dollar and a half tomatoes before Spring. If the gentleman who writes for the Herald on canned goods would remember that there is such a thing as nature, who quite frequently takes a notion to have a say in the price of these red-coated ducks as well as in other lines of canned goods, he could write more intelligently on the subject. We have stated that last year we imported 8,000 cases of tomatoes from the United States ; we also wish to state that it is only a few years back since we exported several thousand cases to the United States under exactly the same tariff conditions that prevail at present between the two countries. At the time of this latter transaction tomatoes were selling in Canada for 65c, while in the United States they brought $1.50. Last year as previously stated tomatoes were bringing 94c f.o.b. in Canada, while in the United States 62½c would buy them. This proves, as we said before, that when nature takes a hand in the game these redcoats will walk across the boundary in either direction under tariffs that in both countries are intended to be prohibitive and in normal years are so. This gentleman in the Herald intimates that the consumer is being squeezed in the prices charged for canned goods and that on account of the tariff protecting the canners high prices are being charged. Never was an assertion more easily refuted. The only country from which canned goods could be imported is the United States. To lay down tomatoes from there in Toronto at present American prices would cost $1.55 per dozen, while they are netting the Canadian packer 75c f.o.b. To lay down peas from the United States in Toronto would cost say for Early June $1.15, while Canadian peas of the same grade net the Canadian packers 55c. In comparing corn it is necessary to take New York state corn, which is about the same in quality as our finest standard goods. This New York state corn would cost delivered in Toronto $1.10, while Canadian corn equal in quality is netting the packer 70c.

If there is one line of goods more than another that shows the benefit to the whole community for the liberal mantle of protection that has been thrown around it, it is the canned goods industry. Only a few years ago, the writer can remember, before there were any Canadian packers, a can of tomatoes cost the Canadian consumer 25c, and other goods in proportion. With about fifty canneries now in operation in this country, packing what is probably the highest class of canned goods in the world, which are being sold to the consumers at moderate prices, we believe it would be a crime to disturb this condition of affairs by experimental changes in the tariff. It would be not only a crime to the canners, but to the farmers, consumers and work people. As an illustration, we ourselves paid out to the farmers this year $45,000 for produce, while to work people we paid $26,000 in wages.

As for the consumers, under a reduced tariff we would simply get the sweepings of the American canning factories. It is acknowledged by United States trade publications that there are hundreds of thousands of cases of tomatoes packed in their country every year in which water is added to cheapen the product. Of corn there are millions of cases packed in the United States annually, little better than our common field corn. In a publication published in the United States, the Baltimore Trade, the highest authority in the United States on canned goods, dated December 15, they designate it hog feed. Everybody knows that under a low tariff these are the classes of goods that would enter Canada to compete with and ruin the trade of the high class goods packed in this country, while we would have no chance to sell goods in their country as their tariff is prohibitory. In regard to the prices we have given you in the United States, for verification you can take the Canner and Dried Fruit Packer of Chicago and the Baltimore Trade, both of which publications, we believe, are on your exchange list.

Yours truly,
BLOOMFIELD PACKING CO.
Bloomfield, December 18, 1905.

CANADIAN TEA TRAVELERS.

SELLING tea, that is, selling tea exclusively and not in connection with the sale of general groceries, is no sinecure, but selling package teas and selling them successfully is still less of a holiday jaunt. There are a multitude of brands of package teas now on the market and salesmen by the score are expatiating on the quality of their special brands in all parts of Canada, and the end is not yet. Of the many salesmen who have entered this special field there are very few better known tea travelers than the subject of this sketch, Mr. Rupert Prat, Toronto, who represents Mr. T. H. Estabrooks, of Red Rose tea fame, St. John, N.B.

Mr. Rupert Prat.

Mr. Prat hails from the Maritime Provinces, commencing his career of tea salesman with Mr. Estabrooks in May, 1896. He represented his firm in New Brunswick for several years, working up not only a good business for his principal but a reputation for himself as a salesman of undoubted ability. "An honorable man and thorough gentleman" is the way his employer expressed himself to The Grocer, "and a man of whose type any firm may be proud."

On the opening of the Toronto branch of Red Rose tea, Mr. Prat was delegated to look after the new territory. Mr. Prat during the time he has been a resident of Toronto has covered the territory west and north of the city, and most successfully has he made his work show. Red Rose tea is his shibboleth, and for him it is a faith that moves mountains, and a faith that he has the true salesman's enthusiasm to implant in others. That he has the confidence of his customers his increasing sales amply testify, and with his unbounded confidence in the quality of his goods the future can only be bright for Mr. Prat.

WINDOW AND INTERIOR DISPLAYS

CHRISTMAS WINDOW DISPLAY COMPETITION.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of good window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays of Christmas goods and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of :

First Prize $5.00

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on January 15, 1906, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the pictures, although, of course, all pictures, in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition." Care should be taken to avoid reflection in the photograph. The best photos are often taken at night.

A WINDOW DISPLAY COMPETITION.

A FEW weeks ago the Standard Soap Co., of Calgary, offered a prize of $20 in gold to the store clerk who would dress the best window with Golden West soap, Weir's Pine Tar, Mellifoam Castile, etc., all of which are made by this Calgary soap firm.

The window illustrated in this issue was the one dressed by Mr. Green, of the firm of Wood & Green, of Calgary.

Mr. Stephens, of the Hudson's Bay Co., was the winner of the prize.

It was soap Saturday. Soap was in the air. Nearly every grocery store in Calgary had its show window filled with soap. Every window was really worthy of a prize, but as only one prize was given the three judges, after viewing the different displays, consulted together for over an hour, deciding who should receive the cash. The display of the Hudson's Bay Co. was truly original, and was a perfect reproduction of a blue sitting room, constructed completely of Golden West soap, in cartons for the walls, and carpeted with cakes of Golden West, with a pretty border of Weir's Pine Tar. A pretty mantel and fireplace were also built of soap, beautiful in design, with real fire and coals in the grate, and with a tiled floor of Mellifoam soap, in front of which a wax effigy of a lady was comfortably rocking, with knitting in her lap, representing the happy housewife, who informed the admiring crowds what she thought of Golden West soap. This simple picture was much admired, several Montreal and Winnipeg visitors remarking that it was the best dressed window they had ever seen.

The design in Wood & Green's window was certainly the work of a genius in artistic dressing. It was a miniature design of a suspension bridge of soap, with a train of cars crossing the structure. The whole was built of Golden West soap, and did great credit to the artist who so carefully carried out the plan.

J. T. Macdonald had the best window, considered from an advertising point of view, and also merited recognition. The design consisted of two fair-haired little girls washing and hanging out their clothes on the line. It pleased both children and adults alike.

The window of the Victoria Grocery Company presented a very pleasing appearance. The centrepiece was an accurately constructed lighthouse, labelled "Golden West Safety Lighthouse," and was surmounted by a powerful electric light, the whole making a perfect sea picture.

Brown & Knight were right in the swim for the prize, their window being generally admired. A large sailing vessel, "The Golden West," was shown, built of Golden West soap, carrying a cargo of Weir's Pine Tar, with sails made of Mellifoam soap, and a lighthouse in the distance with foam-crested waves dashing against the rocks.

The Calgary Milling Company, Alfred Newham, the Co-Operative Grocery Supply Company, and Pitman's stores all had very cunningly designed windows, all a tribute to that domestic article, good soap.

IMPORTANCE OF SHOW WINDOWS.

The great advantage of a good window display is becoming more and more apparent, and grocers are generally becoming more interested in the subject.

The show window is without question the retail merchant's first important advertisement. Other means of advertising may bring customers to the store, but when there the first impression is obtained by the appearance of the show window, and the effect produced will be the measure of the customer's estimation of that store.

Grocers have been quick to observe this and in consequence a great improvement is manifest, but there is much still to learn, and nothing can be more conducive than an interchange of ideas. With this in view we are opening up our pages once again for competition. Those grocers, therefore, who are giving special care to their window display this season, have an excellent opportunity to get full credit for their labors and at the same time give an object lesson to their brother grocers.

One of the Displays in the Calgary Window Competition.

IN THE WRONG WAY.

Two Irishmen were crossing a bog when one of them fell into a mudhole. His companion, running to a nearby farmhouse, asked the loan of a spade. "What do you want it for ?" asked the farmer. "Sure, Mike is stuck in the bog and I want to dig him out," was the answer. "How far in is he sunk ?" questioned the farmer. "Up to his ankles." "Begorra, then he can easy walk out." "Begorra, he can't," exclaimed Pat, "he's in wrong end up."

CEYLON Tea Talks

No. 5

The dietetic value of Ceylon Tea as a beverage is attributable to the well-balanced proportions of its constituent parts.

Another ingredient which is a necessary constituent of all Teas is "Tannin." It is found in some of the older known teas to the large extent of 20 to 30 per cent. In small quantities, in conjunction with well proportioned quantities of "The Essential Oil," and "The Alkaloid Theine" it has a distinctly beneficial tonic effect.

Ceylon Tea contains the minimum of Tannin; analysis has demonstrated it to be only about 10 per cent. Just sufficient to give the necessary vim.

Good Resolutions for 1906

To try and make better profits.

To stop price-cutting — which generally does no one any good, and injures the starter.

To let the other fellow live as well as ourselves.

To talk quality ; sell quality.

To not refuse drafts for small errors. To remember if one trusts us for hundreds of dollars surely we can trust him for a few cents.

To do all the business we can in a fair and square way, but want to see our neighbor do well too.

To add the cost of doing business to the price of goods purchased, adding a fair profit to this cost.

To pay promptly when bills are due. When unable to, say so, and arrange for payment of same.

To remember 10 days means 10 days; 30 days, 30 days.

To do away with all combines in our trade.

What is the Meaning of "Well-Balanced" Flour?

A perfectly "balanced" flour is one which contains the greatest amount of nutriment in its most easily digestible form. No single variety of wheat will produce "well-balanced" flour. It requires the careful selection of different kinds.

The makers of ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR have more than a hundred elevators, scattered throughout the greatest wheat-growing country in the world, which enables them to secure the very pick of the wheat that will yield perfectly balanced flour.

The kind of flour that produces the best, the largest and the strongest loaf.

The loaf which contains the greatest amount of bone, muscle and brain-making protein and the lowest percentage of waste.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD makes bread which reduces the labor of digestion, and gives greatest nutrition for least stomach effort.

It's the "balance" in flour that makes bread easier to digest and gives it many other qualities which are usually attributed to other causes.

DOMINION COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' ANNUAL BANQUET AT MONTREAL

THE annual banquet of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association was held at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, Thursday evening, December 21. The event is one to which every traveler looks forward with pleasurable anticipation and it is only distance from the festivities and the fact of the event being always held near Christmas that prevents the majority of members from attending. As it was, there were exactly 260 members and guests seated around the well laden and flower-decked tables in the beautiful banqueting hall of the Windsor. Travelers gathered around any festive board are noted for having the proverbial "best time" and Thursday's banquet was no exception to the rule.

Mr. Fred. L. Cains,
President of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

Mr. Fred L. Cains, the newly elected president, occupied the chair. With him were the principal guests and speakers of the evening, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. H. R. Emmerson, Minister of Railways; Mr. R. L. Borden, M.P., the Conservative leader for the Dominion, and Mr. F. D. Monk, M.P.

The menu was in the Windsor's best and this statement suffices to say that with the excellent table service no protests or cancelled orders were noted.

After the dinner had been served President Cains read a telegram from the Commercial Travelers' Association at Halifax, expressing their best wishes for Canada's prosperity and wishing a happy New Year to the Montreal members. He also read letters of regret owing to their inability to attend from the Governor-General, Earl Grey; Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hons. W. S. Fielding, C. Fitzpatrick and W. Paterson; Messrs. Hays, Shaughnessy, Morse, His Worship Mayor Laporte and Hon. J. D. Rolland.

He also made a few remarks to the effect that their financial showing for the year was very good; they had added over $12,000 to their capital. In connection with the hospital funds of the association he said one of the members of the association had promised to give $1,000, if the other members would subscribe $2,000. This would enable them to provide a cot in the Notre Dame and General Hospitals for the benefit of commercial travelers, and he hoped the necessary funds would be forthcoming. The gathering arose while the chairman read off the names of forty-nine members who had died during the year.

Mr. Cains in concluding called upon the vice-president, Mr. E. D. Marceau, to propose the first toast, that of "The Government of Canada," coupled with the names of Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. H. R. Emerson, Minister of Railways. Mr. Marceau on rising was received with loud applause.

Mr. Marceau said: "Commercial travelers are not politicians, but business men who would judge the Government from a business standpoint." They were not ready to give credit to the Government for every good thing that had come to the country since it has come into power, but they were willing to give credit where credit is due. He spoke of the great resources of the country and her marked progress in the last few years, and stated the increased immigration to this country was opening up acres and acres of land to the best class of settlers from the south of our country and from Europe, who would not come here unless suited with a government and institutions which are better than those outside of Canada. "We must honor and commend our Government for the good it has done, and in honoring it we are honoring our great and broad Dominion."

Mr. E. D. Marceau,
Vice-President of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

Mr. Marceau's remarks were received with plaudits of commendation.

Hon. Sydney Fisher was received with loud applause. He thanked the association on behalf of the Government for the courtesy extended to him in the invitation to attend the banquet, and regretted that his esteemed chief, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, was not present to respond on behalf of the Government. "The Premier," he said, "requested me to express to you his regrets and at the same time to extend his appreciation of the honor and courtesy paid him by the association in asking him to be present on this occasion. You have drunk to the health of the Government, and I am glad to be able to tell you that the Government is in strong and good health, vigorous health, from the Premier to the newest comer into the ministry, the Hon. the Postmaster-General. I sometimes wonder how we keep our health under the onerous responsibilities, not only of managing the great affairs of this Dominion, but responding to the kindness and courtesy of such associations as yours. I feel almost as one of the traveling guild myself, as amongst the responsibilities of my department is that of advertising the riches of Canada so that it may be known to all the nations of the earth what she can do, and what she can produce. I recently paid a visit to the old land where there are great markets for our agricultural products, and when speaking to a member of the Chamber of Commerce of one of the cities over there about the greatness of Canada, he said, 'Don't you think what you are doing smacks somewhat of advertising?' I said, 'My friend, it not only smacks of advertising, it is advertising.' Yes, gentlemen, I am proud of my country, and want to have her wares known throughout the world, and one of the most pleasant features of my departmental work is the fact that a recognition has come, even though we are competing against all the other markets of the world."

Mr. R. C. Wilkins,
Treasurer of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

The Minister spoke of the great good accruing to Canada through the exhibitions of Canadian goods on the continent, and stated that the exhibition lately given at Liege was the first independent exhibit Canada had made on the continent of Europe. People hardly knew what Canada was; now their minds are full of Canada, its products and opportunities.

The Minister proceeded to say that the increase in the revenue of Canada was a sign that the people were prosperous and denoted business success in the country. He expressed the wish that he would have the opportunity of addressing the association again as it was only through the closest intercourse with the people of the country that the Government could find out its needs and be in a position to carry out the wishes and desires of the people.

C. C. Ballantyne,
President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Minister of Railways.

The Hon. H. R. Emmerson, Minister of Railways and Canals, also replied to this toast. He said he was going to state very squarely that he was not going to speak from a Government standpoint, but from the standpoint of a man, and if they would listen he believed they would conclude that there were two things they had in common, one the expansion of the great Dominion, and the other the Intercolonial Railway. The Minister was very emphatic in his belief that he was going to make the I. C. R. pay. He stated that recently he had made a trip through the western country and he believed there was no other country on the globe like our own. "Winnipeg is the gateway of an empire —Edmonton is the gateway of the Orient." The Minister dwelt on the fact that it was the I.C.R. that opened up the markets of the Maritime Provinces to the rest of Canada; before the advent of this line the Americans had control of that market, but to-day it was entirely different. "There is a great deal being said about the I.C.R.," said he, "but I am going to keep it up to the standard—I am going to make it pay. We are giving a good service and will continue that service, and our rates are low."

After Mr. Munday sang "Le Canada," the toast of "The Parliament of Canada" was proposed by Mr. R. C. Wilkins, treasurer, who coupled the names of Messrs. R. L. Borden, leader of the Opposition, and Mr. F. D. Monk.

"The toast I have the honor to propose, 'The Parliament of Canada,'" said Mr. Wilkins, "is an important one, and one which is always pleasant to the commercial travelers, as we are always delighted to have about our festive board some of the eminent parliamentarians of Canada, and I have the honor this evening of coupling my toast with the names of two distinguished Members of Parliament and old time friends, Mr. R. L. Borden and Mr. F. D. Monk.

"As has often been said, there is great similarity between the Member of Parliament and the commercial traveler. To be successful they both must keep themselves constantly and favorably before their constituents. They both do a great similarity between the Member of of Parliament has the advantage over the commercial traveler, inasmuch as he generally travels on a pass, while we always have to put up the bright coin.

"About this season also the commercial traveler approaches the head of the house looking for an increased indemnity, but I assure you it is not always he meets with such a ready and generous response as the Members of Parliament did but a short time ago.

"There are 16,000 commercial travelers in Canada, and did it ever occur to the Members of Parliament that owing to the peculiar nature of their avocation probably 50 per cent. of the commercial travelers were disfranchised at every election? Would it not be possible to introduce legislation whereby the commercial traveler could in some way register his vote although absent from the constituency in which he has a right to vote? Gentlemen, I commend this to your serious consideration.

"Another point, sir, which I believe the majority of thinking men in Canada are to-day agreed upon, is that the time has arrived when the Parliament of Canada should unfurl the broad banner of Imperial Britain, and utter in no uncertain manner its belief in the British Empire, its willingness to take an important part in the furtherance of the great Imperial idea, in shaping the destinies of this wonderful Empire, in which may be grown and made everything that man requires to eat, drink, wear and admire. That it may be possible for the Canadian commercial travelers to do business all over the greatest department store the world has ever known—the British Empire unlimited.

"The Parliament of Canada should put a quietus on these men in the old land who are trying to make the people believe that we are Imperialists only because we want a preference in their market.

"We are Britons of a broader type. We claim by right of heritage equal citizenship in Canada, South Africa, Australia, or within the sound of Bow bells in London, and we are anxious to see the Empire flourish and grow stronger in every part.

"Sir, if wise statesmen welded together the scattered provinces and territories of this Dominion into one compact confederation, who shall say that Canada has not now statesmen who can grapple with this greater question of a greater Britain? Each sister state self-governing at home, and each with a voice in the Imperial Council of the Empire, this Empire that acknowledges one sovereign and one flag, the flag that flies in perpetual daylight, the sun-kissed banner of Britain."

Mr. Borden, who was in a particularly happy vein, never appeared to better advantage or made a better impression on an audience than he did on the travelers. He was roundly cheered again and again. "I am sure," he began, "I cannot but express to you my very sincere thanks for the most cordial manner in which you have received the toast coupled with the name of my colleague, Mr. Monk, and myself. I will not enter into all the subjects which have been dealt with here to-night, but I might be permitted to say this, that I feel so far as the increased indemnity is concerned the country should feel grateful that the number of Members of Parliament does not equal that of the commercial travelers.

"Through a singular perversity on the part of the public my friend Mr. Monk and I are not replying to the previous toast; that is our misfortune, not our fault. I cannot say that the Parliament is constituted exactly as I would like it under present conditions, but (and I do not want to hurt the feelings of my Government friends to my right) I have strong hopes of a very great transformation at the very first opportunity. I would like, however, to make the suggestion that the Parliament of Canada is now and will be pretty much what the people of Canada make it. There are many critics of Parliament, some who hold that a great deal of time is lost and wasted, but as long as human nature is what it is we will have a little waste of time even in Parliament. I would like to say further that we have

With our forty years study and development of the stove polish business it is natural that we should have special facilities for the manufacture of our line of goods not possessed by any other stove polish manufacturers. in Canada a country of enormous extent, tremendous possibilities, a country of enormous areas separated sometimes by more than distance; every creed and every nationality are represented in our Parliament, but I will venture to claim for this Parliament and for those which have preceded it that on the whole, when subjects which might very easily excite the passions of men come up to be discussed in these Parliaments the discussion has been conducted in most part in a manner to do credit not only to the country, but to the people of this country who are represented by that Parliament.

Canada's Prosperity.

"No one welcomes the great development of this country more than we do; we rejoice in it, and trust that the development will at all times continue in future even in a greater measure than at the present moment. I spoke to you a moment ago of the divergence of race and creed; even here to-night have these differences melted away through association one with another. The commercial traveler is a typical citizen of Canada in this regard; he goes through the country making himself known to people of every religion and nationality and if we were all able to obtain this relationship throughout the country there would not be so many differences as those which sometimes arise in Canada. As an English-speaking citizen of this country I am proud to join in the beautiful songs, some of which we have heard to-night, and among them, 'O Canada, mon pays.' And I say that any man in Canada, English-speaking though he may be, who does not feel at the sound of these songs a fervor with which to sing, has not the true spirit of the country, and I hope on this and other occasions to listen to those of my fellow citizens, whose mother tongue is not mine, who will rise and join with us in singing those songs dear to every British heart, 'God Save the King' and 'Rule Britannia.'

"While I do not know that we have at the present time in the Parliament of Canada any gentleman who may be regarded as a representative of your association, I would welcome the day when there will be, that he might give us that width of view and knowledge of the country which he would have. The suggestion of Mr. Wilkins in regard to the voting of commercial travelers at places other than their own constituencies is one which affords very serious thought for reflection. I need not say I thank you and wish you more and more prosperity in the ranks of your association."

That Mr. Monk is popular goes without saying, but he seems to be particularly a favorite of the knights of the grip. His fine physique, grand, sonorous voice and his eloquence all combine to make him a favorite with all audiences and his reception was a most flattering one. Mr. Monk thanked the association for their courtesy in extending him an invitation to be present on this occasion, and referring to Hon. Mr. Fisher's statement that Government was in good health, proceeded: "I may say with regard to myself, and possibly I am also echoing the feelings of my colleague, Mr. Borden, that although in fair average health we are continuously told by our physicians that a change is absolutely necessary. Nearly ten years ago I first attended the commercial travelers' banquet, and have been an attendant ever since, when the opportunity afforded. During that long decade I have learned to what extent we who are in public life are indebted to the commercial travelers, who are the source of the widest and most useful information. I may say that the qualities which distinguish the commercial traveler are no doubt due in part to the life he leads; no doubt the information he possesses of the resources of the country and its wants and needs is due in a large part to the career he has adopted, and is also due to his ability, his true devotion to his country and his real, genuine disinterested patriotism. We should all do our utmost to see this young country prosper, advance and take its place under the British flag among the concert of nations, the true place to which it belongs among the nations of the earth.

"We have a great ambition; we feel, we realize that we are part and parcel of a mighty Empire, and that this not only sheds great glory on Britain, but imposes a great duty on us, and we wish to work between every part and fragment of that Empire. We should also have a mutual preference in every part of the world where floats the British flag.

"We should also strive with all our energy to increase our relations with foreign countries throughout the world. Our friend, the Minister of Agriculture, has done much for us in that way. Before concluding, let me say this, that we in the Province of Quebec realize, and no part of the community more fully realizes, the importance of the great Empire to which we belong than the French-Canadian citizens. Under that flag they have found liberty of every sort—they have found democracy in its truest and best form and they will be loath at any time to forego the great advantages which go with British citizenship. The British Empire is not a dead letter but a great living organization. There may be a divergence of opinion as to what form any future empire may take, but we must realize that the greater dependencies of Britain are sister provinces, and they have, all of them, the desire that British unity should be maintained and for the peace and prosperity of the world that great Empire should develop in the future as it has in the past."

Mr. Monk, being called on to speak in French, addressed the audience in that tongue, practically covering the same ground as in the previous speech.

Mr. J. S. N. Dougall, the retiring president, then proposed the toast of "Trade and Commerce," to which Mr. C. C. Ballantyne, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and Mr. C. H. Catelli, vice-president Chambre de Commerce, replied.

Mr. Ballantyne in replying laid great stress upon the value of the commercial traveler as a factor in the development of the country's business. In speaking of the opportunities for advancement of men of the road he stated that it is largely from the ranks of travelers that modern up-to-date business houses draw their heads of departments. "There is no one so able to judge the requirements of the country trade and the people generally as the commercial traveler, so able to judge character, and so well posted on the financial affairs and standing of merchants." Mr. Ballantyne spoke also of the great development of the manufacturing interests of the country and attributed a good deal of the success of same to the work of commercial men. "If it had not been for the push, intelligence and energy of the travelers it would not have been possible to form the great association of which I have the honor to be president, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association." He referred also to the great future before the country in the greater development of its manufacturing interests.

Mr. C. H. Catelli replied briefly on behalf of the Chambre de Commerce, regretting the absence through indisposition of the president, Mr. H. A. A. Brault.

All the good things that have ever been said about MacLaren's Imperial Cheese—and that means everything that has been said—may be summed up in this one little expression—

"Just the Cheese"

MacLaren's Imperial Cheese

is remarkable for other reasons than its purity and delightful individuality of flavor; it contains three times the nutriment of ordinary cheese, which in turn is twice as nutritious as meat—taking weight for weight. This cheese combined with bread contains everything that the human body requires in the way of food to keep it in health and strength.

Words fail to tell you how good it is—the only way to know is to try it.

Mr. E. D. Marceau as an after dinner speaker left nothing to be desired. His proposal of the first toast of the evening was a finished piece of well pointed suggestions to the powers.

Mr. W. J. Eagan has a love for the press and his very kind and appreciative words were well chosen and delivered with dignity and emphasis.

The boys at Bois' table were well looked after. No wonder the head of the table had to reply to "The Ladies" — he's popular.

No one has more friends than J. W. Rosseau. He has the physique, the geniality and the "savoir faire" of the genuine traveler. Besides, he's a hustler.

Mr. Monk is popular with the French-Canadian travelers. How they did call for him to "parlez en Francais" — and how he did "parlez" ! It's all the same to Mr. Monk—eloquent in both languages.

The Rolland Paper Co.'s little booklet and card of pens was a happy souvenir, as was the usual supply of cigarettes donated by the American Tobacco Co., Limited.

Among the guests at the leading table were Mr. L. O. Demers, head of Demers, Fletcher & Cie., Montreal, who represented the wholesale grocery interests. Himself an old traveler, he is always happy with "the boys."

The St. Louis Quartette are a well balanced lot of artists—but why under heaven do quartettes, as well as soloists, always select ponderous and wearying songs for festive occasions ? Why, oh why ?

A splendid hit was made by Mr. R. C. Wilkins in asking the Ministers present to consider ways and means by which the 16,000 travelers (50 per cent. of whom were always away at election time) could exercise their franchise. It was observed by one of the members that the subject was worthy of consideration. Will it be thought of again ?

BOARD OF TRADE MEETINGS.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

At the annual meeting of the board of trade, H. B. Schofield was re-elected president, and T. H. Estabrooks was elected vice-president. A number of timely commercial topics were discussed, and reports were submitted.

The report of the council of the board gave a board membership of 194, seven members having been added during the year, and six resigned. The board lamented the death of three prominent members, C. F. Kinnear, John McMillan and W. H. Murray.

The report of E. T. P. Shewen, resident engineer at the extension of the breakwater, was included in the council's report, but was not read. The engineer told of the work done on the breakwater.

The financial statement showed the receipts to be $2,073.72, expenditures $1,949.86, and balance on hand $1,328.37.

The election of president and vice-president then took place, as noted. The members of the council elected were Messrs. D. J. McLaughlin, W. M. Jarvis, J. A. Likely, John Sealy, G. F. Fisher, W. H. Thorne, W. S. Fisher, S. Schofield, J. Hunter White, and W. Frank Hatheway.

President Schofield then delivered his annual report as follows:

The past year has been a very active one in board of trade circles and you all must be gratified to know that some at least of our united efforts have been brought to a practical and successful issue.

In the early part of the year the subsidy committee with the council made determined efforts to improve the services rendered by subsidized steamship lines. I hope the same enterprise will be exhibited this year, for we should strive for the very best services that can be obtained for subsidies offered.

Several delegations have been sent to Ottawa. One acting conjointly with the common council, for the purpose of obtaining aid from the Government for dredging the site of the new wharf and the approach thereto, has been rewarded by finding that the work is now progressing satisfactorily.

Another, sent from this board alone, for the purpose of meeting Messrs. Pickford & Black's contention that St. John should be dropped as a "port of call" for the West India boats, succeeded in obtaining a renewal of the service for one year on the old terms.

The Transportation Commission and the Grand Trunk Pacific Co. have both visited our city during the year and were greeted with well attended meetings and our claims have been clearly and earnestly stated to them. It is to be hoped that the Transportation Commission will succeed in persuading the Federal Government to adopt the policy of "Free Canadian Ports" for the general transportation interests of the country. The hindrance to and congestion of trade, which at present generally obtains for several seasons while arrangements are being made for providing new facilities, is greatly to be deplored and a definite policy of supplying all dredging, wharves, warehouses, etc., as fast as they are required would seem to be only possible if the Federal Government will take control of the facilities at the various ports.

It is pleasing to note that the council has taken steps to determine definitely whether cheap power can be developed at the Falls. The incoming council should be urged to use every effort during the coming vear to extend this idea and bring it to some practical use.

The council has promptly appointed a vigorous committee for the purpose of interesting new industries, in our claim to be one of the cheapest manufacturing centres in the Dominion, by reason of our open port the year round, giving easy access to the markets of the world for importing raw materials and exporting the products and manufactured goods of the country.

The committee on education, appointed at the last annual meeting, have been doing good work during the year, and are looking forward with great hopefulness to the introduction by the school trustees, of manual training and domestic science into our schools at an early date.

On the whole, we can, as a commercial centre, be said to have prospered during the past year. It is true, our great staple industry, lumber, has met with more or less disaster, but we hear rumors of a large business at Sand Point for the coming Winter, and we must not forget that between $250,000 and $300,000 is disbursed by the steamers that come here. This is of great value and is increasing.

Gentlemen, I would say, I believe firmly that, as a community, about all we need is more enthusiasm and that faith which leads to investment in home industries, more support for this board of trade and a greater willingness to work for the community at large, when in a short time we can increase the wealth and importance of this already important, all the year round, Canadian port.

In conclusion I take this opportunity of thanking the members of the council for the warm support they have rendered me as their president, all of which has made the work pleasant and congenial; and I also desire to express my appreciation of the untiring efforts of the secretary to further the interests of the board in every way in his power; and, finally the members of the press should be thanked for the interest they always take in board of trade matters.

There was no change in the board of arbitration.

new industries, whether of a competitive nature or not, was discussed.

R. B. Emerson said the question of granting exemption to new manufactures was a very important one. He moved that a special meeting be called in order to fully discuss the matter. This was seconded by Mr. Likely and carried.

The Adjourned Meeting.

The manufacturers and business men of St. John who gathered in the board of trade rooms on the 12th inst. to consider the advisability of recommending that exemption from taxes for a period of 10 years be granted to any new industries which can be induced to locate here, were unanimous in deciding to recommend such exemption, and passed a resolution to that effect.

The suggestion of President Schofield that the discussion might properly be extended to include the consideration of any other means by which the industries might be added to was acted upon, and the advantages that St. John offers as a manufacturing centre were dwelt upon by the several speakers. All were of the opinion that a strong effort should be made to present the claims of St. John in an attractive and forcible way before the promoters of new concerns who were looking about for a location.

After calling the meeting to order President Schofield read the resolution which would be submitted to the meeting, and said he would like to see the discussion extended to include the question of interesting new industries.

ST. THOMAS, ONT.

A meeting of the reorganized board of trade was held in the council chamber the other night. There was a good attendance. The meeting was presided over by the chairman, Mr. W. H. Murch. Considerable business was disposed of.

The council of the board reported recommending to the board the formation of committes to be called the committee on manufactures, the railway committee, the committee on publicity and printing, and the committee on finance. The report also defined the duties of the various committees. It was adopted and another committee to be called the pulbic utility and local improvement committee was ordered to be formed, a committee of the council to name the duties. This new committee will be composed of Bruce Davis, W. D. Boyce, Dr. Bennett, Dr. Silcox and W. E. Idsardi.

WE GOT ONE, TOO.

"Referring to article on page 23 of your issue of December 15 which is headed 'Did you get one, too?' may say that some time ago we received a similar letter from an even more enterprising Spaniard than the one you make reference to. The penmanship in the letter we got was first class and letter was written in the very best French, without any bad breaks except that he claimed to have met the president of this company years ago in Switzerland.

"His scheme was a more elaborate one and his story more plausible than the one our Montreal friends heard from who wanted assistance 'for to help to rise the trunk.' You ask 'Now what's the game?' To us that is, as the boys say, 'dead easy.'

"In Europe there is a larger percentage of tired people than in America, whose aim is, apparently, to live without working, and the particular species of game referred to is an old one. The enterprising (?) party who works it sends out large quantities of these letters hoping to catch one 'easy mark' in possibly 500, and not only catching the sucker but landing him (or rather his money) as well. The scheme is such a palpable fake that it is indeed surprising that anyone can be taken in by it. The correct plan to follow is immediately on receipt of the letter to forward it to the police authorities in Madrid or the city where 'the old servant' is supposed to reside, and we believe there have been instances where the schemer has been punished.

"A few months ago after years of work on the part of the authorities in some European city the headquarters of this game was located and it was discovered that the letters emanated from a regularly organized and systematized business where a large office force was required to handle the mail matter. The books which were seized showed the schemers had secured victims in almost every country in the world. This can only be accounted for by the old saying, 'There is one born every minute,' or words to that effect.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

It is a complete surprise to many in the cheese trade to find the market continuing in activity even at the holiday season, when retailers are busy in their shops and do not, as a rule, go out buying new supplies, and importers and wholesalers don't care to send orders, as they are preparing to close their books and take stock on the last day of December. But for some reason or other our market has not only maintained the firm tone, but orders for more goods at steadily advancing prices are received by cable daily.

Shipments of cheese have been quite heavy of late. Large quantities of cheese held here in storage for British account were ordered to be shipped and new orders kept coming forward, so that our stocks will show a considerable decrease and we will undoubtedly be entirely cleared of stocks much earlier than usual. This suits our merchants very well as they will very soon prepare themselves for their annual trip across the ocean, and as present prices show a very good margin of profit for those holding any stocks of cheese, they are ready to accept reasonable bids in order to clear their warehouses and be free to start on their trip whenever they think the time opportune.

But as soon as the British merchants find themselves in control of the entire available supplies and when they are fully aware of the shortage in supplies they will exact high prices for their goods on hand and as the "bull fever" is already apparent among them, there seems to be no doubt of prices going up very high.

This is in one way rather unfortunate as it is apt to spoil another season next year. It will undoubtedly create an early demand for new fodder-made cheese and the new season will start in at dangerously high prices, and declining prices as the production increases mean losses to all who handle the goods between the producer and the consumer. It is as yet too early to speak of the next season, but the trade generally both here and in Great Britain are very much interested financially, and whenever a new season starts at high prices it means heavy losses in business until bottom prices are reached. It is therefore a doubtful benefit to make large profits at the end of the seasan.

There is a certain amount of goods needed for the consumptive demand. A surplus of production means low prices, while a shortage of supplies is followed by high prices. It has paid the farmers of this country to make butter and cheese for several years. It has paid the farmers in the Province of Quebec very well to make butter, and they have more and more gone into the making of butter. If the farmers do not increase the number of their cows, and if they continue their policy of making butter instead of cheese, there may be a shortage in the production of cheese, even if butter should be wanted at good prices.

The United Kingdom certainly furnishes a good market for both cheese and butter, and as the United States have come to a point where they can consume almost their entire production of both articles, the British markets become more and more dependent on the supplies from Canada, especially as we cater to their tastes in quality. Now, why should not the Canadian farmer be progressive and aggressive enough to increase this profitable trade by adding good milking stock to his herd ?

No doubt our farmers have done well, and a good dairying country is prosperous. We have had no surplus of either butter or cheese for several years, and with the constantly decreasing surplus of the United States the demand for the Canadian product is increasing. Our advice to the Canadian farmers is therefore to be progressive and aggressive and cultivate a paying business by increasing the production.

We have a large market for both cheese and butter across the Atlantic. Our goods are well and favorably known to the trade there and there is a good demand at full market prices for all we produce. Now, why not improve on this and increase the revenue of the country ?

There is certainly a good chance for a very largely increased outlet of both cheese and butter. An increased production may mean somewhat lower prices, but as long as prices are on a paying basis to the producer, by all means let us have the lower prices to increase our trade.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

At the present moment the provision situation is one of uncertainty; should the decision to remove bonded privileges eventuate as appears probable, it will undoubtedly usher in a serious condition for the packers. Already the effect is being reflected on the market by bringing in a much firmer tone to quotations, with every prospect of material advances.

Nearly the whole of the older packing houses have doubled their capacity during recent years, with, of course, the sinking of vast additional capital which must remain as a fixed charge to expenses.

If sufficient hogs are not forthcoming, it simply means the lesser quantity packed will carry the whole of the fixed charges; which must remain, whether one or one thousand hogs are treated. There is a purchase price, however, beyond which it is impossible to go, and still hold the export trade, and this will undoubtedly be the difficult factor to deal with until sufficient hogs can be procured to keep down the percentage of fixed charges. It would look as though the packers must face selling at a loss for some time to come or shut down their factories.

If, however, packers are calculating upon still running at profit it is to be feared they will be forced to arrive at a decision amongst themselves as to the extent of price to which they are prepared to go and maintain their factories from their own standpoint and without consideration for the producer's interest. This, however, would be a regrettable move, as it would have a tendency to still further distance the farmer and packer whose interests are as a matter of fact identical, and would really remove the advantage to the farmer, which is the real object in view.

Results are awaited with a good deal of interest by all concerned.

The cheese market is one of firmness, all stock is now in the hands of the dealers, and is, therefore, likely to be held in view of strong advancing markets. Meanwhile, stocks are maturing in quality and thereby increasing in value. An active export market has been in evidence.

The butter situation is uninteresting; there is plenty on hand to meet all demand, with offerings steadily increasing; quality, however, is not too favorably commented on.

Poultry has had a checkered experience this season; farmers held back their stocks until too late, with the result that the market was flooded and buyers were inclined to hold back in consequence of slow demand. Prices have, therefore, shown considerable decline, closing prices on Saturday previous to Christmas having shown some 3 to 5 cents drop on nearly all lines.

New laid eggs are being eagerly sought for, but can only be had in very small quantities.

LONDON PRODUCE LETTER.

By Our Own Correspondent.

Canadian butter is now completely cleared out, and thus a season with which Canadians have every reason to be satisfied finally closes. It has been one of extreme high prices and of record shipments from Canada, the results of which have been to put much money into the pockets of Canadian farmers and to cut very seriously into the profits of importers here.

Seldom has there been a clearer proof that the theory as to the dependency of the world's markets upon each other is not the impracticable supposition which some would have us believe. It is a real phase of economic law. When the Canadian farmer jingles the dollars in his pockets and ponders upon the success which, as far as he is concerned, has attended the past butter season, he may remember that circumstances and events in Europe have been very kind to him. He may transport himself in spirit and view the commercial confusion which revolution and war have wrought upon Russia and, indirectly, upon Siberia; he may picture to himself the scant pastures and lean cattle, which, owing to the recent drought, have been the lot of certain parts of the European continent; he may visit the busy German manufacturing towns, whose artisans, no longer content with humble black bread, are calling for something better, and augmenting the demand for butter, in catering to which the Dane has been so busy. All these facts have contributed to the success of Canadian butter on this market, and each in its own degree has put wealth into the pockets of Canadian butter-makers.

Will the same favorable circumstances prevail next year? No one can tell for certain, but everyone can be prepared. This much is certain, even though Canadian butter may possibly not realize the high prices it has been fetching these past few months, it will always find buyers, particularly in Liverpool and Manchester, for any quantities it can produce — providing always that the quality is of such a standard as to merit the approval of buyers here. Quality is its best asset.

Returns show that during the past eleven months of 1905 the total imports of butter into the United Kingdom have been some 3,000 tons less than for the corresponding months of 1904. Yet, such have been the high prices, the total value has been £500,000 (about $2,500,000) more. The greater part of this came out of the pockets of the trade, and it is certainly surprising when one considers that butter is an article of such universal demand, that retailers did not put prices higher than they did.

Cheese. Another good week has passed. The demand has been fair all the time, and prices have gone up another shilling. Choicest lots of colored have made as much as 64 shillings; white, also choicest, has realized 63 shillings. The first arrivals of New Zealand cheese are making 61 to 62 shillings. Quality is very fine, and packing is reported as satisfactory.

Bacon. Trade is very dull indeed, and towards the end of this week it has assumed a distinctly holiday aspect. Canadian bacon has been very quiet. Poultry and game loom much larger in the consumers' eyes than bacon. Two or three dull weeks must be expected, until the Christmas holidays pass away.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.

The local provision market is unchanged. Trade is quiet. Market steady at unchanged prices. Christmas trade is reported fair. Bacon continues scarce owing to the limited supply of hogs. Canadian bacon is weaker in the United Kingdom, according to latest cables. The action of the Government in rescinding the bonding privileges on American hogs is not looked upon favorably by packers and the market is expected to respond shortly with higher prices on foreign trade. Dressed hogs, fresh abattoir killed, $8.75 to $9.25, and country dressed $7.75 to $8.25 per 100 pounds. Lard unchanged. We quote:

Butter.

The local demand for butter is good. Dealers, however, had looked for higher prices than are even now ruling and in some quarters it is felt that stocking up ahead has been a mistake. Generally, the trade is content. Local prices for best creamery are 23 1-2c. to 24c., with good to fine at 22 1-2c. to 23c. Export demand slow, English market having shown a declining tendency. Rolls, 21 1-2c. to 22c. Some Manitoba dairy of good body and fair flavor is selling around 19 1-2c. to 20c. We quote:

Choice creamery	0 23½	0 23¾
Finest creamery	0 22½	0 23

Fancy Townships		0 23½
Fresh dairy tubs	0 20	0 20½

Cheese.

Cheese market continues firm and holders asking 13c. for finest western September and October makes, though sales at 12 1-2c. to 12 3-4c. are reported. Stocks are light. Some 1,450 boxes of damaged cheese ex SS. Bavarian, were sold by auction last week at the Union Cold Storage warehouses, and prices realized $8.00 to $9.75 per box of 80 pounds to 85 pounds. These prices indicate that the damage was slight. Bidding was good, shippers in many cases buying in their own lots.

Eggs.

Eggs unchanged and business good. Prices realized are satisfactory and stocks to hand show an improvement on previous shipments. Supplies are coming in more freely from western dealers and owing to the improved condition of the stock, better prices are being realized. Local trade is steady. We quote:

Selected	0 24	0 25
Strictly new laid	0 30	0 32
Pickled and limed	0 20	0 21

TORONTO.

Provisions.

Business has been good, and generally considered satisfactory for the holiday season. Poultry, however, has shown a good deal of fluctuation, and markets closed at the last moment of the holiday season as low as 13c. for turkeys, and other lines proportionately low. Arrivals are still coming in, with dealers carrying over already good stocks. In fresh meats, prices are firm, and demand good. Veal is quoted at full figures for good quality, which is rather scarce, offerings being mainly of the poorly developed class. Dressed hogs are firm at quotations and scarce. We quote:

Butter.

There is no new feature to report. Arrivals have been much more satisfactory and many factories are now getting down to straight work. Large rolls have weakened 1-2c. We quote:

Trade has been inactive, and no new feature to report. All stocks are now in the hands of jobbers, who hold them against an expected firmer market.

Eggs.

Egg stocks are being drawn upon pretty freely, the new laid article being exceptionally scarce, and any guaranteed are fetching on market 40c. and up. Good pickled eggs are showing 1c. advance. We quote:

WINNIPEG.

Creamery Butter.

The steadily increasing demand, coupled with the inadequate stocks following the closing down of the country creameries, has resulted in the expected enhancement of values, prices being up a cent a pound over those of the previous week. Prices to the retail trade are as follows:

Finest fresh creamery, in 56-lb. boxes		0 26
" " in 28-lb. boxes		0 26
" " in 14-lb. boxes		0 26
" " in 1-lb. bricks		0 27

Dairy Butter.

With supplies running smaller than the demand, and of a very uneven quality, the inquiry for the good article keeps up remarkably well at prices firm and indicating an even harder tendency. The first-class quality is in strong demand from local produce houses, but the bulk of the offerings are not up to the mark. Values are uncertain, but best dairy butter, delivered in Winnipeg, is about 20c. per pound.

Windsor Salt

must not be confounded with ordinary Salt. In quality, it is as high above the common Salt of trade as can be imagined. It won't cake—it is pure, white, dry. There is no impurity in it because of the care taken in manufacturing. It is sifted, not ground. Every particle of it is a separate Salt Crystal. It pays to sell Windsor Table Salt, because it is so good, clean, pure—

it is all Salt.

Begin the New Year Aright

You are to live in the year of grace 1906, just one year ahead of 1905. Your competitors will be just one year ahead of where they were last January.

You, too, will be a year in advance or else you will be a year behind.

Let that advance be reflected in your advertising—

VIGOROUS MATTER

and you will find it reflected later in your travellers' order books.

A space this size every week (52 times) in 1906, will cost you the very moderate sum of $6 73 per issue.

Life is short. Don't spend it in a business "you can't afford" to advertise. Get into something worth while.

But first make sure the fault is in the business. It is possible you may be starving it. The Canadian Grocer is the sure remedy for a starving business. It is the best breakfast food on the market. Write for our quotations on case and half-case lots

PROSPERITY SURE FOR 1906.

The rush of Christmas is now over, all the contemplated joys and pleasures have passed, as their forerunners, into history, and business men are now entering upon the more anxious but necessary task of counting cost.

There can be no question whatever that the season has been a record one for prosperity; probably never before have storekeepers laid in such heavy stocks in contemplation of good times, and from advices to hand, we learn, have generally been amply repaid and fully satisfied.

There are places, however—we are glad to say very few—where merchants have not been quite as fortunate and these mainly in country places, where lumbering should be in full swing. Our Lady of the Snows has not really shown herself this season, and in consequence work has been retarded sufficiently to somewhat depress trade, and like the ripple of the lake, has touched adjacent places. There is no need for discouragement, however; the whole Dominion is flourishing, prosperity is the general condition, and though perhaps just at the moment things look blue in such places as those referred to, it only means the postponement of success, not its entire loss. We wish our readers a jolly and prosperous New Year.

DISENFRANCHISED COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS.

At the banquet of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association held at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, last Thursday, Mr. R. C. Wilkins, treasurer of the association, in the course of his remarks (reported fully in our account of the banquet in another part of this issue) touched upon a subject of great interest to all commercial travelers. He stated that the commercial travelers' associations of Canada numbered some 16,000 members, fifty per cent. of whom could not, owing to the exigencies of their calling, exercise the right of franchise at any election, federal or local, and in the presence of Hon. Sydney Fisher and Hon. H. R. Emmerson, Minister of Railways, who represented the Government at the banquet, asked for federal legislation on behalf of a body of men thoroughly competent and entitled by their superior knowledge of the country's requirements—the passing of an act by which travelers, no matter in what part of the country they might be, could exercise the privilege of casting their ballot.

Mr. Wilkins' remarks were received with enthusiastic applause and clearly showed that this request was one that met the approval of every traveler present. Several of the speakers who followed Mr. Wilkins echoed the justice of his request, and it is to be hoped that some means may be adopted by the Government by which this privilege is accorded to commercial travelers.

The Grocer heartily endorses the request made by Mr. Wilkins and considers it an act that will meet with the approval of the country at large. Commercial travelers have many privileges but none that are of a character so important as this exercise of the franchise. It is a matter of importance also to employers of traveling salesmen and would mean a saving of a large amount of money to them. As it is now many houses permit their salesmen to run in from considerable distances to exercise their franchise and this is always done at heavy expense both in money and loss of valuable time. By all means, some way should be found to relieve travelers of this handicap.

Mr. Wilkins deserves the thanks of his fellow merchants and travelers for bringing this important question to the attention of the Government.

WHY HE MUST TAKE A BACK PLACE.

Andrew Carnegie and Pierpont Morgan want to discharge Mr. Corey from the steel trust, not because he has deserted the faithful wife who helped him fight his way up from poverty, but because both of these men are shrewd enough to know that no man living can go the pace that kills and attend to business at the same time.

The old day of the great lawyer, who got drunk on the day of the trial, and of the great preacher who thought he couldn't preach unless his brain was fired with alcohol, and of the great financier who worked up a corner in the morning and drank himself insensible in the afternoon, are gone. Gone with the stage-coach and the tallow candle. Gone with the bob-tail car and the herdic. Business is business to-day, as it never was before in the history of the world, and no man can do business and get drunk.

Mr. Corey is not accused of drinking to excess; neither was Mr. Hyde of the life insurance scandal, but no man can give champagne suppers to actresses, and absinthe breakfasts to dancers, and automobile carouses to the riff-raff of a profession, not always celebrated for its noble purity of ideas, and keep his head clear for business.

Doctor Jekyl was all right as long as he could keep Mr. Hyde at home, but Mr. Hyde is a gentleman of roving disposition and when you have once given him the pleasure of your acquaintance, you will find him standing on the corner waiting for you whenever you take your walks abroad.

No man can keep a clear head unless he leads a clean life. Even the saloonkeepers and the prize fighters have found this out.

Forty years ago, a prize fighter was apt to be a dissipated beast, to-day he is sober, hardworking, plain living. He has to be, or some man who is, will get the best of him.

No man can hold even the smallest clerkship, in any large business to-day unless he has a clear brain, a steady hand, and a bright pair of eyes, with which to meet his employer's glance when he comes to his desk in the morning. The old-fashioned newspaperman, who went on a carouse every once in so often, has been crowded out of the profession by the man who was there to do his work, while the other was nursing the headache of the "day afterwards."

No man can be a telegraph operator to-day unless he's a sober man. The railroad companies do not employ a man who drinks. There is no place in the business world for any man who has not at least good sense enough to keep his blood running through his veins in the swift course of clean health.

Mr. William Ellis Corey is dropping out of the race like an old horse who has seen his best days, and he is dropping out, not because the men who are forcing him to go are trying to teach a moral lesson, but because he is no longer fit for the business with which he has been entrusted.

"Business is business," is not after all such a bad moral axiom, is it?

ANOTHER COAL STRIKE.

IT is asserted that the "Coal Trust" has stored 400,000,000 tons of coal in anticipation of a strike of the unions when the present agreement expires next Spring and that the miners have accumulated a fund of $2,000,000 for the same purpose. As 400,000,000 tons of coal is to $2,000,000, so is the strength of the mine owners compared to that of the miners. This is, however, still further aggravated by the fact that the former are few in numbers while there are many thousands of the latter. It ought not to be difficult to figure out beforehand which side will come out victor should the expected contest occur.

But if the strike occurs next April, as freely predicted, the ill effects of the controversy will not only be felt by the participants but also by manufacturers and merchants and the general public, who have no part in the contest. It is not too early, therefore, to discuss the situation and adopt ways and means of lessening the evils of the strike. The Iron Trade Review makes the novel suggestion that users of coal treat the commodity as insurance and purchase a policy before the strike really takes place. The Review says :

"The danger of a general strike of miners in both the anthracite and bituminous districts is now so great that we believe it will be wise for all manufacturers to purchase and store large supplies of coal, so that business will not be paralyzed by even a long cessation of mining. The expenditure involved in such purchases is really a payment for insurance. Men are usually willing to carry insurance on their lives and property when there is no immediate danger of fire or sickness. Far more reason is there for investing in insurance when it is almost certain that such protection will be needed."

The suggestion is a good one, so far as manufacturers are concerned, and it is one that can be acted upon to the advantage of many merchants. While it entails an initial expense, it must be remembered that the commodity is not a perishable one, and the cost of the investment is really only the interest on the amount invested and the chance of losing on such a plan is very small.

LOCAL RECIPROCITY.

HOW many retail dealers encourage the idea of patronizing home institutions, even to patronizing their own newspapers, to the extent of buying goods outside of their own lines from their home merchants ? An exchange rightfully says :

It is a fact that in some small towns the dry goods, clothing and furniture stores do not carry a very large assortment of goods and, in many cases, carry the same cheap lines that were in demand when the country was new and when the people were able to buy only cheap goods.

A great change has taken place in the last quarter of a century and the people, as a whole, are well-to-do, but the average country store has not kept pace with the increase of wealth of the community. With the exception of those who never go away from home, or the miserly, who live only to work and save money or invest every dollar in more land, the tendency of the people is to buy better goods of all kinds as they are able to do so.

The man who can afford it likes a good house with modern conveniences, whether he lives on a farm, in a country town or in the city. When he has a good house he wants it nicely furnished. The writer has in mind a young druggist in a small town. He was ambitious and kept his stock up-to-date, had a modern establishment worthy of a much larger town ; he advertised heavily and consequently had a good business and made money. He married, built a good home and wanted to furnish it in keeping with the house and his ability to do so. His town boasted of one little furniture store whose assortment of goods consisted of the cheap variety of furniture and carpets ; there was nothing in it he wanted. The druggist, however, was a strong advocate of the idea of patronizing home institutions, so he told the furniture dealer that he wanted to furnish his home with better goods than he had in stock and said : "You give me a letter to your jobber in Winnipeg and I will go there and select the goods and have them shipped to you and allow you a per cent. of profit" (which they agreed on). This was the proper thing to do. The druggist probably got his furniture as cheaply as if he had gone to Winnipeg and bought it at retail. He kept the good will of his home dealer and gave him an opportunity to make a nice profit on the bill.

If the merchant, the furniture dealer, the banker and the liveryman would do the same thing with their dealer when they are similarly placed it would be much better than it usually is. Reciprocity should be practiced among retail dealers ; they should buy from each other, and in the end they would all be as well off and there would certainly be less feeling of jealousy between merchants.

Every merchant in a town should take a pride in his own town and do everything he can to build it up. For that reason he should try to assist his competitor in making a sale, when he cannot make it himself, instead of encouraging the business to go to some other town or to a catalogue house.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

FROM time to time goods are delivered to customers all over the country in a most sloppy manner, on account of the poor handling they receive in transit. Very often a country merchant may be some little distance from the station, and his carter signs for the lot in good order in total ignorance, of course, as to the condition of same. When this occurs goodbye to any claim on the "Railway magnate." I have noticed on invoices sent out by one of our wholesale houses the following caution, and commend same to our merchants all over the country :

"If your freight is damaged or short instruct your carter or receiver without fail to sign for same in bad order, and claim on carrier at once."

If the merchant would follow out these instructions neither he nor the wholesale house would have the quibbling they often have with the railway companies to get their just claims settled.

CHRISTMAS WINDOW DISPLAYS.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of good window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays of Christmas goods and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of :

FIRST PRIZE	$5.00

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on January 15th, 1906, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the pictures, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

Care should be taken to avoid reflection in the photograph. The best photos are often taken at night.

Executive A. G. Munro, Morden, Man.; A. E. Hill, Griswold, Man.; W. G. McLaren, Souris, Man.; J. Brown, Neepawa, Man.; R. F. Moore, Cartwright, Man.; F. W. Clingan, Virden, Man.; N. D. McKinnon, Weyburn, Sask.; G. C. Sayles, Elva, Man.; E. H. Glinz, Oak River, Man.; W. Ledoux, Arnaud, Man.

An important meeting of the Edmonton branch of the association was held in Gariepy's hall on the night of December 12. There was a good attendance of Edmonton merchants and much enthusiasm was manifested. The following officers were elected: President, Jos. Whitelaw, of the Whitelaw Co., grocers; first vice-president, A. H. Richards, of A. H. Richards & Co., Strathcona; second vice-president, W. T. Henry, of the Blowey-Henry Furniture Co., Edmonton and Strathcona; treasurer, Cecil Sutherland, Edmonton.

It was decided to postpone the election of executive members until the next regular meeting. A special meeting is to be held in two weeks' time to appoint a permanent secretary, a number of applications having been received. The importance of the work in the Edmonton section may readily be appreciated from the fact that a permanent secretary is to be appointed. In the meantime Cecil Sutherland is acting as secretary.

A good example of the way to collect accounts and break the news to the customers that a store is about to shut down on credit for a time is furnished by the following circular issued in November by A. M. Anderson, of Leduc, Alta.:

Important Announcement.

"Dear Sir:—We hand you herewith a statement of your account to date, and would request you to give same your early attention. Should you wish a more detailed statement, we will be pleased to render same on request.

"Owing to the poor crops and general depression of the past two years, we were compelled to carry over a great many accounts on our books which should otherwise have been collected. With this year's abundant crops and the consequent prosperity of the farming community, we feel justified in asking that all accounts be paid before the end of the present year.

"In order that we may be able to collect all our accounts, it is our intention to close up our books on the first day of December next, and from that time until the first day of April next we will not give credit to anyone, but will sell our goods for cash only. This is no experiment with us, for after being in business for over twenty years we are fully aware of the advantages of the cash system, both to the buyer and the seller. Our inducements to cash buyers will be such as have never yet been offered in Leduc, and during the Winter months we believe our customers as well as many others should be able to take advantage of the great bargains which we shall offer. We would ask you to watch for our December announcement. In order to give our customers every opportunity of paying up back accounts and also to take advantage of our cash down prices, we will take butter and eggs as cash at the highest market prices. We have also erected a large building for the purpose of storing grain, so that we are in a position to take oats and barley at the highest market prices.

"In closing, we beg to thank our many customers for their liberal patronage in the past, and trusting that one and all may appreciate and take advantage of our low cash prices, we remain,

"Yours truly.

"A. M. ANDERSON.

CHECK SYSTEMS AND THE TRADING STAMP ACT.

Much has been said and printed relating to the recently enacted amendment of the Criminal Code of 1892, defining and limiting the use of trading stamps. This, however, must not be construed as prohibiting merchants from using such systems as the discount check system connected with check printing cash registers.

The check issued by cash registers is generally used at the present time by the retail trade. It has recognized value as an advertising medium and it undoubtedly furnishes an element of protection that can be secured in no other way.

It is possible for the merchant to place in the hands of every customer a receipt on which is printed indelibly the amount of the sale. This gives him absolute protection.

When the discount feature is added to the check it furnishes the best means of reducing charge business and increasing cash business. This is so because the discount is an incentive to the customer to purchase for cash. Cash business is more desirable because it is more profitable.

In order that merchants may have no misunderstanding of cash register checks we feel that a word of explanation is proper at this time.

While the law in question is quite broad as applicable to trading stamps, and, as we are informed, effectually stops their use, it does not prevent merchants from giving discount checks to their customers as premiums for cash purchases, or otherwise, if the reasonable conditions imposed by the law are observed. These conditions are as follows:

The checks issued must show upon their face the "place of delivery" "merchantable value," and that they are redeemable at any time by the merchant who sells the goods or by the manufacturer or other persons from whom the goods were purchased by the merchant. Furthermore, the checks must be redeemable at the merchant's store where the customer purchased the goods and received the checks

A check with the following or similar wording is permissible: "This check is valuable to cash buyers. Claim our 5 per cent. discount on above amount in cash or to apply on future purchases at any time at our store, Main and First streets."

The following form would also be permissible: "This check is redeemable in cash or goods at any time at our store for 3 per cent. of above amount. If checks amount to $10 face value, presented at any time, we will redeem at 5 per cent. of face value."

From the foregoing it will be observed that the new law was not intended to prohibit merchants from giving discount to cash buyers or others, but simply requires the merchant to make all rebate checks redeemable by him, at his store, and at a value made known to the customer at the time the check was received by him.

Merchants using discount checks should carefully examine them and see that the form complies with the requirements of the law as herein explained, and if they do not so comply, change the plan accordingly.

TEA NOT INJURIOUS.

Editor The Canadian Grocer:— On page 65 of your last issue, in your allusion to tobacco, you state:

"There are even people who consider the use of tea injurious, as is being demonstrated now by the opinion of experts in the columns of the New York Herald."

You are quite mistaken in this; it was Salada tea in New York that raised the whole discussion re tea in the columns of the New York Herald, when for seventeen days they gave nearly a page every day to the opinions of experts cabled from all over the world, including London, Paris, Vienna, Berlin, etc., and in the Herald's editorial summing up the consensus of opinion was that tea is a distinctly healthful drink. In an editorial in the Boston Globe of December 16 (we enclose the cutting) on tea drinking, they went still further. We might mention that this discussion in the Herald has aroused great interest throughout the United States on the question of tea, hundreds of papers writing on the subject, and the great mass of them state that without doubt tea is a healthful drink.

P. C. LARKIN.

SOAP MAKING PROFITABLE.

Soap making in Mexico may not exactly rank with banking as an occupation but it is nevertheless a decidedly profitable business, as shown by the experience of the Soap Manufacturing Co., of Agunilla, in the State of Durango. On a capital of $2,500,000, this company paid a dividend of 35 per cent., or $875,000, in 1904, and will pay 40 per cent. in 1905. Already it has paid on account of the present year's business a dividend of 10 per cent. and one of 15 per cent. The remaining 15 per cent. will be paid in December. Happy should be the little coterie of stockholders so fortunate as to own this highly profitable enterprise.

Looking back upon the year just closing ("Salada's" fourteenth) we are happy to be able to note that it has been one of unprecedented success for "Salada" Ceylon Tea, reaching a magnitude in sales unhoped for even in our most sanguine early anticipations.

We may say (without vanity) that we attribute this success solely to the sterling qualities of our product, assisted by our constant and untiring endeavors to serve both the trade and the public "well," not just passably so, but "well," that all would be alike benefited.

Can we hope that an even more vigorous continuance of these endeavors for 1906 will bring compensating results in our mutual interests ?

Wishing all a Happy and Prosperous New Year,

Sincerely yours, THE "SALADA" TEA CO.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Dec. 28, 1905.

Business, generally, on the quiet side and our report of last week could safely stand: The holiday trade generally, with the exception of the luxuries in fruit and special lines of fancy groceries, is quiet. Jobbers are all prepuring for stock-taking and travelers in preparing for the New Year's campaign. Generally speaking, the trade is satisfied with the volume of business turned over. Travelers' reports speak well of prospects of country trade for the coming vear.

Canned Goods— Business in canned goods is dull. Buying is only of a holiday trade character, sorting up short lines of fruits and fancy vegetables and fish. The stock-taking period now approaching is checking business in this line very materially.

Sugar Sugar is quiet; business in yellows reported last week as unusually good, continues. Prices remain steady. The European market has been holding steady. Jobbers report business quiet; country orders are light. The stock-taking season is in a measure responsible for dropping off of purchases. There is no change to note in prices. We quote:

Syrups and Molasses The position of molasses is strong. Refiners have been quietly buying, and a sale of 500 puncheons was made last week at 32c. Stocks are light, as reported by The Grocer for some time past, and the general opinion of dealers indicates higher prices. Corn syrup is in good demand, and with molasses tending up, would appear good buying. We quote:

Coffee— The position of the coffee market is decidedly strong. As indicated by The Grocer editorially last week, prices are firming up all around. The latest feature is the passing of a bill by the Brazilian Congress by a vote of 105 to 12 increasing the export duty on coffee 3 francs per bag and the placing of a special export duty on low grades. This bears out our views as expressed last week, and a word to the wise coffee dealer should be sufficient. We quote:

Tea Trading in teas is reported quiet. No interest is shown by dealers and the usually mid-holiday dullness prevails. Some small lots of China greens have changed hands, and this was no doubt due to scarcity of these teas. The trouble complained of by a prominent broker was the inability of securing Ceylon greens. Growers have curtailed their planting and only a few estates are producing. Japans are showing up better business and good business is looked for after the turn of the year. Jobbers are buying only requirements of short lines, as all of them are in the midst of the annual stock-taking. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits Information re dried fruits, scarce. Valencias are quiet and no change since last reported. California prunes are held firm and reports would indicate a not unlikely enhancement of prices. Dates are expected

Rice and Tapioca—No change in rice. The position of the market, however, is reported strong, and the shortage in the Japan crop is looked upon as a factor for firmer and higher markets. Tapioca is high and will undoubtedly be higher. Inquiries develop the fact that the local trade is short and looking around for supplies. One prominent jobber approached was asking 5 1-2c. in small lots, and not anxious to sell. Reports from Singapore say producers have not put forth best efforts to make shipments on account of the unprofitable condition of the business during the past few years, and the cultivation is being neglected in consequence. Spices—The market is unchanged. Local trade very quiet, due to the holiday season. Peppers are firm. Stocks in New York are reported sufficient and market firm. Cloves are quiet and little doing. Gingers unchanged, also cassias. Nutmegs low and grinders have taken advantage of the unusually low prices to lay in stocks, as it would appear that the bottom had been reached. We quote:

Allspice	0 12	0 15
Nutmegs	0 25	0 50

Beans—Supplies of beans are more plentiful on the local market and requirements are readily filled. Firmness, however, is the characteristic of the market and the decline noted last week shows no further sign of being followed. Quotations are unchanged; $1.65 per bushel on track and $1.70 in jobbing way. We quote:

Choice prime beans	1 70	1 75
Lower grades	1 60	1 65

Evaporated Apples—The market continues to rule strong. Stocks are light and western evaporators are firm in their demands. The fact that the United States market is high and shipments made with profit to leading centres, confirms holders in maintaining high prices. A leading dealer here referring to the present strong position of the market, anticipated still higher prices and recalled good business and steady demand some years ago at prices of 10c. to 10 1-2c. "Evaporated apples cannot be replaced by prunes or any other fruit," said he "and if figures go to 10c. to 10 1-2c. this season, trade will still be satisfactory and buyers found."

Maple Products—Business shows a little improvement this week. Inquiries for maple sugar have been more plentiful. One of the largest dealers in maple products informed The Grocer that his firm's business during the season just closing has been remarkable, nearly four times that of the previous ante-holiday season. The manufacture of maple creams and blocks for confectioners' purposes is on the increase. He expects to have to enlarge plant to double its present capacity next season. We quote:

Honey—Dealers report good business. The demand has been much better. The difficulty reported by heavy operators is scarcity of buckwheat honey, and although the country has been scoured for it, the quantity obtained is very small. Prices, in consequence, have advanced fully 1c. per pound this week. White clover honey also is higher and in good demand. Comb honey selling at 13c. to 13 1-2c. and selling well. We quote:

Fish—The demand for fish of all kinds continues satisfactory, particularly in fresh frozen. Green cod is none too plentiful and receipts are coming in small sized lots; prices are firmer. Haddock is in good demand with prices unchanged. Fresh cured haddies coming in freely and enjoying good sale. Oysters are selling well and the trade is reported as never better. We quote:

GROCERIES.

Toronto, Dec. 29, 1905.

Business has steadied down considerably during week under review. The great rush, of more than ordinary character, of the past few weeks, has made the present quietude more apparent, and some are disposed to think it is too quiet, even taking all things into account.

There has been absolutely no feature of interest since our last issue. There are signs of shortage in a few lines as regards spot stocks, but there is no indication of any important demand to make this a feature.

On the street, brokers are practically having a holiday experience, no life being manifest in trade.

Canned Goods—Demand has continued steady in all lines. Canned boneless poultry was added to list in last report, and has been attracting fair amount of attention. The canned goods trade is considered to be in very healthy condition. Grocers have been buying in more moderate lots than formerly, which has had the effect of keeping goods more actively moving and has certainly helped trade. We quote:

"Canada First," "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" and "Auto" brands, also all private brands.

Sugar—Local trade has been uninteresting; little business has been done, and no feature of importance to note. Prices are unchanged with tendency to firmness.

Foreign reports denote raw sugars as remaining quite strong, but with quotations unchanged, whilst refined sugars were quietly steady, and prices unchanged. Sales were slow on N. Y. market, as most buyers were inclined to hold off pending stock-taking. We quote:

Coffee—Domestic trade has been dull and uninteresting; no business of any note has been in evidence since our last issue. Willett & Gray in their weekly report have the following interesting remarks:

The difficulty of making estimates at this time of the year has been thoroughly proven during the past ten years and shows the folly of giving much heed to figures that can be many millions out of the way. Nevertheless, some people with bearish views are sending out figures of thirteen millions for the next crop, while there are others who speak of ten and eleven millions. The fact is, conditions of plantations in Brazil are such that estimates are of no value until the crop is harvested and hulled and after that the crop movement tells the story. It is only right to repeat the warning to disregard estimates that are merely guesses.

The harvesting of the mild crops has been going on for some time, the bulk of the picking done, and some value can be attached to the reports coming in as to the results: Costa Rica, about half a crop; Mexico, 20 to 30 per cent. short; Salvador, 25 per cent., short; Guatemala, 30 per cent. short; Venezuela, heavy rains, considerable damage; Colombia, crop much reduced; Hayti, not more than last year, which was a small crop.

Tea—Domestic trade has been dull and uninteresting during week under review. Some heavy trade was done previous to the holiday, which doubtless means that many buyers are well placed for some time. The London markets are reporting continued strength at recent auctions. The auction passed with considerable animation for all kinds, medium being in special demand and selling at slightly better rates, while common teas were firmer than they have been for some time past. In Ceylons there was a distinctly firmer tone in the market, the tendency being towards rather improved prices for medium and good liquoring kinds, quotations for the lower grades being also rather in favor of sellers. Java was a firm market, especially for good teas, poorest kinds being the least in demand.

Sales will probably not be resumed until the first week in January.

Foreign Dried Fruits— There is no new feature to report in these lines. The primal markets denote continued firmness and prices have advanced at these points, but no movement is reported on domestic markets, probably on account of present stocks being held on basis of earlier buying. Valencias are showing an advance at primal points, which is expected to reflect itself on local quotations. We quote:

Beans—The market shows no change, but is continuing firm. The season's crop has proved of excellent quality, the grading being to a large extent ones, with fair showing of twos. There has been little difficulty in placing goods. We are removing "ungraded" from our list, as there are practically none offering. We quote:

Fish—The market reports exceptionally good trade for current week, the demand covering all lines that are readily available. Oysters especially have been well maintained, and supply regular and good.

There are still indications of increased arrivals, whilst demand is only maintained at steadying point, so that the strengthening feature is absent. N. S. Markets.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 27, 1905.

The Christmas trade here was a little disappointing, and not quite up to expectations. Orders from outside points came in with a rush, and then fell off sooner than expected. On the whole, however, it was fairly good, and the jobbers are not complaining very much. Collections continue good, and in this respect the business men are satisfied.

Prices show little change here. No advance is looked for, except, perhaps, in sugar.

The sales of dried fruit here this season have been good. Prices have been moderate, and consequently the consumption has been greater.

Stocks of molasses on hand here are large, but prices are unchanged.

Apples continue in good demand. Representatives of English brokers are still going through the Annapolis Valley buying up all the fruit offering. Exports from Halifax are very heavy, the outward steamers for Liverpool taking thousands of barrels each trip.

Prince Edward Island produce is now very quiet and prices show little change. Potatoes are quoted at 30 to 32 cents per bushel, and turnips at 20 to 25 cents per bushel. New Brunswick potatoes are selling here at $1.50 per three-bushel bag. Pork is scarce and the price high. Good hogs are quoted 9 and 9½ cents per pound.

Butter, Eggs and Cheese.

The market for all these products is very firm and there is no prospect of the present high prices receding any. In fact the outlook gives promise of even higher prices, as the receipts will naturally show a falling off instead of an increase at this season of the year. The demand during the holiday season for butter and eggs was quite heavy, even at the high prices. People were forced to buy. Creamery prints are quoted at 26 to 27, with a stronger tendency; creamery solids at 25 to 26, and dairy tubs at 24 to 25 cents. Fresh laid eggs are quoted at 40 to 50 cents per dozen at retail, and they are scarce at that. Case eggs, limed or salted, are quoted at 24 cents. The quality of these generally is poor. Cheese continues firm at former quotations. The demand for cheese at the present is very light.

B. C. News.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 21, 1905.

How the salmon pack of British Columbia is moving out is well illustrated by the shipment of 80,000 cases of canned salmon by the China Mutual steamer Ping Suey, which arrived in port this week from Liverpool via the Orient. She brought about 1,500 tons of cargo for Victoria and Vancouver, and outward bound will take the salmon, part of which was taken into cargo at each port. This will be almost the last large shipment of the 1905 pack, the bulk having gone forward. The Ping Suey will take this salmon direct to the Old Country.

A great deal of interest is manifested in the produce trade over the announcement of the formation of the Dominion Produce Co., at St. Thomas, Ont. The fact that a branch is to be located at Vancouver and also that Mr. J. Y. Griffin of the Winnipeg produce firm of J. Y. Griffin & Co., is the promoter, adds to the interest. Other dealers are naturally preparing to keep close tab on a concern which will have such wide-spread ramifications with branches all through the Dominion, where not only can all sorts of produce be sold, but those articles required for another part of the country can be accumulated. This possibility is no doubt the feature leading to the formation of the company. For instance, a house with branches in the east is in excellent position at the Christmas season to collect and ship large quantities of dressed poultry here to meet the heavy demand. The same is at the present moment true of the butter market, though prices here hardly warrant importations from the east at the present moment.

Raw sugar from Demerara is due to arrive by the steamer Argyle, the B. C. sugar refinery having purchased 5,000 tons in the West Indian colony. This is the first consignment to be received from that part of the world, and it has to be brought round the Horn, though the completion of the Panama Canal will offer a much shorter route. The fact that Demerara is a British possession gives a preferential of 33 1-3 per cent. to the product. Hitherto the B. C. sugar refinery has been buying its supplies in the Phillipines, Java, Fiji, and other Pacific Islands. The export from Fiji, like that from Demerara, benefits by the 33 1-3 preferential tariff. The possibility of a rival, with equal privileges so far as the customs tariff is concerned, may prevent much greater expansion in the trade with Fiji.

The feature of interest, aside from Christmas selling, in the grocery and provision trade, has been the rivalry in selling the Christmas turkeys which will be eaten at Vancouver Christmas tables. As usual, the supply has been large, brought from Eastern Canada, almost altogether. One firm brought in no less than eight cars, and other consignments have also been received. This week the price started up near 25 cents per pound retail. One after another began cutting, until now the quotation is 19c. per pound retail, with prospects of even lower prices. It is hard to say if there will be any money made at the price, though the consumers are not complaining so far.

* * *

In fruits a very strong movement in choicer lines of apples is noted this week. California oranges, too, are moving out better, and the supplies are larger. The Jap oranges have been subjected to rigorous inspection by the provincial inspector of fruit pests, with the result that for a time the Jap oranges in stock were quarantined. San Jose scale was alleged to be the reason for the action. The next supply and likely to be the last lot but one to be received this season, is expected by the Empress of China to arrive here Christmas Day.

In the produce market there is a marked lessening of stocks of creamery butter. Eastern prices continuing high will compel local rates to go up as soon as stocks are brought in at the higher basis. Local fresh creamery butter is quoted at 30 cents. The supply is much less and from now on for three months will not increase.

Last week the price of fresh laid eggs dropped somewhat, but the extra demand of the Christmas trade has sent them back up to 50c. per dozen, and scarce at the price, though quite a number are being received in a small way by retail dealers from local sources.

A GENEROUS ACTION.

A generous action on the part of E. W. Gillett Co., and one that might be followed by other concerns to good advantage, is the fact of their having presented an assortment of their well-known preparations as a Christmas present to about 40 charitable institutions in Toronto.

Figured at cost this means an expense of several hundred dollars. As such goods as baking powder, soda, cream tartar, etc., are used largely in these places, such a donation is fully as acceptable as cash, and the officials of these institutions are all well pleased with the fine Christmas present referred to. From two to five cases of goods were given to each institution according to its size.

Mr. A. H. Brittain, Montreal, is on a trip to Halifax and La Have, N.S., this week.

MONTREAL

The Most Liberally Managed Firm in Canada.

N. B. Markets.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 26, 1905.

Again we come to the last report of another year. Christmas trade was good. The retailers report fine business, no doubt somewhat the result of particularly fine weather for Christmas shopping. So far the Winter has been very mild with just enough snow before the holidays for sleighing. The trade in St. John has little to complain of in the business of the past year. While there was not as much money made as in the previous year, owing to less favorable markets, there were no failures among the wholesale grocers and the general feeling is one of satisfaction. We have one disadvantage; we get but little benefit from the immense business springing up in the west. I say little benefit because we do get some, but the increase in population is too far away for a general benefit. We therefore do not enter fully into that prosperity which comes to the western cities, and even east to Montreal. We do, however, more than hold our own.

Business is very quiet. Markets show little change.

Oil.

There is fairly active business. In burning oil, there is large consumption. Prices low. In lubricating and paint oils it is largely future business which has attention. Linseeds are firm at the rather higher figures. Turpentine continues very high. In cod oil market is rather easier.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse salt it was the custom to import largely in the Winter season as freights were then low. Now as freights are much higher and sales very light in the Winter very small quantities are brought out.

Canned Goods.

The interest for the last few weeks has been in canned beef. An American packer came into this market with a very low price; the direct result is that Canadian packers met the cut and sold very largely, so that the Spring orders in this line have been booked much earlier than usual. There is a report that the American packer miscalculated somewhere and that the orders taken will not be filled at the low price quoted. In vegetables and fruits, sales light, values unchanged. Oysters while unchanged are likely to be higher. In domestic fish, sardines in fair supply, other lines rather a light stock.

Fresh Fruit.

Business is very quiet. The weather before Christmas was particularly favorable for shipping and a large trade was done. Buying reported not as heavy as usual, the retailers saying as a rule they stocked up too heavily, losing on the goods carried over. In oranges, Jamaicas had a large sale, being fine stock. Valencias quite freely bought. Their full color is popular. Floridas and Californias also offered, the latter quite high. Lemons brought full prices. Grapes were splendid stock and reasonable. No cranberries.

Dried Fruit.

Every year sees dissatisfaction with the way the California raisin business is handled on the coast. This season extreme prices were named and much concession caused by the promise of a cent rebate being held out, only to be withdrawn. Never were so few California raisins bought. Now the association find themselves with large stocks and season of best demand over. Quite a decline in prices expected. Foreign raisins were cheap and New York seeded were offered low and freely sold. Peels are a light stock and higher. Prunes firmly held. Dates a light stock, those bought via London very late arriving. Apricots and peaches held firm. Evaporated apples higher and very firm.

Sugar.

Values are unchanged. Prices continue low but it is thought market is rather firmer. Sales have been good.

Molasses.

The fancy Barbadoes imported this season has proved quite popular. It is thought there will be an increased demand in the coming season. Stock of Barbadoes here is light. Porto Rico a full stock. Price is quite low.

Fish.

There is a good supply of fresh fish. British Columbia salmon freely offered. Red perch from West Virginia are also seen. Dry fish locally is firm. Pickled herring in very light supply and rather higher. Smoked herring bring full figures. Finnan haddies are firm. There is one bad feature—the West India market is just now a very poor one. Hake which are largely shipped have little sale locally.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

Flour is unchanged. There is just a fair business. Oatmeal is lower. Cornmeal is steady. Beans are rather more quiet. This somewhat affects the present market. Stock Yellow Eyes large and price low.

Provisions.

In barrel pork a firm market at full figures. Beef is rather easier. Sales are light. Pure lard is still high; American chiefly seen. Refined lard is low and selling quite freely. Smoked meats firm. In fresh meats there was a fine Christmas market. Beef is still quite low. There was little good veal, but lamb and mutton were abundant, and low. Pork high. In poultry high prices ruled; there was lots of turkeys, but prices held firm. We quote:

Stock small and prices high. The demand is, however, limited, owing to full prices asked. We quote:

HINTS TO BUYERS.

The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, are offering a car of new Oregon prunes, all sizes, in 10, 25 and 50-lb. boxes, at very attractive figures.

The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, are quoting specially low prices on a fine grade New Orleans molasses in barrels and half barrels.

Manitoba Markets

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 28 th, 1905.)

With the Christmas rush now a thing of the past, wholesale trade has become quiet and for the past week there has been little activity. Wholesalers report a good business done with the demand good in nearly all lines. Price changes are few and far between and quotations continue practically the same as reported last week.

Carlot prices of sugar for all points in Manitoba are now figured at the Winnipeg price plus the balance of through freight. Sugar prices here are unchanged and the demand keeps up, no change being looked for in the immediate future. Yellow sugar holds at the advance of last week and granulated continues steady at the figures of the past week.

New honey is now in and is meeting with ready sale. Collections are reported fair to good and the trade seems generally satisfied.

Canned Goods— The canned goods market holds good at last quoted prices, but presents no new features. A fairly good demand is still in evidence. Prices are still quoted as follows:

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Crest Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

GENERAL CONDITIONS.

There is a distinctly holiday aspect to the market this week. Domestic trade has naturally been quiet after the heavy stocking up of the past few weeks. Millers at country points report deliveries coming in well, and work in full swing.

Export trade in both grain and flour has shown a steady demand, and prospects look well for the new year. Quite a few orders have come to hand and inquiries are more plentiful.

Deliveries of oats have been large, but do not show any advance in quality. Prices have, therefore, a tendency to weaken.

Exporters report good trade in Manitoba wheat; it is evident that this year's crop is finding ready sale in foreign markets.

The offerings of Winter wheat continue fair, but very few sales are reported as having been made to millers, exporters taking the bulk of the offerings.

The demand from millers for Manitoba wheat has continued light, only one sale being reported of a 10,000-bushel lot of No. 2 Northern at 82c. track, the elevator port, and another round lot at 81 3-4c., the balance of the sales being single car lots, excepting an occasional 5,000-bushel lot of all-rail wheat via North Bay.

In breakfast cereals, domestic trade has been dull, the recent fall in quotations doing little towards stimulating the markets. Export trade, however, is picking up and fair trade is reported.

AMERICAN FLOUR SUPPLANTS CANADIAN.

Alex MacLean reporting from Tokio to the Trade and Commerce Department, states that the importations from Canada into Japan for the present year up to the end of September amounted to but $35,118, as compared with $71,065 for the corresponding period of last year.

This is due to the fact that fairly good American flour can be bought more cheaply than Canadian.

PREPARATION FOR GRAIN DEVELOPMENT.

No subject has more interest just now for the people of Canada as a whole than the development of railway facilities for the transportation of Northwest grain to tidewater. The first part of the route eastward from the place where the wheat grows must be one or other of several railways, and the most satisfactory feature of the present situation is the keen competition between the rival corporations for the grain-carrying trade. Several reports quite recently published afford a glimpse of the unceasing activity of the competitors.

Pending the final determination of the navigability of Hudson's Strait for a period sufficiently long to enable grain to be exported in large quantities by this route to Europe, the work of locating a line of railway from the Saskatchewan to Hudson's Bay is making steady progress. Whether the proposed railway will be built or not is no longer a matter of engineering; it is one of climatic conditions and of commercial profit and loss.

The Canadian Northern is reported to have made an arrangement with the Duluth & Rainy Lake Railway, by means of which the latter will secure over the Canadian Northern an entrance into Winnipeg, while the Canadian Northern will obtain over the allied line to Duluth an alternative route to Lake Superior. Their point of junction is Fort Frances.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Co. will, within two months, put under contract the part of the prairie section of the National Transcontinental line between Touchwood Hills and Edmonton, a distance of seven hundred and seventy-five miles. Apparently it is intended that a considerable part of this section will be available for the exportation of the wheat crop of 1907, as part of the section now under construction will be available for the crop of 1906. Meanwhile the Canadian Pacific, the Canadian Northern, and the Grand Trunk Pacific are all constructing radiating branch lines to the newly-formed agricultural settlements in the country about Edmonton.

A FINE RECORD.

Mr. F. W. Thompson, vice-president of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, has returned to Montreal after a three weeks' business and pleasure trip in the United States.

Mr. Thompson besides visiting other centres, spent a very pleasant and profitable time at Lakewood, New Jersey, where he met a number of financial men and manufacturers, who all appeared very enthusiastic about the general prosperity of the United States. Mr. Thompson was pleased to be able to speak of similar prosperity in the Dominion. In referring to Canada's prosperity, Mr. Thompson stated that there were still from forty million to fifty million bushels of wheat in Canada available for export.

Coming nearer home, Mr. Thompson, in reply to a question, said that the Royal Mill of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. has just broken all previous records in the manufacture of flour, when 5,200 barrels were ground in the twenty-four hours. This establishes a new record, and one that the Ogilvie management feels justly proud of.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Flour.

Flour trade is quiet and there are no changes in prices to report. Position is strong and prices firm. Local trade is only for actual requirements and no heavy buying is done. No activity is anticipated until after the holidays. Exports are fair via Portland and St. John. We quote:

Rolled Oats.

Trading is light and the market easier. The association has dropped prices 25c. per barrel, or 12 1-2c. per bag, but there is no indication of buyers taking any advantage of this drop as stocks are plentiful and demand slow. We quote:

Fine oatmeal, bags	2 40	2 50

Feed.

Feed is firm and a good demand is the order of the day. The scarcity of Ontario bran is a feature of the market. The demand for Manitoba bran is good and supplies light and holders firm at $17 to $17.50 per ton. Manitoba shorts advanced 50c. per ton this week and is quoted and firm at $19.50 to $20. Ontario shorts, good demand at firm prices. We quote:

" bran	17 00	17 50

Hay.

There is no change in the hay situation. No. 1 is in good demand, inferior grades of No. 2 are dull and little inquiry exists. The foreign market shows more strength and both Liverpool and Manchester are higher. Exports via Boston are heavy and large contracts are going forward in the January sailings. We quote:

TORONTO MARKETS.

Flour.

Business has been uninteresting and without distinctive feature since our last report. Little new domestic trade is reported, and orders have been mainly of a sorting up character. Export trade has shown a steady demand, and quite a number of orders have been transacted. Prospects for export are considered good. Prices, however, are not being maintained and show tendency to decline. Domestic prices remain firm at previous quotations. We quote:

Manitoba wheat patents, per bbl. in bags	4 45	4 85

Ontario wheat patents " "	3 75	4 00

Grain.

Trade has not been over active since our last report; arrivals have been coming in pretty freely. At outside points reports denote good deliveries at the mills, and tend to show that farmers are disposed to market their grain, although in some districts it is believed they will hold back a portion until Spring in hopes of better conditions and to make certain of the Winter sown crop before exhausting their stocks. We quote:

Breakfast Cereals.

The delivery of grain for breakfast cereals is reported good at most points throughout the province. Trade, however, is disappointing even at this season, which is always considered a falling one. Prices are unchanged at the decline reported in our last. We quote:

TO BUILD NEW ELEVATOR.

The Empire Elevator Co. will build another elevator midway between Port Arthur and Fort William, much larger in size than the present one at the mouth of the Kaministiquia River, but the plant will be of similar construction.

Manitoba rolled oats are being quoted in the eastern market by Nicholson & Bain.

GREEN FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

FEATURES OF INTEREST.

Recent reports to hand from our correspondents at various points of the Dominion all speak of an active holiday trade. Fruits of all kinds were in good demand and those of a special character, such as kumquats, pomegranates, strawberries, and pears, brought in at eastern points, were a marked success, and nothing to note has been left over. Oranges have, of course, had a prominent place, but much more would have been accomplished had this fruit been better colored and richer flavored. Some dealers report a heavy stock left over, with abundant arrivals still coming in. Cranberries are scarce at all points and a distinctly upward tendency reported. Grape fruit is coming well to the front, and is evidently receiving more attention from the public.

Apple reports mention fairly active export demand. European markets, however, cannot be considered as over brisk. Halifax despatched 6,719 barrels during the week under review, all of which went to London. Compared with same week last year a falling off of 4,673 barrels in receipts at London from all points is reported. Total London receipts of last season to date, however, are 320,074, a slight advance of last season, which was 310,675. Prices are showing an easier tendency on the export market.

STARTING THE SEEDLESS ORANGE TRADE.

The cultivation of seedless oranges has created a revolution in the orange growing industry of the United States. Since the early seventies, when it was introduced from Brazil by William Cudson, United States consul at Bahia, it has added $43,000,000 directly, and $60,000,000 indirectly to the taxable wealth of California. Mr. Judson heard of these peculiar trees up the Amazon River, and sent a native, who brought him some of the fruit and some of the shoots of the trees. He sent six shoots to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, but they excited no interest there, and in 1873 he sent four shoots to Southern California. One died from neglect, another was eaten by a cow, but the other two flourished. Sixteen seedless oranges were the crop of these two shoots, and they were carried from place to place for exhibition. It was feared that the fruit would be hard at the next crop, but it turned out better than before. Immense fields of oranges are the result of these two shoots first planted in Southern California.

KOOTENAY FRUIT GROWERS UNITE.

The Kootenay fruit growers, at a well attended meeting have unanimously approved of the proposal to incorporate as a joint stock company under the Farmers' Institute Act of the province. A resolution adopted was that the association shall guarantee interest at a good rate to those who subscribe for stock to the value of $25 or more. No difficulty is anticipated in raising at once all the capital required for initial expenses. Before any revenue is received from material supplied, or commissions on sales charged the members, a considerable sum will be expended for fertilizing and spraying material, both of which will be wanted before the end of January.

Several additions to the usual articles of incorporation were proposed and accepted, one of the most important of which allows the establishment of a fruit preserving and canning factory by the association as soon as it may be considered advisable.

A special meeting of the association will be held on December 20 to complete the incorporation and arrange for the holding of the first annual meeting of the new company on the second Monday in January.

CANADA'S APPLE EXPORT.

An examination of the exports for the season of navigation just closed, brings to light the fact that the shipment of apples increased enormously, as compared with the season of 1904, this increase almost amounting to 50 per cent. J. R. Clogg & Co. estimate the shipments from various Atlantic ports as follows:

	1905. bbls.	1904. bbls.	1903 bbls
Montreal	553,971	367,631	728,132
New York	429,964	379,617	819 056
Boston	275,670	383,774	414,918
Halifax	103,523	182,165	266,162
Portland	82,847	90,550	128,539
St. John, N.B.	1,340	975	9,475
Annapolis	——	24,108	14,658
Wolfville	——	8,500	——
Totals	1,506,745	1,436,770	2,381,010

Clogg & Co. say: "We will estimate roughly that Canadian apples exported show a value to the country of nearly $2,000,000, which is a neat item from the orchards of Canada. We have not considered Nova Scotia in the above, so can estimate the export value of the whole Canadian shipments to date at $2,500,000 net, and we think at this writing that we are not far out."

The Nova Scotia crop report for November says of the apple crop in that province: Owing to the condition of the season during blossom time many parts of the fruit district were seriously affected, consequently the apple crop varies in different districts, and even in the same orchard, some varieties being quite a failure while others have yielded well. It is hard to get an exact estimate of the quantity, but probably as a whole it will not reach more than 60 per cent., and yet with the large number of trees in bearing the total yield is variously estimated at from three to five hundred thousand barrels for export and local market. Probably four hundred thousand barrels will be a reasonable estimate, and with the present high prices at home, $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel, they will yield a cash return of close to $1,000,000.

GROWING FRUIT IN N. W.

The expansion in the fruit trade between British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan has increased this year 36 per cent. over last year's shipments. Ninety-six thousand nine hundred and eighty-eight packets were shipped by express this year, totalling 2,351,413 pounds. The rapid increase of immigration into these new provinces means that for years to come the fruit shipments of British Columbia will be constantly increased. Apples are beginning to do very well in Alberta. They grow there with considerably less attention than in the two more easterly provinces. In most cases it is the older settlers who pay most attention to them, as newcomers rarely have time for that at first. Small fruits have done extra well this year. Strawberry plants have increased 100 per cent. in Alberta this season.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Business in green fruits has naturally been of an entirely holiday character. The demand for oranges, grapes, nuts, etc., is reported good.

California navels arrived in good, ripe condition, and had rapid sale, though it was noted that Jamaicas were freely asked for, their better and sweeter condition having received the consumers' approval.

Cranberries are firm and advancing.

Pineapples in good demand.

Lemons are meeting good sale.

Grape fruit is getting to be more freely inquired for this season than in the past and it would appear that the consumer is realizing the value of this excellent fruit. We quote:

Vegetables.

Vegetables are dull. Onions are scarce, particularly the red varieties, which are in good demand at $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel.

Potatoes have a strong undertone and business is good. Outside points are looking for supplies and Quebec markets are being looked up by western dealers. United States crop of potatoes is short and buyers are picking up all they can in Canada. This argues for firmer market and higher prices in the near future. We quote:

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Green Fruits.

Business has been in every way satisfactory. An excellent run of holiday trade maintained itself right up to the last. Of the special lines which were mentioned as arriving for the Christmas trade in our last issue, all have passed off at good prices and little remnants remain on hand. At the present moment trade has dropped, naturally, and a season of dullness is expected until normal conditions prevail. A few changes are reported in values and prices are revised accordingly. Whilst good business has been done during the holiday season, expressions on market do not denote entire satisfaction. Abundant supplies were in evidence, and prices ruled reasonable and steady, but demand did not reach the point for which dealers had looked, and in consequence a good deal of stock has been carried over. There are no changes in values at the present moment. We quote:

IN THE NAME OF CHARITY.

Mr. Isaacs, the Jewish old clothes vendor, kept his clothing store open on the Sabbath. One Sabbath morning a Christian clergyman, who was friendly with members of the community, remonstrated with Mr. Isaacs when passing his establishment. "I am really surprised, Mr. Isaacs," said the cleric, genially, "that a right good Jew such as you should do business on the Sabbath." "And do you call that business?" replied Mr. Isaacs, pointing to a real good suit on one of the dummies in the doorway, marked 17s. "Why, this is charity."

FRESH AND CURED FISH

THE PRESERVATION OF BAIT.

The Canso Cold Storage Company has erected and equipped at Canso, Nova Scotia, a plant that marks a step in advance for the fish business of Nova Scotia.

Bait is an essential to the fisherman who fishes with hook and line, and about all our cod, haddock, pollock and hake are so caught, and the question of a bait supply is the most serious one the line fisherman has to deal with. The perishable character of the article and the uncertain supply combine to make the bait problem difficult to deal with. Salted bait is of little value compared with fresh bait, and the addition of any chemical or preservative is objectionable.

Some eighteen years ago when the business of freezing perishable food products for their preservation was but in its infancy, the Whitmans of Canso undertook to solve the bait problem by freezing the bait in times of plenty and storing it away for a time of scarcity. They put up a small experimental freezer, and it was a success from the start as to its capacity for freezing fish, but a good deal of prejudice against frozen bait on the part of the fishermen had to be overcome before they could be induced to make use of it.

The Dominion Government was induced by the success of the smaller bait freezers to offer to pay half the cost of a larger freezer centrally located, adapted to supply the wants of the banking fleet, and the Whitmans accepted the offer. They put up their building at Canso last year from plans drawn by Herbert Gates, architect, Halifax.

About the middle of last June the erecting engineer came to install the machinery. Foreman pipe fitters came from Boston and Sydney. Other fitters were got nearer home, and by the end of September the plant was in working order.

Cold is produced by the compression and expansion of ammonia gas, the compression of the gas being done by a pair of duplicate compressors of ninety tons refrigerating capacity, actuated by a 120-horsepower cross-compound Corliss engine and the steam is supplied by a 130-horsepower Robb-Mumford boiler, with another of smaller capacity.

There are three essentials to a successful ammonia plant, good compression capacity, good and plenty cooling water, and good insulation, to which might be added a fourth, plenty of pipe in the rooms. The Canso Cold Storage Company's plant has all these and the result is something unique in cold storage plants.

With regard to the temperature, it may be enough to say that it is no trouble to get 13 below zero, running but 7 or 8 hours out of the 24, or to have zero temperature in the rooms after the machinery has been shut down for 16 hours. There are not many cold storage plants that can show such a record, and the result reflects great credit upon the York Manufacturing Company and all concerned.

So much for the building. What about bait? So far about 2,000 barrels of squid, the best of all baits, have been stored in perfect condition, and as the squid season lasts until Christmas, there is a fair prospect of the plant being filled to its full capacity of about 10,000 barrels. If this can be accomplished, it will mean much to the fishermen next Spring, and it will be interesting to see what this splendid, up-to-date plant will do towards solving the "bait question."

HERRING FISHING GOOD.

Herring fishing at Port Arthur this Fall will be the heaviest for some years. Agent Rapsey of the Dominion Fish Company states that the catch of the fishermen doing business with his company will aggregate 75 tons. The fishermen will get in the neighborhood of $2,000 for their fish. Nuttal Bros. this season estimate that their total catch will be about 75 tons also.

LOBSTER PACKERS COMBINE.

A sensation has been caused among the lobster fishermen of Nova Scotia by the formation of a combination of lobster packers, under which the fishermen say prices are put down to the lowest notch, and all outside of the ring are to be boycotted. The Fishermen's Union will fight this, and its agents say they will call on the Government to revoke the Cannery License Law which makes the monopoly possible. This order was passed contrary to the advice of the Lobster Commission of 1898.

ENORMOUS CATCH OF HALIBUT.

The New England Fish Co.'s steamer Kingfisher returned to Vancouver from a 10-days' cruise in northern waters, with 190,000 pounds of halibut, a catch far above the average for this time of year, and only 60,000 below the biggest ever taken by any halibut boat on the Pacific coast. The fish were unusually large. The Kingfisher was only out ten days, during which time she had favorable weather. The catch was made in Dixon entrance.

QUALITY AS A FACTOR.

A good article which sells at a moderate price and is wisely handled usually finds a market. A proof of this is the experience which the various products manufactured by Maconochie Bros. have had on the Canadian market during the past year.

As most people in the grocery trade probably know, the pickles, jams, preserved fish, Worcester sauce, peels and marmalade turned out by Maconochie's factories have a large sale in Great Britain and other parts of the British Empire, and although they have been known to some extent in Canada for years it has only been during the past year that anything like a strenuous effort has been made to push them in this country. The Canadian Grocer understands that the results have been gratifying and in certain respects extraordinary. This is particularly true in regard to candied peels and Worcester sauce.

Maconochie Bros. believe in quality. They believe that quality will, in the long run, win out. They are not like those who pin their faith on price and let quality take care of itself. Price may give a spurt to an article, but it is quality that brings it across the winning line. Adherence to this principle has not only brought them a world-wide trade and a growing market in Canada, but 139 gold medals and first awards besides.

The A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., who represent Maconochie Bros. in Ontario, report that the increase in business in that province has been particularly gratifying, and they only regret that owing to susceptibility to fust it will be impossible to import any further consignments of pickles, the demand for which has far exceeded their expectations, before April.

An interesting factor with regard to Machonochie's products is that the output of canned herrings from their factory in Aberdeenshire is greater than that of all the other British packers combined.

SHOW WINDOW TALK

CHRISTMAS WINDOW DISPLAY COMPETITION.

The Canadian Grocer, for the encouragement of good window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

First Prize $5.00
Second Prize 3.00

and $2.00 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on January 15, 1906, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the pictures, although, of course all pictures, in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

Care should be taken to avoid reflection in the photograph. The best photos are often taken at night.

CONSTRUCTION SUGGESTIONS.

Frequently much of the advantage that might be gained from a good show window is lost by faulty construction. This is particularly true in the smaller stores. In building them the window is only an incident. No particular plans are made for it. The opening may be small and the glass put in two or three panes when a large single one is the only kind that should be used. This is a fault that can only be overcome after the store is built by rebuilding the front, but there are cases where it will pay.

In a town of about 1,500 recently were seen several examples of this poor style of window building.

Not Low Enough.

In one instance the window was too far above the sidewalk. The bottom of the glass was at least three feet from the pavement level. This is a waste of good space. It brings the trim too high also. Think of a stove in such a window. Its top would be about seven feet above the walk—so high that a very poor view is obtained by the passerby. Then with such a high window there is not so much chance of making an extended display of small articles, for the reason that the goods in the front obscure those that are behind. Being almost on a level with the eye of the spectator he cannot see over the articles in front. Thus the depth of the window is in part lost.

View from Above.

The tendency is toward lowering the windows. Some of the newest ones are built down to within six or eight inches of the pavement. This is particularly true with stores that have large articles to show.

This plan of having a low window is especially good when the things to be shown are large. The spectator can then get the right view of them—the view that he should have—from above. With smaller articles this is not so important, but the low window has other advantages. It allows more light to enter in over the top. The window can be of good height and still allow of plenty of space for the transom lights above. This is important in a store that gets most of its light from the front.

Use Discrimination.

Of course it is not expected that a window, say eight feet wide, would be built down close to the walk. This would not be the proper shape, for with a narrow window it is impossible to show large things much anyway, and for the smaller ones such a low window is not necessary.

But twelve to eighteen inches from the walk is not too low for any window. Possibly fifteen to eighteen would be a good level for the windows in a narrow store—a store that was, say, twenty-five feet wide with two windows. The windows would then be probably eight or nine feet in width and the vestibule would take up the remainder of the space. So a height of fifteen inches from the walk would be a good level.

But where the store has a large frontage and the windows are fifteen to twenty feet wide, there is little danger of getting them down too close to the street level, no matter what line of goods is to be shown.

Then if the window is low and is not boxed in the view into the store is not obstructed, even if there is a fair size trim in the window.

These are some of the advantages in having the window down close to the pavement. There is possibly a little more chance of breakage with a low window, but that is hardly worth considering.

Of course the height of the window should not be sacrificed to make it low. With the ordinary window having it closer to the walk will simply mean enlarging the glass surface, as to lower the whole window would bring it too low at the top.

WAS IT NAMED AFTER "SALADA?"

"One of the principal locks in the Panama Canal leading from Lake Bohio to the lower level has been named 'Salada.' Undoubtedly this is the outcome of the enormous advertising of Salada in the United States," remarked a well known advertising man who was looking at a plan of the canal.

THE GREEK CURRANT SITUATION

Hamburger & Co., Patras, Greece, for whom Anderson, Purvis & Co., Toronto, are Canadian agents, have issued the following circular, which will be instructive reading at the present time, when the currant situation is imperfectly known:

"As many misleading reports have been circulated respecting the operations of the syndicate recently formed in Greece for regulating the production of currants and the currant trade abroad, we take the opportunity of giving some information on the subject.

"It is generally acknowledged by all competent persons that between the passing of the law authorizing the syndicate's formation and the opening of the 1905 season far too little time was available for the proper organization of so vast an undertaking, quite apart from the unforeseen difficulties which arose. Nevertheless, within a few weeks the directorate succeeded in getting into working order and in establishing receiving and buying depots in all the centres of Greece prescribed by the law. No one acquainted with Greece could have supposed that by the end of November more than 33,000 to 37,600 tons could have been received and warehoused, and already about 59,000 tons have been withdrawn from the market. Such facts speak for themselves.

"All kinds of reports were spread regarding the size of the crop and exportation, which served not only to place the syndicate in a bad light, but also to weaken still further the waning interest in the article and deter many who at first were inclined to operate.

"The crop was estimated at about 180,000 tons, some placing the figure as high as 188,000 tons. On the other hand the exportation, which on the average of the previous seasons amounted to about 113,000 to 117,500 tons, was screwed down to from 94,000 to 99,000 tons. Now, however, it is becoming evident that the crop amounted to only about 160,000 tons, and that the exportation will reach about 108,000, if not more. Thus there is a difference in favor of the syndicate of no less than 50,000 tons. The syndicate is also making energetic search for new outlets and entering into important negotiations with a view to further extending the internal industries of converting dried currants into syrup and spirit, and fresh currants into wines; industries already well developed. The foregoing will make it clear that success must be prognosticated for this undertaking of such vital importance to the welfare of the state, and that incorrect or pessimistic reports must be attributed to ignorance or to malicious intent."

Vice-Consul Lontos, of Patras, furnishes the following table, which shows the quantity of currants exported from Greece for the crop year of 1904-05 compared with the preceding year:

Country	Crop 1904-5 Tons.	Crop 1903-4 Tons.
United Kingdom	64,591	67,599
United States	20,904	19,058
Canada	1,590	2,141
Australia	6,832	4,904
France	644	4,577
Belgium	447	712
Holland	32,959	26,680
Germany	10,462	6,934
Austria	2,307	1,765
Other countries	283	215
Total	141,019	134,585

The above figures show gross weight, from which a tare of from 12 to 13 per cent. ought to be deducted in order to arrive at net weights. Net weights will thus be found to come up to about 122,500 tons—equal to 260,000,000 pounds—as against 248,000,000 pounds last year, which shows an increase over 1903-4 exports by 6,434 tons (gross weight). This increase is to be attributed to the heavy shipments made in anticipation of advancing prices by the adoption of the newly enacted convention, which, however, is far from being the case so far.

Why a Grocer Should Deal in "Right-kind" Cigars

The impression a smoker gets of your cigar stock is the impression he gets of your grocery stock. If good, all right! If otherwise, well—!

A smoker cannot go away with a good impression of your stock unless you have made it a point to order "right-kind" cigars. What are "right-kind" cigars?—Simply those full-flavored, mellow, delightful aroma-shedding cigars, the kind that can only come from pure thoroughly-matured tobacco, shaped cigar-like by dextrous hands—the Pebble and Pharaoh cigars exactly.

"Right-kind" cigars are even smokers. The "evenness" of the Pebble and Pharaoh cigars is manifested in that "cool sweet smoke," always characteristic of them.

The Pebble and Pharaoh cigars will grace your store. Order 1,000 assorted.

"Principle counts more with me than profit."

THE TERM "PROFIT"—ITS APPLICATION TO TOBACCO

There are a number of Grocers who do not regard tobacco-selling in the light of "profit."

Tobacco yields a greater profit than many lines of groceries. Besides, tobacco sales are not governed by season.

With a reliable tobacco like

T. & B.

there can not only be no doubt about the "profit," but there can be no doubt about the "sales." You see, T. & B. trade is "worked up," because the tobacco has been widely advertised.

No grocer should hesitate about ordering T. & B.

TOBACCOS, CIGARS AND ACCESSORIES

TOBACCO PROFITS.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

How many times an adage such as this is repeated, with little thought save to apply it to the "other" fellow, who is freely designated a fool for missing a chance everybody else saw but himself. Steady, now, let's consider a moment, maybe the tide has risen, and is just at the turn in someone else's history.

How about tobacco trade—"your" tobacco trade—possibly you have not given this department the serious thought it deserves—have kept tobacco because you were asked for it and sent your orders forward, more by "rule of thumb" than keen judgment and common sense.

You would not think of treating your tea department in like manner.

The time has arrived when tobacco must be considered as much a staple as tea, coffee or cocoa. Many a man would prefer to go without either of those beverages than his favorite tobacco. It is a luxury of universal use and must be taken count of.

Now consider a moment, every grocer has his regular working expenses; rent must be paid, the rig must be kept going, heating, lighting, and a hundred-and-one-other charges; and all these to keep the store going for its regular staples. Is it not just here where the tobacco sales would come in and help. None of these charges need be increased one cent. Probably every family you now supply has one or more smokers among its number—why can you not then serve them all with tobacco goods and serve them regularly, instead of occasionally?

Profits on tobacco are good; it is easily handled, it is a trade easily held, and furnishes a regular income, only requiring very ordinary care and attention.

There are three things worth remembering: First, be sure and carry the best goods—that means "good judgment"; second, sell them at the right price—that means "good buying"; third, let the public know it—that means "judicious advertising." Without these you cannot go ahead; with these success is assured. "Taken at the flood leads on to fortune."

TOBACCO BUYING IN CUBA.

Probably the only Canadian cigar manufacturer who makes an annual purchasing trip to Cuba is J. Bruce Payne, of Granby, Quebec. Mr. Payne left recently for Boston, where he takes a boat for Havana. Before leaving Mr. Payne in an interview said that there had been a wonderful change in Cuba since his first trip. Havana has changed from a breeding camp of malaria and yellow fever to a clean, sanitary city.

"Yes," said Mr. Payne in answer to a question, "it certainly pays to go to Cuba to buy from the growers direct, but of course the biggest benefit is in the maintenance of quality. I know that two or three seasons I would not have been able to maintain the quality of my Pharaoh cigar at any price if I had not been on the spot to secure the tobacco. I head for the Manicuragua district as soon as I land on the island, as that is where most of the tobacco I buy is grown. The quality of this tobacco is becoming so well known that some agents in New York claim that pretty nearly everything they have to sell comes from Manicuragua. Another advantage of the yearly trip to Cuba is the keeping in touch with the market. I always keep the tobacco I use in my Pharaoh cigar for a year before working it, so I always have a year's stock ahead. To show how prices have advanced, I could sell the stock of tobacco which I have ageing in my humidors now for about half as much again as I paid for it. Of course I wouldn't do it."

JOINED THE BENEDICTS.

Mr. W. S. Laflamme, of Rose & Laflamme, Montreal, is the subject of the congratulations of his numerous friends in the wholesale grocery and jobbing trade of Montreal this week. The congratulations are more than the usual Christmas kind, for coupled with these is the hearty handshake of his friends on the great and eventful step he has made on leaving the ranks of his fellow bachelors and joining the Society of Benedicts. Mr. Laflamme journeyed to Utica like another Ulysses, and there took unto himself a help-meet for life. Utica, N.Y., was the scene of the marriage of Mr. Laflamme to Miss Fitzsimonds of that city. The Grocer joins heartily and sincerely with his numerous friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Laflamme a long and prosperous life.

Mr. T. Kaiser, Woodbridge, has just completed a thorough over-hauling of his store, and with a splendid new plate glass front that he has just added, it may now be considered one of the finest appointed stores north of Toronto.

WARNING!

BM&Co. TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

GOLDEN RUSSET BRAND

Why Pure Fruit Vinegar Should be Chosen ?

Mr. Retailer, you want your vinegar trade to be permanent, don't you ? You want to have "no-complaint" customers. Commercial acid vinegars are losing ground every day. Steer clear of them.

GOLDEN RUSSET VINEGAR

is the vinegar to consider. It is at the front. Honest methods and honest products in the Wilson factory have raised the quality of vinegars and found their highest attainment in Golden Russet Vinegar.

Order Golden Russet Vinegar and no other.
